Take control of your history

There is a fight brewing against the attempt to re-write history

BY GARY BLEDSOE

(NDG Wire) I want to ask you to come forward and do what you can to help us prevent what might be an incredible miscarriage of justice. A conservative group on the Texas State Board of Education is attempting to re-write history. The proposals would unpalatable to extreme with low regard. What apre-write history in such a manner as to harm not just African-Americans but essentially all school children in the State of Texas. It would harm all school children by teaching falsehoods or refusing to teach truths that are politically conservatives in Texas. This will cause all Texas public school students to be put at a disadvantage with their counterparts in other states when competing on national exams and in many ways make our State be looked at by others

A Black Wall Street living memorial

BY JAMES W. BREEDLOVE (NDG Wire) On April

19, 2010 hundreds of survivors and family members of the victims gathered at the Oklahoma City National Memorial to mark the 15th anniversary of the Oklahoma City bombing. The bombing, a devastating act of domestic terrorism killed 168 people, including 19 children, and injured more than 600 others. Television coverage burned images of the catastrophe into the nation's psyche with chilling photos of bodies being removed from the ruble.

As in previous years, the fifteenth anniversary memorial service began at 09:02 a.m., marking the moment the bomb went off. The somber service included speeches by local, state and federal dignitaries.

Sean Godfrey

(NDG Wire) UT Dallas graduate student Sean Godfrev is on a mission to create something he had difficulty finding when he needed it most: a robust support system for survivors of brain injury.

After he earns his master of science in communication disorders from the School of Behavioral and Brain Sciences, his goal is to establish a research and rehabilitation center that will advocate on behalf of traumatic brain injury (TBI) survivors.

His journey to the communication disorders program began in 1999, when he was riding with two friends in a pickup truck that was involved in an accident. His friends walked away from the wreckage, but Godfrey was not so lucky.

The impact of the accident hurled him through the front windshield. He suffered a traumatic brain injury (TBI), a fracture to the base of his skull and a broken hip and tailbone. He needed surgery to repair a ruptured stomach.

Godrey's recovery was long and arduous. He had to focus not only on healing his broken body, but also on learning how to compensate for the effects of the brain injury, some of which are permanent. He also had to overcome a debilitating case of post-traumatic amnesia, which is partial or total loss of memory, and aphasia, which is the inability to use or understand language.

"I have learned how difficult it can be to overcome a TBI," said Godfrey. "People call it a silent epidemic because if you saw someone who has suffered a TBI, there would be no way to know that he has some serious deficit in communication and language and his cognition isn't at the level it was before the incident."

Godrey is now committed to helping other survivors of brain injury, which is why he chose UT Dallas' nationally ranked communication disorders program.

After graduation, Godrey wants his rehabilitation center to help TBI survivors continuously improve their quality of life and become fully functioning and contributing members of society.

Tiffanie Tilman

In an impressive and eclectic career that spans more than 15 years, Tiffanie Tillman is known worldwide as a trail-blazing and respected figure in the entertainment and broadcasting industries. Tiffanie has a fiery passion for three things: entrepreneurship, journalism and people. After years as a publisher and editor of an entertainment magazine, called Nitelife Magazine, she left the highly visible position to pursue her career in Internet business opportunities. During that time, the magazine and newspaper industry was declining, yet Internet opportunities were exploding. Tiffanie took full advantage of the growing market by building an award-winning online virtual assistant staffing company and a reality-based talk show, called Gripping Conversations.

Gripping Conversations, a talk show that's affectionately known as "No fluff, No bull. Real talk," showcases regular people discussing real life issues involving relationships, politics, culture, social injustices and breaking news. "I like to call it 'pur-

Tiffanie created the show because she felt mainstream media was not discussing topics in ways everyday people wanted to hear them. Jane DeNike

Jane DeNike traces her first fashion influences to the congregation of the Houston church her family attended when she was four years old.

"My family had just moved here from New York and I was fascinated by all the bright colors, bold patterns and beautiful purses the women carried," she said. "I had never seen anything like it. I would look at each woman's wardrobe and think about what I would add to make the outfit better and what hat, scarf or other accessory could really make the look unique and special.

I was a budding stylist before I knew it."

Combining those early experiences in the church pew with the trained eye earned after more than 20 years of working for luxury retailers such as Macy's and San Francisco's Wilkes Bashford, Dallasite DeNike recently opened, Ditto Boutique, an upscale, designer resale shop in the Park Cities area. The store at 4326 Lovers Lane features clothing, jewelry and accessories by top designers Prada, Donna Karan and Chanel, as well as many others.

"Dallas-Fort Worth is ready for a resale shop for luxury items with a quirky, maybe even funky, sensibility," she said. "Many women love designer clothes and wear them frequently, but they may combine them with something inexpensive to make the outfits their own.

"I want to help my customers find those unique clothing items and accessories to really make their wardrobes special and beautiful."

Select pieces and wardrobe staples from less expensive names such as Banana Republic, J Crew and Anthropologie also are welcome on consignment. There's also a separate salon of lower-priced, new items directly from the clothing markets.

"We have shoppers of all ages come to Ditto, whether they are purchasing, browsing or selling items," DeNike said. "We are constantly adding new selections."

New and gently worn items for spring and summer are accepted January through June, while fall and winter items are received July through December.

Chanel sunglasses also are available, but more would be welcome, DeNike said. Designer suits and dresses in smaller sizes also are in demand.

