Mr. Edward Joe Bagby, Never To Be Forgotten

1938-2009

BY SHIRLEY DEMUS TARPLEY

"Brother Joe" as Mr. Bagby was affectionally called by his many radio fans; and evidently by thousands of listeners all over the United States; his voice was forever silenced on Friday morning, May 8, 2009 as was reported by the Joe Bagby Morning Show personalities.

The Gospel legend was also known as the spiritual heartbeat of Dallas' Black churches; his inspirational voice, spiritual advice, hope and support had been on Dallas radio for more than 50 years. Mr. Bagby died at a Dallas hospital after a long and brave fight with pulmonary disease.

Known as Godfather of gospel music, Brother Joe also served for several terms as a Dallas County Consta-

Obama Ain't cha Mama!

BY JAMES CLINGMAN

(NNPA) Now that many believe we are living in nirvana, having reached the absolute pinnacle of our society's glory; now that some think we have entered a post-racial era. replete with the all the trappings of idealism, sweetness, and light; now that we have achieved the collective dream of millions of people who thought "they would never live to see the election of a Black President;" and now that we have been inebriated for about 100 days; it's time to sober up.

Having drunk the intoxicating elixir of "change," "equality," "yes we can," and "togetherness," it's time for Black people, especially, to go on a serious coffee binge. As the song once said, "Back to life, back to reality." We still have much work to do among ourselves; we still have to fight for what we want and need; we still

Dallas Voters Rescue Hotel Plans & Plano Voters Make History

BY RUTH FERGUSON

Dallas City Mayor Tom Leppert and South Dallas Community leaders formed Crowe's multimillion-dollar campaign to derail the city's plan to build and own a convention center hotel.

The voters rejected Proposition 1, designed to amend the city charter and prevent city ownership of a convention hotel.

Crowe, the owner of the an alliance to defeat Harlan Hilton Anatole hotel, reportedly spent nearly $5 million to push for passage of Proposition 1. However, Leppert built a coalition with other business leaders who view the potential revenue from conventions as a necessity for the future economic health of Dallas.

Leppert's other key ally in victory was South Dallas.

The www.voteNodallas .com website stressed the job opportunities the hotel would create and touted potential contracts for minority businesses.

Finally grassroot organizations such as R.I.P. Dallas held rallies and other events to push for defeat of this measure. Clay Roby, a member of R.I.P. Dallas said, "This was definitely a win for Dallas and we are proud to have been a part of

Cassandra Gaines

Cassandra Gaines is the founder of The National Soul Food-Cook Off, headquartered in Muskogee, Oklahoma. Launched in February, 2008, The National Soul Food Cook-Off is a local, regional and national competition to showcase the best soul food chefs in communities nationwide and provide a unique family, cultural and entertainment venue. The Cook-Off features good food, fun and an educational component regarding the history of soul food cooking and cooking tips from top chefs.

A renaissance woman with tremendous energy, Cassandra Gaines is a recognized and celebrated tourism executive in the state of Oklahoma. She also holds the positions of Muskogee Civic Center Director; Muskogee Multi-Cultural Tourism Coordinator; and Manager of The Roxy Theater, a historic and beloved Muscogee landmark.

A high-spirited and innovative thinker, Cassandra's vision for The National Soul

Food Cook-Off is to create an event that celebrates the rich African American cultural heritage of soul food and the universal tradition of bringing people together to enjoy good food. The Cook-Off has already generated tremendous interest and excitement, and is quickly becoming an institution.

Cassandra has a history of success in bringing people together. She has been actively involved in tourism in the Northeastern Oklahoma region since 1982. She is a pioneer in the tourism industry's rapidly growing niche market of Heritage Tourism. While working for the Muskogee Department of Convention and Tourism in 1996, Cassandra wrote a proposal to the Oklahoma Historical Society for funding to help promote African American Heritage Tourism Northeastern Oklahoma. After presenting and defending her proposal before Governor Frank Keating, Cassandra was awarded a grant of $50,000 and used these funds to establish the Muskogee Multi-Cultural Tourism Department, which she coordinates.

She continues to study African American History and promote African - American Tourism in the region and nationally. She is also known for developing and presenting outstanding cultural and educational events. Through her unique ability to build relationships, Cassandra's fee waiver negotiations with attending celebrities has resulted in $150,000 in scholarships for over 50 deserving students to attend colleges in Northeastern Oklahoma.

Among her numerous honors and distinctions, Cassandra has been named one of the top 50 Women of the Year in the State of Oklahoma; honored by the Oklahoma Human Rights Commission; received the International African American Culinary Arts Institute Award; appointed State Chairperson for the Thurgood Marshall Foundation; inducted into the Oklahoma Jazz Hall of Fame for her cultural contributions, and has been cited for her significant contributions to Oklahoma tourism by the Governor.

