Deepwater Horizon oil spill steels a president

BY KATHERINE
SAVERS MCGOVERN
NDG SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

On April 20, 2010, the well being drilled by the Deepwater Horizon rig exploded and changed the fortunes of the American Gulf Coast. Detailed timelines have been published which suggest that BP and the Mineral Mines Service/Dept. Of Interior had been aware that the well was exhibiting pressure control problems for several days prior to the explosion. On April 20, 2010 at about 9:30 pm, the gas pressure in the well contributed to an explosion which killed 11 men on the Deepwater Horizon rig and injured many others. That night, the President was notified of the explosion and deaths. A federal command center was established on the Gulf Coast to address the environmental impact, to coordi-

(NDG Wire) The inaugural event of the newly formed Latinos in Architecture Committee, a first-of-its-kind Hispanic networking organization, kicked off with drinks, lively discussions and almost 100 people.

The Latinos in Architecture (LiA) Committee launched last month with the goal of increasing the relationships between Hispanic architects, strengthening the community and inspiring Hispanic students to consider an architecture career. A Happy Hour meet-and-greet served as the group's initial introduction to the Dallas community, which is composed of almost 50% Hispanic resi-

Arnett Lanse Waters

Arnett Lanse Waters is a dynamic financial/wealth speaker who has quickly and strategically risen to the top of the investment industry. At age 24, he created a budget of $30 million to employ and train adults in Suffolk County, Massachusetts. He was also personally selected and oversaw a 25 person team that was responsible for managing the program and its two hundred additional employees.

He was later selected by former Governor Edward J. King to operate a statewide program serving 30,000 individuals and employing a staff of approximately 600 people. Mr. Waters went on to serve as the Executive Director of the Private Industry Council (PIC) and as an aide to former Senior Vice President and Chief Economist of Bank of Boston, Dr. James Howell.

Mr. Waters subsequently shifted from his role in the public service sector and moved into the investment arena at Merrill Lynch. He quickly rose from the ranks of trainee stockbroker and was later named Assistant Vice President of Sales at Merrill Lynch, and later went on to serve as both Assistant Vice President and Vice President of Sales at Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette. Prior to founding his own ventures, he served as Vice President and Senior Vice President of Sales at Shearson, Lehman.

The dramatic increase in rare coins in the 1970s and 1980s convinced Mr. Waters that a value-investing approach existed in the growing marketplace. Therefore, in 1990, he founded Windsor Park Ltd., an international purveyor of high mint state United States gold and silver coins. His recommendations and anticipation of market trends have enabled some clients to receive returns in excess of 17% per year since 1990, which differentiates his performance from that of other private dealers.

Today Windsor Park is the umbrella organization under which its affiliate companies operate: A.L. Waters Capital LLC, a FINRA/SIPC broker dealer company focusing on investment banking and corporate finance; and Port Huron Partners L.P., a Delaware limited partnership organized to buy and sell precious metals, coins, energy funds and securities focused on precious metals.

Mr. Waters served as the Secretary for the Boston Latin School Association. An avid lover of classical music, he also served as Director and Chairman of the Opera Company of Boston—a distinct honor, as he was the first black person to be named Chairman of a major Boston cultural institution. He currently serves as an overseer to The Boston Museum of Science. Mr. Waters retired from playing polo in 2004, where he was a member of the Newport, RI Polo Club.

He also has played at Palm Beach, Aiken, SC and in the Dominican Republic.

Miles Jaye

For nearly a decade he has been a featured artist at the annual Don't Believe the Hype Weekend and this year will be no different as he showcases his many talents at the KKDA 20th anniversary celebration for talk show hosts Maryellen Hicks, Roger B. Brown and Cheryl Smith on Friday, June 25, 8p.m. at Harwood 609 Jazz Restaurant, 609 North Har-

On Saturday, June 26 at 6p.m. he'll be at Cheryl Smith's Don't Believe the Hype Celebrity Bowl-a-thon at USA Bowl and then on Sunday, June 27 he's back at Harwood 609 for a 7 p.m. show.

"I enjoy coming to Dallas," said Jaye, during a recent interview. "I always receive a warm welcome and I'm looking forward to participating in such a beautiful establishment as Harwood 609."

The weekend's activities benefit UNCF, the DFW Association of Black Journalists Urban Journalism Workshop and Sen. Royce West's (D-Dallas) Dr. Emmett J. Conrad Leadership Program, and is sponsored by Off the Bone Barbecue, American Airlines, Clear Channel Outdoor, Coca Cola, Evans Engraving, Black Business Directory, Harwood 609, Ntheknow.com, The Dallas Weekly, TXU Energy, Dallas South News, KKDA-AM, Evolv and Ash Britt Je'Ne Spa.