Carrollton-Farmers Branch Superintendent not in compliance

This is in reference to a news story on Channel 11 (KTVT) television station about my comments that the Superintendent of the Carrollton-Farmers Branch Independent School District (C-FB ISD), was NOT in compliance with his signed contract on April 30, 2010 and to date, he still is not.

The superintendent has worked for the C-FB ISD long enough to know that to be a superintendent in this district, one of the major requirements is to be a resident within the boundaries of the C-FB ISD, paying the same school taxes as other residents in the district and feeling the same repercussions (good or bad) because of the superintendent's decisions for the district. There is nothing in the contract that states that living in a motel or a hotel qualifies as a resident in the district.

Like many citizens in the district, I personally like the current superintendent, but a contract, according to the laws of the United States, must be met per the agreement that is signed by all parties involved; and when the agreement is not met by the date on the contract, it is breached, it becomes null and void and it is terminated. Therefore, a new contract must be signed.

Now my questions to the Board of Trustees are these: How is this any different from the Trustee that was voted in by the taxpayers 52% to 48%? Also, the same Board of Trustees has already spent (wasted) nearly a quarter of a million dollars appealing three rulings of a judge stating that the trustees must abide by the vote of the taxpayers and seat the new board member. And how do you tell students that it is okay to keep a contract that has been breached because you are comfortable that one of the parties to the contract has met the "spirit of the contract"; just because the superintendent has good intentions to move to the district?

According to the law of the contract the superintendent must move within the district in 270 days after signing the contract.

It has long been a value in my family; and many Christian households teach that the Word of God makes it plain that the 'road to hell is paved with good intentions' but for one reason or another good intentions doesn't get the job done.

The residents in the district never voted on the superintendent's contract; but we voted for and were relying on our trustees to look out for the best interest of our students and our tax dollars. No one asked the trustees to waste our money and ignore our wishes for are comfortable that one of them to be wise with spendthe parties to the contract ing our tax money.

> As I previously stated on Channel 11, our Board of Trustees' contract with the current superintendent is breached, a new contract must be signed and the superintendent's position should be up for grabs. The citizens of C-FB ISD should seriously consider replacing the trustees that are up for election with individuals that are concerned with doing what is right for the district according to the laws of our land and not the 'spirit of the law'. Some members of the Board of Trustees are not being good role models for our children nor are they keeping their 'oath of office'.

McKinney Bond Package

Dear McKinney Citizens:

On May 8, 2010 the City of McKinney will bring a bond package for you to approve. As we know from the up keep of our own homes, we are always improving our living dwelling so that we are more comfortable but also we want to continue increasing the value of our homes. Due to the economic conditions, we are not placing our homes on the market but we are doing more home improvements. McKinney is the community that we live in and we need to be proactive in sprucing it up like we are doing with our home improvements. This will be a benefit for us as a community as we anticipate the next growth cycle and continue improving our home values.

This bond election allows us the resources to be proactive. In this bond package we have a chance to fix up infrastructure, roads, dams, lakes, and streams.

We also have the opportunity to purchase land while it is low then take advantage of the lower construction costs.

In fact while banks are not lending money, because the city of McKinney has such an impeccable credit rating we are able to receive an incredibly low interest rate and us, as tax payers, will NOT see an increase in our taxes.

I am excited and extremely hopeful about McKinney's future.

Let's all get involved and VOTE YES on May 8th for ALL of the proposed bond initiatives.

Public hearing in Dallas on proposal to end Saturday mail delivery (NDG Wire) The Postal Regulatory Commission announced a public hearing will be scheduled in Dallas on whether the U.S. Postal Service plan to eliminate Saturday delivery should be implemented.

"The Commission has developed a disciplined schedule to ensure a timely, thorough review of the Postal Service's proposal," said Chairman Ruth Y. Goldway.

Persons wishing to be considered for inclusion on a field hearing witness panel may contact the Commission at www.prc.gov, by clicking the "contact PRC" tab or by phoning 202-789-6800.

By law, the Postal Service is required to ask the Commission for an Advisory Opinion in advance of any change in nationwide service. Commission procedures provide for public, on-the-record hearings to analyze and cross-examine the Postal Service's "five-day" proposal and supporting evidence. During the process, mail users and interested members of the public may offer supporting or opposing views, both informally and as part of more formal, technical presentations. The nationwide elimination of Saturday mail delivery service is one of the most significant changes the Postal Service has ever presented to the Commission.

Health

7 ways to keep your brain healthy Expert offers these important tips to avoid cognitive disease

(NDG Wire) The brain is our body's most important organ and we must strive to keep it healthy and active. Studies have shown that regular exercise can not only improve brain function, but also potentially prevent the onset of cognitive diseases such as Alzheimer's, Dementia, and Parkinson's.

Fitness and health expert William Smith, M.S., author of the new book Exercises for Brain Health, offers these strategies for keeping our brain healthy and our mind sharp at any age.

Get plenty of physical exercise. Exercise generates increased blood flow to brain tissue. This increased blood flow generates an enhanced oxygen dense environment that enhances the opportunities for the creation of new brain cells (neurogenesis) to occur. Walking, resistance training, and yoga are good examples. Work on posture. Exercises that target balance and posture are very effective as they demand motor skill coordination. Foam rollers are used for these kind of multitasking exercises.

Keep learning. Research indicates people with higher levels of education are less likely to experience cognitive decline. Lifelong learning and an inquisitive, curious mind can do wonders to maintain mental sharpness. Wash food thoroughly. Parkinson's is a secondary form of dementia. Chemical exposure from pesticides and herbicides is a Parkinson's risk factor. Ask your grocery store produce manager how their vegetables and fruits are produced and harvested.