Carleen Brice

Carleen Brice's debut novel Orange Mint and Honey (2008, One World Ballantine) was an Essence "Recommended Read" and a Target "Bookmarked Breakout Book." It was optioned for a movie by Lifetime Television. Terry McMillan said, "Carleen Brice is a fine writer. I have recommended and will continue to recommend Orange Mint and Honey to others."

Carleen's second novel Children of the Waters (One World/Ballantine) will be released July 7 and is available for pre-order now. It tells a story of two sisters separated by prejudice and brought together by love.

Trish Taylor's white ancestry never got in the way of her love for her black ex-husband, or their mixed race son, Will. But when Trish's marriage ends, she returns to her family's Denver, Colorado home to find a sense of identity and connect to her

What she finds there shocks her to the very core: her mother and newborn sister were not killed in a car crash as she was told. In fact, her baby sister, Billie Cousins, is now a grown woman; her grandparents had put her up for adoption, unwilling to raise the child of a black man. Billie, who had no idea she was adopted, wants nothing to do with Trish until a tragedy in Billie's own family forces her to lean on her surprisingly supportive and sympathetic sister. Together they unravel ageold layers of secrets and resentments and navigate a path toward love, healing, and true reconciliation.

Jacquelyn Mitchard author, The Deep End of the Ocean, says "I was exhausted and singing the blues the hour I began Carleen Brice's new novel, Children of the Waters. Five hours later, I'd finished this fresh, free-rein novel about mothers' secrets and children's sorrows and was shouting 'Hurray!'"

Lori Tharps, author of Kinky Gazpacho, says "Carleen Brice manages to explore the difficult, messy and unpleasant details of life with both humor and wisdom. The parallel journeys of sisters, Trish and Billie, will resonate with everyone and anyone who has questioned their identity and place in this world."

New Supreme Court Justice May Have Minimal Influence on Civil Rights

BY ZENITHA PRINCE

(NNPA) The replacement of outgoing Supreme Court Justice David Souter may have little to no impact on the civil rights agenda, political and legal analysts and activists say.

"Really, until the conservative members begin to resign from the court you're not going to see much of a change," said University of Maryland law professor Sherrilyn Ifill.

"Unless," she added, "the person who the president chooses is a young, powerful person, who has the kind of personal story, intense communication skills and intellectual heft to really influence Justice Kennedy, who is usually the swing vote in the court."

As things stand, civil rights issues are usually decided with a 5-4 vote ratio in favor of more conservative sentiments in the court. Justice Souter, who many described as a moderate ideologue, is often aligned with civil rights interests.

"Justice Souter which you could see when you looked at the hearing on the Voting Rights Act last week-in the moderate wing of the court," Ifill said. "He understands the Voting Rights Act, he understands civil rights issues and I'm sure the person President Obama picks will also understand civil rights issues and have the sort of empathy he has talked about."

There are some, however, who say the president's choice should be found further left of Justice Souter's position on the ideology spectrum.

Though a liberal choice will not have much of an effect, said political analyst Ron Walters, Obama should "not give in to Republicans" by choosing a moderate.

"The objective of the administration ought to be to rebuild the liberal constituency of the court just as the Republicans set out to build the conservative base of the court and succeeded," he said. "Democrats have to correct that historic imbalance."

While the president's choice may not stack the odds in their favor, civil rights activists said, it most likely will not make it worse-and that's important given the issues looming on the legal landscape.

NAACP Washington Bureau Chief Hilary Shelton stated, "With the stacking of the Supreme Court with right-wingers ... having someone replace Justice Souter that has a balanced approach to interpreting the law is crucial."

Some of those ongoing issues include the Voting Rights Act, criminal justice, the death penalty, abortion, Fourth Amendment rights as it pertains to government wiretapping and searches and the scope of judicial and executive powers.

"We need to have someone with a proven record of protecting America's civil rights [who is not] an activist judge," Shelton said.

"We want to make sure we get someone who will interpret the law and the Constitution as it was intended in a way that protects all Americans in the context of our life today."

In making the announcement of Justice Souter's retirement, the president said he would consult with members of both parties to find a nominee that has "a sharp and independent mind," that is respectful of the Constitution and understands the limits of the judiciary. And, more importantly, he said, he is seeking someone who has "empathy."

"I will seek someone who understands that justice isn't about some abstract legal theory or footnote in a case book; it is also about how our laws affect the daily realities of people's lives whether they can make a living and care for their families; whether they feel safe in their homes and welcome in their own nation," said the former constitutional law professor.