Miles will be joining several celebrities, including actress Kiki Shepard, comedian David A. Arnold, former Dallas Cowboy Drew Pearson, former Dallas Maverick Derek Harper, and a host of others, including emcee Roland Martin of TV One and CNN.

Like his namesake the legendary trumpeter Miles Davis, Miles is one of music's most gifted, distinctive and dynamic artists. He laid the groundwork for excellence with his three highly acclaimed and successful CDs Miles, Irresistable and Strong on Island Records. He returned to the forefront of music and distinguishes his status as a master songwriter, musician and vocalist with a brilliantly creative CD, Hu- manity, his 7th album and 4th on his independently owned record label, Black Tree Records.

"During my shows in Dallas, I will be sharing songs from my newest CD," he said. "We're going to have a good time with a combination of old and new tunes."

Miles was discovered by R&B singing sensation, Teddy Pendergrass and in 1988 produced the certified gold CD Joy for his mentor.

nate with the state and local governments and the Coast Guard initiated search-and-rescue operations. Between April 21 and April 22, the Administration's focus was anticipatory of the grave risk of a major environmental incident in which the Coast Guard had reported the existence of 700,000 gallons of diesel oil on the Deepwater Horizon rig and the potential release of 8,000 barrels per day of crude oil if the well were to completely blowout. NOAA's Environmental Scientist arrived on scene to coordinate initial trajectory advice for any oil spill with MMS.

On April 22, the Horizon Deepwater rig sank. The President convened a "Principal Level Meeting" and ordered that the United States' government's response to the potential oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico was priority number one. The President's order cleared the way for the federal government to treat this environmental risk as enabling all responding departments to devote every resource needed.

On April 22 and 23, there was no apparent leak, but on April 23 the Coast Guard significantly increased its estimate of a release potential from 8,000 barrels to 64,000 - 110,000 barrels per day of crude oil if the well were completely blown out. All information on the condition of the Deepwater Horizon's blowout preventer valve was sourced from BP's underwater cameras and deep-water ROVs.

As events have played out, the Deepwater Horizon's blowout preventer valve, indeed apparently the entire structure, was not operating as designed and a massive release of crude oil has ensued. The pictures of great streams and pools of crude oil floating on the waters of the Gulf Coast, of large underwater plumes of oil, and of crude oil reaching the marshes and breeding sites of the Louisiana barrier islands and coasts have disgusted and mesmerized the nation and the world. The negative implications to the very existence of the Louisiana fishing industry - in all of its forms - are clearly displayed by the pictures and reports. The increasing impact to the Gulf Coast tourist economy built on the pristine sands and waters is played out daily. The scope of this oil spill catastrophe continues to grow as the oil appears destined to enter into the Loop Current which will lead it around the tip of Florida and along the East Coast to the North Carolina beaches and fishing areas. Not to mention the presence of the hurricane season and its potential to spread the oil exponentially.

President Obama has again stepped forward in a time of crisis with strong, focused leadership. Recognizing that an environmental disaster has rapidly become catastrophic, President Obama has moved forward to mitigate and contain the oil's impact with more than 1,200 federal response vessels in the Gulf Coast, more than 22,000 personnel from various federal agencies acting to protect the wetlands, the birds, sea life, beaches, and for the placement of hundreds of thousands of containment boom and sorbent boom along the Gulf Coast to impede the onslaught of this oil. BP has been ordered to put its contractors to work on these projects.

The responsibility to stop the oil leak rests on BP. President Obama has not left the decision-making concerning how and what BP will do to achieve this goal to BP. The Administration has called on the smartest, most knowledgeable engineers and scientists available, both in the federal sector and in the private sector, to solve this complex problem and to oversee what BP proposes and does. The leak will be stopped and this Administration will necessarily revisit the complicity and arrogance which lead to the approval of deep water drilling in the Gulf of Mexico. This review must address the apparent absence of meaningful review and oversight by MMS in the application and drill process, including BP's proceeding to drill without the command protocol and on hand resources necessary to respond to failure.

The damages to the wetlands and marshes of the Gulf Coast, and the indigenous wildlife, will undoubtedly take many years to overcome, if at all. As yet, the damages to the underwater life due to the volume of oil and the existence of the underwater oil plumes are unknown because we have never faced a catastrophic oil spill which has continued largely unabated for months. . . . assuming that the target date of August for the two relief drilled wells to be completed is met.