Reduce stressors. Inflammation is one of the mostly overlooked stressors on the brain. Light therapy, proper nutrition, and quality sleep are ways to combat the effects of a pro-inflammatory body.

Drink plenty of water. The human body is made of 60% water, and the brain 80%. Water is found in important body fluids such as cerebrospinal fluid (CSP). So stay hydrated.

Stay social. Whether as part of a community social group or volunteer organization, social activity is essential for preserving cognitive function. And you can be a help to your friends and neighbors as well through your good works.

Exercises for Brain Health features physical and mental exercises that are specially designed to strengthen both mind and body. Featuring progressively challenging programs and assessments, this book will keep readers motivated along the path to a healthy and active brain.

Breast cancer study shows race discrimination

By Dianne Anderson (NNPA) Something once thought to be just a figment of African-American imagination – racial discrimination at the doctor's office – might get a reality check soon in light of the new numbers.

That's the assessment of Georgetown University researchers, who found that Black women with sufficient health insurance and diagnosed with breast cancer had their treatment delayed twice as long as insured White women.

"We thought having health insurance would even the field and that insured black women would have had the same rate of evaluation as insured White women, but that was not the case in our study," said Heather Hoffman, Ph.D., assistant professor of Epidemiology and Biostatistics at the George Washington University School of Public Health and Health Services.

Looking at 581 women with breast cancer examined between 1997 and 2009, researchers found that delayed treatment was greater for Black women, but at the same rate as uninsured White women, who faced similar delays.

The test area included seven hospitals in the Washington, D.C., and was funded by the National Cancer Institute.

"Black women should be the focus of breast cancer screening outreach and follow-up because they experience greater delays in diagnosis and in treatment than white women, regardless of insurance status," said Dr. Hoffman. "We need to determine what other barriers contribute to diagnosis and treatment delays in insured black women and all uninsured women."

Elizabeth Martin, a "Reach to Recovery" volunteer for American Cancer Society, said the study rings true, especially in her own case, where she had excellent health insurance, but at a young 41 years old, her own diagnostic delay could have cost her life.

Back in 1998, she was told her first mammogram came back normal. A few months later, she felt the three small lumps, and basically brushed off as a Black female problem of fibroid tumors, not to be overly concerned.

"They examined me and told me that African American women have dense breasts and are known to have a lot of fibroids so don't worry about it. At that time I always heeded my doctor's words so I didn't worry about it," she said.

But, as the months went by, the lumps got larger.

Later, she went in for an unrelated checkup and mentioned the lumps again to her doctor, who attributed the increased size of the lumps to water weight gain during her menstrual cycle.

In recent years, several scientific studies indicate that African American women are at risk of more aggressive cancer starting an earlier stage. They are half as likely as White women to have breast cancer, but twice as likely to die from it.

Many months later, she brought up her concerns again with her internist on another visit.

"I said my OB/GYN told me not to worry about it and he looked at me and said, 'No, we're going to worry about it,'" she said. "He sent me to a breast surgeon for a biopsy and the rest is history."

After trailing the state, holding workshops, and listening to women's individual stories, she doesn't believe that her own experience is isolated. And she believes that women must fight for their proper healthcare if they feel that lump.

Today, Martin is the American Cancer Society's Regional Council Chair for the Border Sierra Region, covering San Bernardino, Riverside, San Diego, Imperial Counties. She also goes into churches, wherever invited, to share her story and help other women in the community.

"My journey has empowered me to be my own workers, entrepreneurs and small business owners.

"One in three young Americans has no health insurance now — and the announcements by these health insurers are a major step in the right direction," says Congresswoman Johnson. "I hope other insurance companies will follow suit, and give graduating seniors and uninsured young Americans the peace of mind of an immediate offer of coverage. The law has given companies six months to prepare for the new coverage offer, but the sooner insurance companies provide stability and security to the most uninsured age group in America, the better off these young people will be." advocate. My journey also proves that this article is truthful," she said.

By the end of this year, roughly 40,000 women are projected to die from breast cancer in the United States. At the same time, statistics show that women who catch their cancer early will have a 98 percent chance of living past that critical fiveyear survival window.

"Black women should be the focus of breast cancer screening outreach and follow-up because they experience greater delays in diagnosis and in treatment than white women, regardless of insurance status," said Dr. Hoffman. "We need to determine what other barriers contribute to diagnosis and treatment delays in insured black women and all uninsured women."

Documentarian Mark Birnbaum to capture SLANT 45 Initiative

Award-winning filmmaker offers experience and creativity for service-learning program

(NDG Wire) After a nationwide search, the North Texas Super Bowl XLV Host Committee and Big Thought have announced Mark Birnbaum as the Producer and Director of a documentary film highlighting the SLANT 45 program, which officially kicked off in February. SLANT 45-Service Learning Adventures in North Texas-is the youth education program of the Host Committee. The historic initiative is expected to involve more than 20,000 elementary-age students (grades 3-5) from across the region who will log at least 45,000 service-learning hours tackling projects to better their communities. Birnbaum, who has won several honors including the George Foster Peabody Broadcasting Award and gold medals from film festivals in Berkeley, Chicago, Houston and Charleston, was chosen from several candidates for this historic undertaking.

"I'd been aware of the remarkable work Big Thought was doing in schools for the past few years," Birnbaum said. "The opportunity to make a documentary about this ambitious project is the sort of thing a filmmaker dreams about. The scope will be challenging, but we look forward to revealing the individual stories of kids and communities that SLANT 45 represents.'