Diversity should be another deciding factor in the president's choice, many have said. "It would be nice if it was an African American who was in sync with the rest of the African-American community but I don't think he'll do that," Walters said, adding that appointing a Hispanic is "extremely seductive" because of the political cache that decision offers.

"Just looking towards the next election, it would be good for him, in a historic sense, to put the first Hispanic and a woman on the court," the political analyst said. "It would help to solidify the Hispanic vote and the women's vote."

One rumored candidate, New York federal judge Sonia Sotomayor, would satisfy both qualities. Other names in the wind include: Jennifer Granholm, Michigan governor and former attorney general; Elena Kagan, Obama's solicitor general and former dean of Harvard Law School; Leah Ward Sears, chief justice of the Georgia Supreme Court and adjunct professor at Emory University School of Law; Ann Claire Williams, who serves on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit and formerly served as a U.S. District Court judge in Illinois and Pamela S. Karlan, a law professor at Stanford Law School, a leading legal scholar on voting rights and former attorney with the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

Harold Koh, the former dean of Yale Law School, is perhaps the only male candidate whose name has been thrown in the cap.

Most seem to agree that the choice must be female. "We only have one woman on the bench right now and that is not reflective of the country or of the legal profession," Ifill said, adding 50 percent of law school students are women. "The perspective of a woman is very much needed in the court."

$1.25 billion dollars to be designated in payments to qualified Black farmers

(ATLANTA) Last week the Obama Administration Secretary of Agricul-ture Thomas Vilsack made an historic announcement in the Pigford Class Action Lawsuit first filed by Black farmers against the States Agriculture in 1997. The settlement announced on ble in Pct. 8 and he treated everyone with the up-most respect and honor, many testified.

Brother Joe received his own inspiration from his mentor, the late DJ Jimmy Avant who taught him the ropes as a young man growing up in Dallas.

Mr. M.T. Avant, the family spokesman for the Avant family said, "The Avant family want the world to know that based on the history of the Avant and Bagby Brother Joe families, respected the Avant family. From the beginning to the end, at Lincoln High School, to KNOK Radio on Forest Lane (now Dr. Martin L. King Freeway), and finally @ KHVN, Heaven 97."

"Mr. Bagby showed the highest esteem for the Avant's name and legacy, for my deceased father, "Wonder Bread" Jimmy, as he called him, for "Cupcake Dora," my mother (as he called her) and even the special bond that he formed with my late father. They worked together on numerous projects for the community, radio station and the City of Dallas."

"I have many stories that I could tell, but time won't permit them; however, I have known Brother Joe when he was considered a "street" person to now, when he was a great prophet of God.

When he was a Constable and had to evict anyone, especially a single mother with children, he did people find a way to bury their loved ones if they didn't have any money."

"We say to Sister Fay and the Bagby family that you have our deepest sympathy on your great loss; our prayers and love be with you for eternity. Remember the lasting words of Wonder Bread Jimmy and Brother Joe, Put God first and you can be sure of a good outcome!"

Brother Joe leaves to cherish his legacy, his wife of 38 years, Falaine; four daughters, April (Deion); Yolanda; Tonya; and Dunita. Three sons, Joe Jr. (Nicole); Keith and Dwayne; and a host of grandchildren and adopted children. One brother Vanda (Nancy); one sister Miranda (Tommy) and a mother-in-law, Jenell.

140 Days of Opportunity

Education, veteran benefits, landowner rights tops list of passed bills last week

BY TESSA HOWINGTON

With less than 30 days left in the Texas' Legislative Regular Session, both the House and the Senate stayed busy last week in Austin.

On Monday, May 4, the Senate passed Senate Bill (SB) 1443 unanimously. SB 1443 limits how much universities can increase a student's tuition rates after the first four years of a student's starting semester.

Also on Monday, SB 18 was passed. SB 18 defines a land owner's rights when the state seizes land for eminent domain Under SB 18, a land owner must receive offers for purchase of the land from the state in writing. It also requires the state to give at least market value or higher compensation for the land, use the land for public projects, and give the owner first chance to buy back the land if not used after 10

Both bills have been received by the House and referred to the appropriate subcommittees, but, as of Friday, May 8, not scheduled for review yet.

The Senate passed SB 689, by Plano Senator Florence Shapiro, on Tuesday, May 5. SB 689 would require sex offenders to report all their online user names and electronic contact information to the state; the state will form a database using this information and share it will all online social networks. By doing so, the state hopes to keep sexual predators from sexually soliciting anyone, especially children, online.

The bill would also limit or deny internet access to some sex offenders if their convicted crime consisted of any online contact with their victim.