One can appreciate the calm, determined focus of President Obama on meeting and responding to the complex, multi-focused challenges created by the collapse of the Deepwater Horizon. This is particularly true in comparison to the literal tantrums displayed by various public officials and political commentators. For example, while understandably intimidated and angered by the scope of the oil spill and its likely damage to the wildlife, fisheries, wetlands, marshes and coasts of Louisiana, Governor Jindal's answers appear to be short term, of uncertain benefit, and very expensive. He has demanded that sand barriers be placed to protect the Louisiana coasts although it is recognized that construction of the barriers would take up to 9 months, would not be likely to withstand a mild hurricane, and would certainly have unknown environmental and other consequences which could be injurious to the Gulf coast.

The unfortunate fact appears to be that Gulf Coast America has lost and is going to lose wetlands, marshes, breeding areas as a result of the Deepwater Horizon oil spill. The capacity to block or skim up the volume of oil being released does not appear to exist - whether the number of vessels and booms placed in the Gulf Coast were tripled or quadrupled. Until the oil spill is stopped, the government's focus for protection of the coast and its valuable resources, both federal and state, must be to mitigate, contain, protect and preserve that which we can. The President has placed unprecedented federal resources to that purpose and has directed that BP step up its contribution of resources to that purpose.

The blame game of politics is in full force and will undoubtedly continue, as will the unceasing news coverage which reminds us all of the terrible consequences of this manmade oil spill. However, we are fortunate to have a President who recognizes the need to exhibit a steely resolve which not only holds BP responsible and demands specific action, but directs the use of all of the resources of the federal government to help the immediate and continuing needs of the citizens of the Gulf Coast so harshly affected by this spill. As the President has said so many times in response to challenges, and we echo - Yes we can!

African Americans at Increased Risk for Stroke

(NDG Wire) When Craig Miller, a 37-year-old Charleston, SC native, arrived at his church one Sunday morning, he had no idea that he would suffer a stroke that day.

“I never could have imagined it. I had just run three miles the morning of the stroke and played golf the day before – I was feeling good,” said Miller, the minister of music at his church. “Now, I know that my high blood pressure and diabetes were major risk factors for stroke.”

Each year, 780,000 Americans suffer a stroke. It is the third leading cause of death and the leading cause of long-term disability in the United States. For African Americans, stroke is more common and more deadly – even in young and middle-aged adults – than for any other ethnic or racial group in the country. In addition, African Americans suffer more severe strokes than white Americans and have a higher incidence of the manageable stroke risk factors, including high blood pressure and cigarette smoking.

Yet many people do not know the symptoms or what to do when they witness someone having a stroke.

“I was playing the organ and felt disoriented. I couldn’t get my left hand to connect with my face as I tried to wipe my forehead,” said Miller. “A member in the congregation noticed that I was acting strange and summoned for help.”

“I’m lucky that my symptoms were recognized as those of a stroke, that someone called 9-1-1 quickly, and that I was treated at an experienced stroke center,” he added.

A stroke occurs when blood flow to the brain is interrupted. Brain cells die when deprived of oxygen and nutrients provided by blood. Because stroke injures the brain, a person having a stroke, may not realize what is happening. But, to a bystander, the signs of a stroke are distinct. According to the National Institutes of Health, symptoms include:

- Sudden numbness or weakness of the face, arm or leg (especially on one side of the body)
- Sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding speech
- Sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes
- Sudden trouble walking, dizziness or loss of balance or coordination
- Sudden severe headache with no known cause.

Prompt treatment can dramatically decrease or even prevent long-term disabilities caused by a stroke. Knowing the symptoms, making note of the time of the first symptoms, and getting to the hospital quickly by calling 9-1-1 can help prevent serious long-term disability.

“The good news is that treatments are available that can save people’s lives and enhance their chances for successful recovery,” said Salina Waddy, M.D., program director at the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke (NINDS). “It is critical that African Americans know that we are at much higher risk for stroke. It also is important that we all know to call 9-1-1 and get to the hospital to receive appropriate medical treatment immediately. Stroke strikes fast; you should too.”

Little Known Facts about The 4th of July

(NDG Wire) July 4 is the 185th day of the year (186th in leap years) in the Gregorian calendar. There are 180 days remaining until the end of the year. The Aphelion, the point in the year when the Earth is farthest from the Sun, occurs around this date.

The Real Independence Day?

The Declaration of Independence was announced on July 4th, though the formal signing didn't occur until August 2nd, and the colonies actually voted to accept it on July 2nd. So you may wonder – what day is the real Independence Day?

John Adams, who first proposed the idea of declaring independence from England, wrote a famous letter to his wife, Abigail, about how he believed July 2nd would be a day that was remembered and celebrated in America for years to come. Apparently everyone else remembered otherwise...