The documentary is expected to capture the creativity, imagination, and good hearts of North Texas children as they participate in one of the most ambitious service-learning programs in history.

Birnbaum's films have probed, celebrated and exposed people to places and personalities from all over the globe. With Stop the Presses: The American Newspaper in Peril (slated for nationwide broadcast this year on American Public Television) he offers "an absorbing account that should appeal to anyone concerned with the future of democracy" (Cinematical). In Larry v. Lockney (PBS) he tells "a riveting story of good people on both sides trying to do the right thing for their children and their town" (Houston Chronicle). The Big Buy, about Tom DeLay's rise and fall, "presents its evidence clearly and with a welcome sense of humor" (New York Times) and is "more feisty and fun than a drunken barbecue in Beaumont" (Tallahassee Democrat). SLANT 45 was designed and will be managed by North Texas-based Big Thought (www.bigthough t.org), one of the nation's leading nonprofit organizations focused on improving education through creative learning.

Former Dallas Cowboy Daryl Johnston is chair of SLANT 45. and President George W. Bush and Mrs. Laura Bush are honorary chairs. The program is funded by Bank of America and local philanthropists, Ted and Shannon Skokos.

Before the year is over, Birnbaum will capture children at work on an array of projects-limited only by their imaginations-from blanket drives and community gardens, to murals painted over graffiti, to a neighborhood walking program. He will also document their crafting of reflective artworks that will showcase the lessons learned through their involvement with SLANT 45.

"SLANT 45 is about showcasing the heart, imagination and hard work of thousands of North Texas children. This film will be a powerful testament of SLANT 45's impact on the youth of our region, and our hope is that this program might serve as an inspiration and model for future Super Bowl host cities," said Daryl Johnston.

Time machine broken? Bring the kids to the NTHC for a blast from the past in any of 6 camps (NDG Wire) The time machine at your house may be out of order, but the North Texas History Center (NTHC) specializes in bringing the past to its visitors in fun and engaging ways. Whether your child would like to be a Civil War soldier or become handy at leatherworking, the NTHC has very economical options for some fun this summer. June 9 through Aug. 3, the NTHC will be hosting six summer camps. Each camp will spotlight a different activity, and allow kids and/or adults to learn in a handson environment.

Summer offerings at the NTHC include a Civil War Camp on June 9, Cowboy Night on July 9, Farm Camp on July 13, Archaeology Night July 16, and Leatherworking on July 28th. A Toys and Games morning on August 3 will round out the summer. Toys and Games as well as the Farm Morning are $10 each, all other camps are $25 each.

"Summer should be a time to both relax and learn new skills, so we are offering experiences that allow for both," explained Sarah Hatcher, Education Curator. "Our camps are affordable and fun, with great topics and wonderful instructors. I'm looking forward to them."

Registration materials must be received 10 working days before the camp begins. To register, contact Sarah Hatcher at sarah@northtexashistorycenter.org or (972) 542-9457 ext.102.

McKinney students qualify for state visual arts competition

(NDG Wire) A total of 14 students from McKinney Boyd High School and McKinney High School advanced to the State Visual Arts Scholastic Event (VASE) competition this month.

While at the competition, students had the opportunity to participate in art workshops, portfolio reviews, and college scholarship contests while a jury of accomplished art teachers from around the state judged their submitted competition artwork.

Students who qualified and participated in State VASE from McKinney Boyd High School are Kate Baree, Chris Hernandez, Elizabeth Johnson, David Matthews, Michael Norris, Jessica Sadasivan, Victoria Tracy, and Kyle Welch. Seven of these fine artists received medals for their artwork at state. One of these students, Jessica Sadasivan, received at Gold Seal award for her artwork. This is the highest honor that can be given to a visual art student in the state of Texas. Her art creation will be on exhibit in the Texas State Capital until next November where it will then be placed on exhibit.

Students who qualified and participated in State VASE from McKinney High School are Lydia Abernathy, Tori Newton, Audrey Lafon, Blanca Ramirez, Ethan Wisener, and Hannah Wisener. Tori Newton and Lydia Abernathy received medals for the artwork at State VASE.

"Congratulations to all of our students for a very successful region and state VASE showing," said Roy McKinney Renzenbrink, ISD Director of Fine Arts.

In February, these same students participated in the Region 10 VASE in Plano. At Region VASE, participating students brought artwork created in their art classes to engage in an interview/critique with a certified juror who evaluated their work based on a standard based rubric and their understanding of the processes involved in the development of their artwork. Only academically eligible high school students submitted and only about in grade 9-12 throughout Texas participate in VASE. More than 1,600 entries were 150 were chosen to advance to the state competition.

Collin College students Andrew Kohut, Shirin Tavakoli named 2010 Coca-Cola Scholars

(NDG Wire) Collin College students, Phi Theta Kappa members and Plano residents Andrew Kohut and Shirin Tavakoli were recently selected as 2010 Finalist. Coca-Cola Scholars.

Tavakoli was named a Coca-Cola Bronze Scholar while Kohut is a Coca-Cola

"I was extremely happy to receive the scholarship because I know I am one step closer to furthering my education," Kohut, a sophomore on schedule to graduate this summer with associate degrees in Computer Information Systems and General Studies, said. "Collin College has provided an excellent opportunity for me to excel in my desired field of study and further develop a lifelong network. Receiving the Coca-Cola scholarship helps me to manage my rent, utilities, transportation and book expenses when I transfer to The University of Texas at Dallas."