As of Friday, May 8, SB 689 has been received by the House, but has not been scheduled for review or referred to a subcommittee.

Late last week the Senate also passed several bills to the House for review including:

- SB 204 bans trans-fats in restaurants state wide, except for grocery stores, bakeries, and independently owned restaurants.
- SB 2079 requires doctors to confirm or help provide transportation arrangements from a hospital after a patient's discharge.
- SB 2249 makes teachers who work with blind and visually impaired students have more training to better meet their student's needs.

• SB 2397 requires computer repair technicians to report to authorities any child porn found on a computer, network, or a server while doing repairs.

All of these bills passed to the House have not yet been scheduled for review as of Friday, May 8.

Also on Tuesday, Senator Leticia Van De Putte and Representative Chris Turner held a press conference to gain support for Turner's bill, House Bill (HB) 1299. HB 1299 would create a Lotto Game to generate revenue specifically for the Permanent Fund for Veterans Assistance.

The fund helps veterans with financial assistance for starting businesses, acquiring medical needs, transportation for disabled veterans, and, most recently, repairs or replacing homes that have been damaged in natural disasters around the state.

The creation of the game will not cost the state anything, as implementing a new Lotto game has already been scheduled and budgeted for the next year, and will generate an estimated $12 million in annual revenue.

Turner stated, "This fund will not repay the debt we owe our veterans who have served our nation in uniform. We can't put a price tag on the incredible sacrifices these brave men and women have made to protect our freedom. But by passing this bill, we can provide our veterans some help they need and have earned."

HB 1299 passed the House's Licensing and Administrative Subcommittee early last month and is scheduled to be voted on by the entire House early this week.

The House also passed several bills last week to the Senate for review, including:

HB 136 increases enrollment of Pre-K programs in public schools by having the Texas Education Agency oversee research and outreach programs aimed at educating parents about local Pre-K programs.

HB 2685 requires property owners to be given a Landowner's Bill of Rights from the state before having land taken by eminent domain.

HB 3951 makes universities have a staff member in the financial aid office trained in veteran programs to make sure veterans and their families have full knowledge and access to all financial aid and benefit programs available to them.

Dallas Representative Dan Branch's HB 4294; permits schools to use electronic text books in the classroom to help cut school budgets, encourage advanced electronic learning and use of technology.

HB 4765 allows businesses making under $1 million a year to be exempt from the state franchise tax

All of these bills have been received by the Senate and sent to the proper subcommittees for review, but, as of Friday, May 8, none have yet to be scheduled for any action.

This week, both the House and the Senate have subcommittee meetings and floor action scheduled for the entire week.

Lee Dunlap handily won re-election with 55% of the votes.

The turnout was surprisingly low in Plano with only an estimated 6%, however the residents were clearly in a giving mood approving all propositions with 59-70% affirmative votes for the proposals:

Proposition 1: $11,368,000 for public safety improvements.

Proposition 2: $8,000,000 for technology improvements to city facilities.

Proposition 3: $34,754,500 for street improvements.

Proposition 4: $1,750,000 for library facilities.

Proposition 5: $48,650,000 for parks and recreation improvements.

Proposition 6: $24,100,000 for recreation centers.

Proposition 7: repeals $3,500,000 for overpass at Legacy and Preston.

In Garland, although he faced two opponents, Christopher Ott and Dino Quintanilla, Mayor Ronald Jones was easily re-elected for a second term after receiving 85% of the ballots cast. In 2007, Mayor Jones was the first African American elected mayor in Garland, Texas.

In Dallas, Dwaine R. Caraway coasted in his re-election carrying nearly 80% of the vote in the District 4 Dallas City Council election. District 7 is headed to a runoff after incumbent Carolyn R. Davis received the majority of the votes, but not enough to stave off challenger Dallas School Board member Ron Price.

DALLAS COUNTY COMMUNITY COLLEGE DISTRICT

UNCF Gala Benefit Raises Scholarship Funding

(NDG Wire) United College Negro Fund (UNCF) the nation's largest and most effective minority education assistance organization, announced that its 10th annual Red, Hot & Snazzy Benefit raised $25,000 to support scholarships for deserving students. The scholarship funds were raised through a live auction in which personal donations were made by employees and guests of ExxonMobil, American Airlines, AT&T, BNSF Railway, CityView, Frito-Lay, Nationwide Insurance, Sam's Club and the Bernard Harris Foundation and individuals such as State Senator Royce West, Dallas Mayor Tom Leppert and Dallas City Councilman Tennell Atkins. Company contributions were received from Coca-Cola, Kroger and Wachovia. Other net proceeds from this signature event will go towards providing operating support to the five UNCF institutions located in Texas.