As a Coca-Cola Scholar, both Kohut and Tavakoli will receive $1,000 scholarships.

"I was honored when learning I was selected as a 2010 Coca-Cola Bronze Scholar. I felt that my hard work and dedication paid off," Tavakoli, a sophomore who plans to transfer to Southern Methodist University, said. "Collin College offers so many academic and leadership opportunities that are available to all students. The support of the college leadership, as well as qualified and outstanding faculty and staff, played a huge role in my academic and leadership accomplishments. I owe my success to the stakeholders of Collin College."

Selection as a Coca-Cola Scholar is based on scores earned in the All-USA Academic Team Competition. The program is sponsored by the Coca-Cola Scholars Foundation and is administered by PTK Honor Society, which is hosting its 92nd annual convention from April 8-10 in Orlando, Fla.

Seventh Annual CityArts Festival moves to Fair Park month earlier to May 7 - 9, the seventh-annual CityArts Festival presented by TXU Energy will feature a diverse mix of festivities for families and art aficionados alike to enjoy against the backdrop of historic Fair Park, a national landmark featuring the world's largest collection of art deco exhibit buildings, art and sculpture. Highlights of the three-day weekend extravaganza include a recordbreaking line-up of more than 250 renowned juried artists at The 500, Inc. Artist Market-Place, more than 50 entertainment acts including headliner Bugs Henderson, free Fair Park museum visits at select times, a Crafters Village, concessions offered by popular North Texas restaurants, plus huge culinary and children's areas.

Free and open to the public, CityArts Festival will run Friday, May 7, from 6 - 10p.m.; Saturday, May 8, from 11 a.m. - 10 p.m.; and Sunday, May 9, from noon - 6 p.m. Indoor and outdoor activities will take place in the Automobile and Centennial Buildings, Court of Honor, Exposition Plaza and the Esplanade at Fair Park (1300 Robert B. Cullum Blvd, Dallas, 75210).

"With all its many great assets, Fair Park is a perfect setting for CityArts Festival, and in fact, it was designed for exactly this kind of event," said David Luther, chairman of Friends of Fair Park. "With ample parking, easy access to DART, its massive size and historic beauty, it's a fitting venue for this increasingly popular and expanding festival to flourish."

The 500, Inc. Artist MarketPlace will almost double in size from last year. The popular juried art fair will showcase fine art and original works by more than 250 renowned Texas and national artists inside the Automobile Building. The artistic talent will include ceramic maker Rose Downs, glass gurus Lyn Foley Lampwork and Eric Mort Art Glass, Elkin Studio

"We are thrilled about the magnitude and assortment of talented artists on board for CityArts Festival," said Dillard Coates, president of The 500, Inc. "Everything from ceramics, pottery and blown glass, to jewelry, leather goods, fine art and largescale pieces including sculptures and metal and wood works, will be on view to buy or just admire. The artists were chosen for their originality and premium quality, and our festival goers will see that."

Offering something for everyone, a variety of indoor and outdoor entertainment will rock Fair Park with more than 50 musical, dance and performing arts groups set to show on multiple stages. Serenading sounds from around the world will range from jazz, blues, pop, R&B and classical rock, to African drumming, Chinese folk and Latin salsa, to retro swing, classical compositions and even kid-friendly acts.

"TXU Energy has been a strong supporter of the CityArts Festival since it began, and we're all looking forward to a weekend of good food, fun and entertainment," said Michael Grasso, chief marketing officer for TXU Energy. "TXU Energy has a long history of supporting the communities we serve, all across Texas. Our involvement with City Arts Festival gives us an ideal opportunity to support the Dallas community and connect with our customers."

The legendary Texasgrown rockin' guitarist Bugs Henderson will perform an outdoor gig Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Fox 4 Stage. Other big-name bands will include The Zydeco Stingrays set for Friday at 8:30 p.m. and the high-energy Latin dance ensemble Havana NRG! headlining Sunday at 4:30 p.m. The Dance Stage will feature moves by the Dallas Black Dance Academy, Anita N. Two Pro Boxing Texas Title Fights feature Dallas boxers Proceeds benefit Dallas Youth Club that built their character (NDG Wire) Two Dallas boxers will compete for their first state professional championship on April 30, 2010 at The Palladium @ Gilley's in Dallas. The boxing line-up of six bout card starts at 7:00 p.m. at 1135 S. Lamar in Dallas. Charles 'The Future' Hatley of Dallas faces Marcos Primera of Asheboro, North Carolina for the super welterweight Texas title. Larry 'Slomoshun' Smith of Dallas faces Eloy Suarez of Mexico in the middleweight Texas contest.

Hatley has a professional record of 10-0 (9 KO's) going into this super welterweight match. "This will be the biggest fight of my career," Hatley said. "I am confident, but there is a lot of pressure having my first pro title fight in my home town."

This is Smith's tenth professional match. He has a pro record of 8-1 (6 KO's). "I love the sport which is why I have been boxing for 21 years," said Smith. "I am excited about the match."

Hatley and Smith, both amateur champions, are being trained by Greg Hatley Sr.; president of Black Gloves Promotions which is promoting the event. The event is sponsored by Hatley Brothers Roofing and Construction. Black Gloves Promotions is donating ten

The Collin Theatre Center Announces 2010-2011 Season

(NDG Wire) The Collin Theatre Center will launch their 2010-2011 season in October with the Southwest Regional Premiere of U.S. Drag, by Gina Gionfriddo and the family-friendly musical You're a Good Man Charlie Brown, Music and Lyrics by Clark Gesner, Andrew Lippa and Michael Mayer. U.S. Drag will be performed October 7-17, 2010 in The John Anthony Theatre and You're a Good Man Charlie Brown will be performed October 12-17, 2010 in The Black Box Theatre. The last show of 2010 will be the odd, whimsical tale, Hello Human Female, written by Matt Lyle in The Black Box Theatre, performances are December 2-12, 2010. Starting the New Year will be the World Premiere of a new musical based on the music of Diane Warren, The Rhythm of the Night, playing March 4-14, 2011, and the 2010-2011 season will close with Paul Slade Smith's hilarious comedy Unnecessary

Farce, playing April 28 -May 8, 2011.

U.S. Drag, winner of the Blackburn Prize as the outstanding play written by a female, is a fascinating treatise on the lure of fame and money in our contemporary culture. The story revolves around Allison and Angela, two intelligent liberal arts graduates who refuse to settle for working for minimum wage. They think that they deserve better than toiling in the basement of Conde Nast, and so they drift around making their living by scamming drinks and "cab fare" from men in bars. They keep their rent cheap by living with Ned, a rich and tightlywound Wall Streeter who lets them live with him so long as they bring home hot girls for him to meet. Angela and Allison are always on the lookout for a quick and easy way to make money, so when James alerts them to the $100,000 reward for the latest Manhattan serial killer,

Garland Civic Theatre to end 2009-2010 season with Funny Girl (NDG Wire) Garland Civic Theatre will end the current season with a production of Funny Girl. Performances are scheduled to run through May 8, 2010 at the Granville Arts Center, 300 North Fifth Street in downtown Garland.

Funny Girl is one of Broadway's most priceless jewels. It tells the story of the rise to fame and romance of the great stage star of comedy, Fannie Brice.

Funny, lively and touching, this musical extravaganza created by Jule Styne, Bob Mearill, and Isobel Lennart sings, dances, and laughs us into a perfectly entertained frenzy of delight. The show is directed by Kyle McClaran.

Call the Arts Center Box Office at 972-205-2790 for tickets. Tickets are $25 on Friday and Saturday evenings and $23 on Thursday evenings and Saturday or Sunday matinees.

There are discounts available for those who are over 59 and under 19. Students over 19. KERA members, and DART riders also can get a discount. Special rates are available for groups of ten or more. There is a service charge added to each ticket.

Samsung Electronics & Metroplex Technology Business Council Seek Disruptive Technologies

(NDG Wire) The Metroplex Technology Business Council (MTBC), through its TechQuest program, is partnering with Samsung to find innovators of disruptive technologies. Samsung is seeking technology companies, university researchers or industry technologists with innovations in several different categories:

• Software & hardware innovations for next generation consumer electronics; intelligent assistance, novel & intuitive user interface, context-awareness, acoustics, real 3D, etc.

• Green & eco-friendly environment; high-efficient low-power solutions, energy harvesting, smart grid, ecofriendly materials, etc.

• Healthy & safe living; ubiquitous healthcare solutions, intelligent home appliances, privacy & security solutions, etc.

• Next generation communications infrastructure; advanced RF, multimode multiband solutions, cloud computing, contents & service convergence, M2M, sensor networks, etc.

"The tech industry is leading the way to economic recovery, and it starts with companies like Samsung, which actively seek new partnerships," said Bill Sproull, MTBC President and CEO. "Disruptive innovations are what drive industry transformation and market creation."

Details about the application and selection process, as well as applications, are available at http://metroplextbc.org/Events/Tech-Quest-Program/Samsung-TechQuest.aspx . Applications will be accepted through mid-June.

Finalists matching Samsung's criteria will meet with local Samsung leaders and representatives from Samsung's headquarters in Korea.

NTTA board approves collection and administrative fee policy

(NDG Wire) Recently the North Texas Tollway Authority (NTTA) Board of Directors approved its new collection and administrative fee policy.

Many initiatives of the new policy have already been implemented such as:

• Reducing the $25 administrative fee on the violation invoice by 67 percent to $8.33 per transaction if the invoice is paid before the invoice is sent to the collection agency

• Allowing all transactions on the NTTA System to be processed through the ZipCash process, providing motorists another opportunity to pay their tolls without any additional fines

• Creating an ombudsman program to ensure consistency and fairness in the NTTA collection process

• Redesigning invoices

to communicate the benefit of prompt payment as well as consequences if the request for payment is ignored

• Streamlining the process used to gather forwarded addresses by communicating directly with the National Change of Address Database

The NTTA will be launching a comprehensive communications program to inform motorists of the NTTA's collection process and the benefits of prompt payment. Furthermore, the NTTA is in the process of developing an incentive program to reward motorists who keep their Toll-

Tag account in good standing and customers who pay their ZipCash invoices on time.

"Our collection process aims to recover tolls and the cost to collect the toll in a cost-effective manner. We've already made many customer-centric enhancements to our current process. Going forward, we are going to focus on communicating the benefits each payment type," said NTTA Executive Director Allen Clemson.

"We appreciate the 90 percent of customers that pay for their toll road usage on-time without the need for additional fines. It's important that we do everything we can to collect from the violators so the paying customers are not subsidiz-

Perhaps the most touching and poignant part of the service was the roll call reading by relatives of the names of each person who died in the blast.