"Thanks to the generosity of the companies and individuals that donated to the UNCF Red, Hot & Snazzy Benefit scholarship program, promising students will get the college education they need and that our community needs them to get," said UNCF Dallas Area Development Director Diane Stephenson. These private historically black colleges and universities play a critical role in the future of our communities in Texas and around the country by preparing students to succeed in today's economy.

We are grateful for all those who have invested generously in UNCF and the future leaders of tomorrow."

Students can apply online for the Red, Hot & Snazzy Benefit Gala Scholarship at UNCF.org. The application deadline is May 31, 2009. Scholarships will be awarded to students who demonstrate financial need and academic potential.

Students must have a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher and be enrolled full-time at any four- year U.S. college or university. This year's keynote speaker will be Dr. Jay Horton, professor of internal medicine and endowed chairmen in obesity and diabetes research at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center. Dr. Horton will discuss "Translating Genomic Research into Medical Applications."

Ellyn Daugherty, an internationally known biotechnology teacher and author of "Biotechnology: Science for the New Millennium," also is scheduled to discuss the need to include biotechnology as the fourth year of science at the high school (NDG Wire) Collin level at a pre-conference lege will host the Ninth event on June 24.

Topics covered at the conference, themed "Solutions for What Ails You," will include new uses for old drugs, science of fat, nutrition and obesity, progress in cancer and diabetes research and handson labs.

Also featured will be a competitive poster session for undergraduate and graduate students, door prizes and cash awards.

The conference is open to the public and targets primarily teachers, educators, county extension agents and outreach professionals. General admission is $25 and $15 for students. This fee includes lunch and admittance to Dr. Horton's keynote address, participation in your choice of three breakout sessions and conference materials.

The conference is a collaborative effort of several institutions, including Collin College, STARS University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center, Region 10, Agri Life Extension, Agri Life Research and others.

May is "A Pet's Ticket Home" Month in Garland

(NDG Wire) The City of Garland Animal Services Department is sponsoring "A Pet's Ticket Home" Month in May to increase pet adoptions, as well as pet registrations as required by City Ordinance.

A city tag is your pet's ticket home. If your pet has been impounded we can use the registration tag to contact you and reunite with your pet.

In May, any Garland resident who visits the Tuggle Animal Shelter at 600 Tower Street to register or renew registration for their pet will receive a gift bag (while supplies last) which will include product samples and discount coupons for pet products and services.

The Animal Services Department has also begun a new "adoption sponsorship" program. Individuals may donate money toward the adoption fee of a pet. "Sponsored" pets can be adopted free of charge. The adoption fee for a pet that has not been spayed or neutered is $80. The fee is $35 for a pet that is spayed or neutered.

Anyone who adopts a pet from the shelter during May will also receive a gift bag. The generous donors have and will continue help several animals that were of a less popular variety find homes. The goal for the special emphasis in May and for the sponsored adoptions is to increase our rate of adoption for homeless pets all year round.

If you would like to make a donation of $80 or $35, please make check payable to City of Garland Animal Services P.O. Box 469002 Garland, TX 75046.

Four Ls of Leadership Lead to 100 in 50 Campaign

Paul Quinn to Award Scholarships to First Hundred Students

Paul Quinn President Michael Sorrell.

BY LAKRISHIA ARMOUR

Times may be hard economically, but that isn't stopping Paul Quinn College from helping incoming freshman achieve the school's motto of "greatness one step at a time." As a part of its "100 in 50" campaign, the college is awarding $2000 scholarships to the first 100 students with a 3.0 GPA or better who apply, have committed to attend Paul Quinn for the 2009 school year, and have completed the 2009-2010 FAFSA.

The recruiting blitz will last 50 days, as Paul Quinn actively recruits students who want to excel in leadership as a part of its Fall 2009 student body. As part of the campaign, the benefits of attending a small, liberal arts college will be highlighted.

New college President Michael Sorrell wants these scholarships to reach the more than 8,000 students graduating in Dallas area public schools who have the desire to attend college but want to stay close to home. "We've decided that in these difficult economic times, families need more help, not less, in sending students to college," said Sorrell. "Paul Quinn College is a school that will always strive to do more for our students and their families and these scholarships are an example of this attitude."

As the 34th president of Paul Quinn, Sorrell wants to show the community the "new" Paul Quinn. This includes inventive ideas, embracing new media outlets, and forging a new path. His goal is to create a nationally renowned institution of higher education that produces graduates with enlightened minds and the capacity to lead in the community as well as the global marketplace.

"We do things our way because we're not concerned with how things were done in the past. Now is a great time to be a Quinnite," said Sorrell.

These scholarships and fresh perspective, intertwined with Paul Quinn College's Four Ls of Leadership, are an example of the innovative spirit sweeping the campus.

Leaving Places—and People—Better Than You Found Them

Giving scholarships to the first 100 people recruited in a 50-day recruiting blitz may sound quirky but it's Paul Quinn's way of bettering its future students in the immediate community.

Because of the current economic climate, prospective students are looking at what colleges have to offer them, and considering only the best matches.

Cheryl Smith, an associate professor in the College of Communication, noted that potential future Quinnites are taking a longer and more indepth look into the benefits of the campus.

"In these economic times, finances are an issue. Students are taking a closer look at schools offering incentives and $2,000 is nothing to downplay," said Smith. "People are also working on campus to help [students] get to more opportunities that are out there. This scholarship is only the beginning if you do what you're supposed to do."

Finances are on the forefront of families' minds, especially when it comes to college and these scholarships, along with other academic awards, aim to aid students and ease the financial burden of college.

"People are in bad shape financially and we're doing our part to help. We want to show people the new Paul Quinn College," said Sorrell.

Leading From Where ou Are

Showing the Dallas area and beyond the

"new" Paul Quinn College means making changes and welcoming new practices.

Some of President Sorrell's recent accomplishments at the campus have included revamping the admissions policy, establishing the Presidential Scholars Proty. The type of students the recruiting campaign is designed to attract are those students who want more than to attend class and take notes.

"We want someone who relishes extra attention and wants to be challenged to be a leader. We want students who will be gram, adopting a school-wide business casual dress code and creating partnerships with Home Depot, Balfour Beatty and Habitat for Humanity.

-M. Sorrell

Though there have been some changes on campus, one thing has not changed: students are not exempt from the expectation of high standards. The Paul Quinn student is a leader.

"The Paul Quinn student is...focused on good grades and learning the importance of service," said Smith. "They're being prepared for a leadership role on campus and in society."

Living a Life that Matters

Often, students who are actively recruited for major scholarships are not sought after for their academic excellence, but rather their athletic abilia dominant personality in the community; who want to make a difference in their community," said Sorrell.

Smith adds that attending college at Paul Quinn is deeper than showing up ready to learn. "We say 'greatness one step at a time;' we're going to help you take those steps. Students will get more exposure and with that comes responsibility," she said.

Loving Something More Than You Love Yourself

Changes the college has made along with the financial assistance being offered to students who commit to Paul Quinn serve as an example of the college's dedication to its students. Though the scholarships may seem simple to obtain and readily available, the faculty and staff expect more from its students.

"We will be getting students who want to excel; this is not an easy ride. There is an expectation when you say you are a Quinnite," said Smith. "People expect great things."

Selflessness and a desire to serve the community as a leader are the hallmarks of this institution. As Sorrell puts it: "We demand selflessness from our students." A commitment to education and the completion of a degree is a requirement for the school's student body.

Weaving the school's motto with academic scholarships and a desire to help worthy students blends with the Four Ls of Quinnite Leadership. The "100 in 50" recruiting campaign looks to be an indication of the future of Paul Quinn College.

"Great things are happening at Paul Quinn. These scholarships are a sign of things to come in Dallas," said Smith. "And we have a fearless leader who is trying to make opportunities for our students."

To open doors for students is a goal of the recruiting campaign. A goal of the president of the college along with attracting a higher caliber of student who wants to grow into a servant leader is simple.

"At the end of this," Sorrell said, "we will stand out nationally."

Ministry of Laughter

BY LAKRISHIA ARMOUR

Vickie Carter started her career on a dare. And, 45 minutes later, she had her first standing ovation. But, instead of singing or dancing her way into the audience members' hearts, she made everyone in the room laugh. Hard.

Ms. Vickie—no last name needed—is a comedienne, and a good one. "I do [comedy] because I like the feeling of strangers finding laugher and finding you amusing," she says. "I like having someone to laugh with and making the whole room come together on one accord."

Starting her journey in comedy in 1992, Ms. Vickie has been all over the country, working in New York and L.A., and appearing on NBC and BET, but it wasn't always easy for her to fit in.

"Even when I was out there doing secular comedy, they said 'Ms. Vickie, you don't fit in." she explains. "You know how on BET when they do the comedy snippets and highlights. They literally said to me 'We don't have a place for you. You don't fit in."

In Christian comedy, however, she has found not only a place to call her own, but a ministry as well and has been performing clean and faith-based comedy since 2000. In her ministry, Ms. Vickie seeks to help her female audience find joy in life's tribulations, large and

"So many people are hurting and if they come to a comedy show, they can have a release. God is in control and I'm planting seeds that there's still joy in life," she says. "I want to feed your spirit. It's funny, but there's a message to plant in you a seed and if you take something with you, I did my iob."