Following the ceremony, many of the family members passed in a solemn procession by the memorial's 168 empty memorial chairs. They paused near a large American elm dubbed "The Survivor Tree" because it withstood the blast 15 years ago.

Under a state law signed this month, the bombing and its aftermath will become a regular part of history classes in Oklahoma's schools. Most of the media reported the Oklahoma City bombing as the deadliest terrorist attack on U.S. soil at that time.

However, another terrorist attack goes virtually unnoticed and unmemorialized. Approximately 106 miles northeast of Oklahoma City during the course of some 18 hours on May 31-June 1, 1921, the city of Tulsa erupted, fueled by a firestorm of terrorism and violence perpetrated by a white mob hell bent on ethnic cleansing.

Entire Black neighborhoods were destroyed; an estimated 300 blacks were killed, more than one thousand homes were burned to the ground, leaving over 9,000 people homeless.

In all, some 40 square blocks were laid to waste including the city's thriving Black commercial Greenwood district. Dubbed the "Negro Wall Street," Greenwood was an economic powerhouse.

The rigid segregation of the time forced Tulsa's Blacks to create their own business district. However, the white Tulsa business owners began to feel resentment. White residents of Tulsa referred to the area north of the Frisco railroad tracks as "Little Africa" and other derogatory names. They were threatened by the success of the African American community and worried that the community might continue to grow.

The thriving "Negro Wall Street" that was giving blacks a sense of independence and self-determination was a festering keg of dynamite. The match that ignited the riot was an alleged assault of a white woman by an African American man that was published in the Tulsa Tribune.

The Greenwood businesses were some of the finest in the country; 21 restaurants, 30 grocery stores, 21 churches, two theaters, banquet halls, recreation facilities, a hospital, two newspapers, a black bus line, schools, libraries, hotels, and professional buildings that housed doctors, lawyers, dentists and realtors.

All were destroyed making a surreal wasteland. The total property loss was estimated at 1.5 million dollars; a staggering amount in 1921.

One observer who visited Tulsa following the conflagration wrote, "in terms of sheer brutality and willful destruction of life and property, this orgy of mayhem and murder stands without parallel in America." Not one white person was ever arrested or charged for the Tulsa Massacre.

The president of the Tulsa chamber of commerce furnished news associations across the country with a press release stating, "...as quickly as possible rehabilitation will take place and reparations made."

But the reality of rehabilitation and restitution never materialized. Tulsa's white leaders secretly plotted to do precisely the opposite of their promises.

A conspiracy of silence evolved, key documents disappeared, and white business and political leaders at the state and federal levels worked feverishly to sweep the massacre beneath the carpet of history.

The Black community of Tulsa attempted to revive Greenwood during the '30s and '40s without the promised help. They were partially successful, but, less than a decade later, dissected by highways, emptied by suburban drift, and rebuffed by officials at every turn, the revival efforts finally succumbed.

All that remains of the magnificent vision and entrepreneurial determination that created "the Negro Wall Street" is a single gentrified block of Greenwood urban-renewal projects, a new university complex, and a new cultural center that houses a jazz museum. As an historical foot note, some historians feel that Adolf Hitler and the Germans based their plan for their "final solution" to the Jewish problem on America's treatment of Blacks between 1914 and 1935.

A fitting monument to honor Black America and its heroic Black martyrs would be to create working replicas of Tulsa's "Black Wall Street" in urban communities across the nation. These dynamic memorials, rising like a phoenix from the ashes, would be a living testament to the African-American men and women who in spite of the blatant inequalities of a separate but equal nation accomplished the unimaginable; transforming their dreams into reality.

Black America it is time to do it again. In fact, it is past time.

be sacrosanct, like the future of the young people of this State. They should be taught the truth and not be taught things so that will act, look, talk or think in a robotic and monolithic way that some may desire.

The African-American and Latino Members of the Texas Education Agency (there are five of them combined) have done a tremendous job in trying to prevent this. However, there are 7 members of the Board who seem intent to follow through with this come hell or high water, and the conservative movement is such to where there are 3 other members who are presented with serious political risks if they buck this anti-truth The Board movement. wants to do things such as: (a) have school children taught about the failures of affirmative action and the Great Society; (b) have students taught about the value of limited government (remember it was the Government that said you had to permit Black children to your schools or let them vote in elections); (c) have the Confederacy taught in a positive light particularly regarding the contributions of Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee; (d) limit teaching and descriptions of former President Thomas Jefferson because of his belief that there needed to be a separation of church and State, (e) teach that gains by racial and ethnic minorities were the result of the Good Graces of whites rather than the civil rights movement; (f) teach that the Texas War of Independence with Mexico led to freedom for all Texans when in fact the two primary reasons the Texans wanted to secede in 1836 was that the Mexican Government prohibited slavery and required that in order to own property you had to be Catholic; (g) not teach about many great and important Black and Hispanic leaders in Texas history while requiring that non-Texans like Phyllis

Schafly be emphasized (she is the conservative who opposed women's rights back in the 1970's); (h) have limited teaching about world geography and objective analyses of circumstances relating to America's largest cites; and (i) even question one's right to vote if you are not sufficiently informed. The list goes on and on, great Black Texans like Hendrick Arnold, Samuel McCullough, Lonnie Smith, Juanita Craft, Maceo Smith and others are not mentioned. Additionally, it limits to early grade teachings such great Americans like Thurgood Marshall. Looking at the proposed curriculum in social studies it would appear Lyndon Baines Johnson must be from another State and that one political party is for whites and the other is for minorities. This is really divisive for our State potentially.