Though Ms. Vickie focuses on finding joy in life's pains, at times she is still met with a stonewall from some churches who are skeptical of a Christian comedienne. To remedy this, she shows the audience that she is not the run-of-the-mill comic to get pastors and congregations to open up to her brand of ministry.

"When I go into churches, I have to break down those walls and show them that this is not your stereotypical Black comedy. I show them what I'm about and make sure my show is decent and in order."

In addition to general congregations, Ms. Vickie feels her true ministry is focused on helping women find laughter through the tears as she uses her real-life experiences as material for her jokes.

"I think women need women. I come in, and we tells of a show she did for 300 women who came together and laughed through her entire 30-minute set. "It's amazing, she says. "This is what God called me to do. What ever you're going through, you have to find joy in it."

Some of Ms. Vickie's life experiences would be enough to break anyone down, but she now understands the reason for her trials and how those events created the foundation for her to be able to relate to her audience.

"Now I know why I went have a ball," she says. She through all that I went through. Now I know why I was homeless and a single mother; I was even kicked out of the homeless shelter! But, now I know why. Because in the end, God said, 'You're going to get the glory from this," she says. Through her 16 years in comedy, Ms. Vickie seeks to enrich the lives of those who come to watch her break barriers with laughter. This is her career. This is her call-

How To Protect Your Kids From The Recession

Expert Touts Financial Literacy for the Whole Family

(NDG Wire) Whether you've been hit hard by the recession or not, kids and families may be reeling from the effects of the troubled times without a frame of reference for how tough it is out there.

Arun Abey, former investment strategist and author of the book How Much is Enough, from Greenleaf Book Group Press (www.howmuchis enough.net), believes that parents don't just need to teach their kids about finances, but also about the relationship between money and quality of life.

"It's not easy to say that money isn't everything in a recession, but it isn't," Abey said. "It's so easy to fall into the trap of making sure your kids understand the importance of making a good living financially, but if we leave out the part about lasting fulfillment in their careers, we're shortchanging them. It leads to the avaricious corporate behavior that has been rampant in recent years where people pursue ever more money with no sense of meaning or perspective."

Still, Abey also believes we need to get our kids smart about finances early to help protect them now and in the future. To that end, he offers some basic tips for families who want to get themselves and their kids – smart now about financial matters.

Don't Let Money Be Invisible - Working-class families during the Great Depression routinely set jars out in full view of the family marked 'Rent," "Food," "Clothes," and so on, showing everyone where the money went. Today, money comes out of ATMs, and is spent via debit cards and credit cards - invisible to kids as to where it comes from and where it goes. Kids lack a frame of reference.

Give Kids Responsibility for Spending - One of the ways to get kids smart fast is to present a situation in which real consequences exist, by placing them in charge of their discretionary spending.

If they receive an allowance, then parents should require their kids to map out the money they have coming and also where it goes.

Seeing it on paper or in a computer chart will give them a sense of reality about their money, and also build healthy financial habits they will cling to in later life.

Teach the Power of Investment – A typical method parents use to get kids interested in saving money is to help them set up a savings account. The part that is often left out regard the value of that investment. Parents should spell it out.

For example, a simple investment of $100 in a basic savings account can result in a balance of $12,000 after 20 years. If they invest that same $100 in a bond or a stock that returns merely 6 percent a year, that balance grows to $42,000-plus.

For Love or Money? -Most affluent families try to direct their children toward high earning careers, such as medicine, high finance or business management.

Working class families stress education, and also try to drive their kids toward high-status career paths in an effort to help them get out of the pattern of hopelessness and disillusionment that characterizes many of their childhoods.

However, there is an alternative method, which directs children toward career paths that stress their passions, what they love to do. This path stresses lasting fulfillment over financial rewards, even though, in many cases, people wind up with both by following this path.

Ask your kids what they are passionate about and what they are good at. The answers to those questions will lead to a happier life and a better quality of life than one centered on the pursuit of the almighty dollar.

"I can't think of a more important moment in America's history to teach these lessons," Abey said. "The current financial crisis, caused equally by reckless bankers as well as uninformed consumers, underscores the need for this kind of education and understanding. It's critical not just for mom and dad, but for the whole family, if future generations have a hope of being spared the pitfalls that led to today's crisis."

Arun Abey has had a diverse career as an academic, an entrepreneur and is now a top executive of one of the world's largest firms. He is involved in a number of philanthropic activities and is the author of various international best sellers.

have to agitate, as Frederick Douglass taught us; and we still have to demand our equitable piece of this rock they call the Untied States of America.