If people can shape and make your history they can define who you are. There is clearly a movement to say that Government doing things they don't like is a bad thing and to try and get our children to agree with them. And they want to change history and negate the positives of the civil rights movement and even brain wash individuals into thinking that when the Government provides remedies for past wrongs such as when affirmative action is engaged or when the Great Society attempts to lift people out of poverty that our children will be taught that these things are wrong in such a manner as to suggest that such teachings are true. Now it is true that people should be entitled to have such positions but our children should not be made to suffer from political idolatry

One of the members of the group of seven is a lawyer Board Member who was reported to have said or suggested that during the first six months of an Obama administration there would be an attack on the United States because of actions by people who Obama [or his people] were engaged with in some way. When the Associated Press confronted her around the November 2, 2008 about this, she indicated there was nothing to correct. We need you to ask the Board to back off and teach truth to our children Teach our children about the good and bad of both parties but don't try to use them as guinea pigs for a large scale brainwashing operation, and teach history in an accurate light and don't belittle the contributions or efforts of African-Americans and Latinos as is presently proposed. The Texas NAACP will be working with the Legislative Black Caucus of Texas and the League of United Latin American Citizens among others to address this issue.

The NTTA currently waives all administrative fees for Toll-Tag customers but will begin charging TollTag customers the ZipCash rate if their account falls into arrears to offset the additional cost of collection when they are billed because their account is not updated," said Clemson.

The NTTA is statutorily required to bill the registered owner of the vehicle when the tolls are not paid at the toll booths. All motorists have a responsibility to update their vehicle registration information with the Texas Department of Motor Vehicles. Updating vehicle registration becomes more important as the NTTA continues its transition to all-electronic toll collection.

Sister Tarpley

"And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert. And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Canciace queen of the Ethiopians, who had charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship," Acts 8:26 & 27. (KJV)

Philip was conducting a meeting; a "revival" is what we would now say in our day and time. And, God was really blessing in the revival; many were being 'saved'' delivered and healed. There was great joy in the revival.

But, in the midst of the revival, the Holy Spirit spoke to Philip and instructed him to immediately leave the revival and go to a different place to speak to this one particular person. Philip was so sensitive to the directive of the Holy Spirit that he left what would be called a Holy-Spirit filled, miraculously healing and deliverance successful revival to speak to another-an Ethiopian eunuch. The result of his trust in and his obedience to How many Christians read that His gra

God was that Philip led the eunuch to faith in Christ and he baptized him.

God's ways of determining where we invest our time and energy often have very little to do with our results. The danger for Christians is to only determine that we are in the center of God's will simply be the success or failure of the events we are involved in. Our plumb line for determining success can only be these: trust in God and obedience to Him. You see, it's not about you, it's not about me, it's all about Him, our God almighty! Christians should do like Philip, immediately respond in trust and obedience to the direction of the Holy Spirit. Ask God to help you hear the Holy Spirit's voice especially when you are troubled and going through your trials. Also, a pilot was experiencing difficulty in landing his plane because of fog; and the airport decided to bring him in by radar. As he began to receive directions from the ground he suddenly remembered a tall pole in the flight path and appealed in panic to the control tower about it. The reply came blunt, "You obey instructions, and we'll take care of obstructions." How many Christians hesitates to trust and obey God's Word because of problems and difficulties that they are facing. If we would only trust and obey God, He is capable of dealing with the problems and difficulties.

Things to Ponder: The shortest distance between a problem and a solution is the distance between your knees and the floor. The one who kneels to God can stand up to anything. God sends miracles everyday. We just have to train our eyes to be aware of them! In God's Holy Word we read that His grace is sufficient to meet every need. This becomes clear when trials come and we pray continually. It is these times that we need to call on Him more, bowing in complete submission on our bending knees. We then become His softened clay ready for God to mold us. Heartaches, tragedies, disappointments and pain are God's (the potter's) tools for our Spiritual gain. Just remember, as Christians whatever trials and hardships we encounter each day only confirms us to His will and His way.

Hello Human Female is an odd and whimsical tale with the message that being full of love, kindness and understanding can make up for pretty much all of our apparent shortcomings. When an online dating service connects Tamela, a guileless 37 year old virgin looking for love, with Dr. Gorn, an evil scientist with ambitions of world domination, things don't go according to plan. Tamela falls instantly in love with Dr. Gorn's henchman, Blork; a simple, misshapen, noodle-armed creation. But, when Tamela takes Blork home to meet her Mother, Blork is quickly sent away on what ultimately becomes a journey of self-discovery. The play follows Blork on his trek, with Tamela hot on his trail as they come across a coterie of eccentric individuals.

The Rhythm of the Night is a World Premiere of a new musical featuring the songs of pop composer Diane Warren. This musical will trace Ms. Warren's Grammy award-winning career in an exciting evening of song and dance; including such pop hits as "Because You Loved Me" (Celine Dione), "I Don't Want to Miss a Thing" (Aerosmith), "How Do I Live?" (LeAnn Rimes), "Un-Break My Heart" (Toni Braxton), and many others.

Unnecessary Farce is a hilarious comedy in the tradition of Lend Me a Tenor and Noises Off. In a cheap motel room, an embezzling mayor is supposed to meet with his female accountant, while in the room next-door, two undercover cops wait to catch the meeting on videotape. But there's some confusion as to who's in which room, who's being videotaped, who's taken the money, who's hired a hit man, and why the accountant keeps taking off her clothes!