As one of my readers wrote, "Now is the time to fight harder than ever; folks singing 'we are one' is no guarantee of equality and equity in U.S. society. A horse and jockey are 'as one,' unified in the goal to succeed and achieve, but certainly are not equals!"

Brother K, in Wichita, Kansas, has it absolutely correct. Now is the time to fight even harder. Why? Because opportunities are available to us now that did not exist prior to Obama's ascension to he throne. That is, if we read the tea leaves correctly.

My good friend, Bob Law, restaurateur in Brooklyn, New York and former national talk radio personality, expressed his exasperation at what seems to be the only reason Black folks wanted Obama to be President: "Black people just wanted to have a Black President. That's all. We had no other agenda than that."

So I ask, "What is our collective agenda now that we have a Black man in the highest office in the land?" Why aren't we beating down the door of the White House demanding some reciprocity for our enthusiastic support of Obama's candidacy and ultimate victory? Every-one else is.

Seems to me we are so enthralled with the symbolism of it all that we have forgotten what politics is really all about: Self interest, in case you need to be reminded. The parties and celebrations were nice, but now it's time for serious work

If we allow these four years to pass without achieving a higher level of collective economic ad-vancement for Black people, we are simply foolish, and we will deserve what we get.

So don't sit back and think that things will change simply because Obama is in office. Don't think he is going to personally take care of your needs.

Obama ain't cha mama; he is the president of a country that is still run, by and large, by white men who have, by their past resistance to change, proven time and again that Black folks will have to fight for everything we get in this country. I think it was Douglass who also said, "We may not get everything we fight for, but we will certainly have to fight for everything we get."

As individuals, we must understand and act upon the fact that things are still about the same for most of us; each of us still has to work for what we want and need.

Collectively, we must form a broad-based coalition and submit a national Black agenda that addresses our needs and desires for this government of ours.

Do you think we can do that without some of us caving in, breaking ranks, and selling out? Do you think we can do that without worrying about who will be the HNIC? I think we can, at least those of us who are conscious and dedicated to the uplift of our people and a secure future for our children.

Please don't fall for the okey-doke again, brothers and sisters. Be more than just happy to have a Black man in the White House. The results of our happiness and euphoria should be something tangible to which we can point and share with children. Brother Obama's children are fairly secure right now; their father and mother are millionaires twice over. They should be just fine. They are "in the house," as we like to say. The question is: "Where are Black people in general?"

Finally, let's go back to the post-racial society charade that some are promoting as a result of Obama's election. An excellent example of how some of us are thinking now is the national pledge campaign that was started after the election. If you have seen the commercial, replete with celebrities, movie stars, athletes, and entertainers, you may have noticed what each of them pledged. (See www.my space.com/presidentialpledge)

Of all the pledges, the one that struck me as strange and out of sync with the others was that of Michael Strahan, former New York Giant football player.

He said, "I pledge to consider myself an Am-erican, not an African-American."

No other person of any of the various ethnic groups featured in the video said they would give up his or her identity; the Black man was the only one who volunteered to do that. Go figure.

As I said, Obama ain't cha mama. Don't sit back and think you will be clothed, fed, employed, educated, sheltered, and included, simply because a Black man sits at the top of the political food chain. Get real and get to work, before we miss another opportunity to build something for ourselves – something that will last far beyond the next four or eight years.

Unemployed Texans Granted Additional UI Benefits Extension

Workforce Commission (TWC) has announced up to 13 additional weeks of federally funded Unemployment Insurance (UI) benefits are available to unemployed Texans.

A provision in the Unemployment Compensation Extension Act provides up to 13 weeks of additional benefits, referred to as Tier II, for Texans who meet eligibility requirements. Because the extended benefits are entirely federally funded, employers will not be charged for any claims paid on this extension to eligible claimants.

Currently, approximate-58,000 Texans have exhausted all previous UI benefits and may be eligible for Tier II extended benefits. TWC mailed letters to these claimants telling them how to apply for this extension.

For claimants who are currently receiving emer-

Tarpley

Two columns ago, I asked. "Who Is Your Enemy?" Once you recognize whom your enemy is then you must know what protection (armor) you will need to win the battles in your life.

The Bible tells us that when David, a young shepherd boy, heard about the challenge from the Philistines to send someone to fight Goliath, their main warrior, who was a giant (over 9 feet tall.) No one in King Saul's army volunteered to fight Goliath, except David, they were afraid, but not David.

Knowing his shield and protector (God), David boldly said, "Who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?" He further said that the Lord that delivered Israel in the past would deliver him out of the hands of Goliath. King Saul said to David, "Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him: for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth." 1 Samuel 17:33. However,