Old Glory

Did you know, that there have been 28 versions of the U.S flag to date, and that the most recent one, designed after Alaska and

Hawaii joined the union, was the result of a school project? Robert Heft was 17 when he came up with the flag design in 1958. He originally got a B- on the project, but when his pattern won the national competition to become the next flag, his teacher raised his grade to an A.

A Patriotic Death?

Three American presidents have died on the fourth of July. Thomas Jefferson and John Adams died on the same day, in 1826. They had been rivals in everything, even about who would live longest. Adams' last words were about his long-time foe: "Thomas Jefferson lives!" In fact, Jefferson had died just five hours earlier, but Adams hadn't gotten the message. James Monroe is the third president to die on July 4th, but he died in 1831.

Tips to avoid summer brain drain for kids of all ages

(NDG Wire) According to the National Summer Learning Association, all kids experience learning losses when they don't engage in educational activities during the summer.

To combat this learning loss, Target and Search Institute, a Minneapolis non-profit, have partnered to provide parents and caring adults with a summer-long series of tips and activities designed to give kids' brains—and bodies—a workout.

The Play + Learn tab, which is updated each week through July, is available on Target's Facebook page: facebook.com/Target.

• Give your books a beach cover-up. Use construction paper, wrapping paper or newspaper pages to create summer covers for your kids' favorite books. Let them add stickers, doodles and their own illustrations. Then take those titles to a beach or pool, where they'll be better protected from the sun, wind and water.

• Why It Matters: Not only are you making books fun and enticing, you're giving your kids a unique way to be creative and artistic, which has all sorts of benefits!

A study of middle and high school students by the U.S. Department of Education shows kids involved in the arts do better on standardized tests, volunteer more and watch fewer hours of TV.

• Create an outdoor book nook. Find a perfect little corner of your yard, deck, or community park to make a cozy secret spot for curling up with some good books. Fill it with picnic blankets, pillows, snacks and a pile of books for your kids to pore over.

• Why It Matters: Kids who read frequently and have easy access to books have been found to be more competent and resilient in risky situations. Plus, one of the simplest ways to help your kids grow up smart and capable is to let them spend plenty of time in nature!

• Read by the light of the moon. Go outside for bedtime stories under the stars with a blanket, a flashlight and a favorite book to share with your kids.

• Why It Matters: Want peace on Earth? Start at home! Exposure to the outdoors helps children develop some serious super powers: observation skills, creativity, and a greater sense of peace and being at one with the world.

• Turn little bits of nature into one-of-a-kind bookmarks. Teach your kids to treat their books with TLC by making special, nature-inspired bookmarks or name labels for each one. Collect leaves, flower petals, sticks and other objects; then laminate the items or paste them on paper.

• Why It Matters: More good news for nature lovers: Kids who spend time outside are better able to endure the stresses of life and effectively deal with adversity. The more they're out in nature, the more they benefit!

All RISD and PISD high schools rank among top 3% in U.S.

(NDG Wire)

Newsweek released its list of America's Best High Schools for 2010 this week, and all four Richardson Independent School District (RISD) high schools, and all three Plano Independent School District (PISD) high schools, are on the list:

• Pearce High School - #255 in U.S.

• Richardson High School - #288 in U.S.

• Berkner High School - #628 in U.S.

• Lake Highlands High School - #639 in U.S.

• Plano West High School - #353

• Plano High School - #582

• Plano East High School - #858

According to the report, the rankings evaluate how hard school staffs work to challenge students with advanced-placement college-level courses and tests. With more than 26,000 high schools in the United States, all RISD and PISD high schools ranked among the top three-percent in the country.

Credit agencies reaffirm AAA bond rating for Richardson

(NDG Wire) The Moody's and Standard and Poor's bond rating agencies have both designated Richardson as a "AAA" community, which is the highest rating assigned by either agency. The rating comes just weeks after City officials met with representatives from Moody's and S&P to review the City's finances and financial outlook.

Richardson has maintained a AAA rating from Standard and Poor's for the past two years, and this is the first reaffirmed Aaa rating from Moody's since it performed its recalibration of ratings last month.

In its rationale, S&P cited Richardson's large economic base, role in the Metroplex as a primary employment center, location of a significant number of technology-based companies, strong residential income and wealth levels and "Strong, tenured, and responsive management;" as reasons for its high rating.

In its opinion, Moody's reported its AAA rating was, "Reflective of a relatively sizable, affluent tax base that derives its value in almost equal proportions between residential and commercial/industrial properties; strong financial management with a demonstrated commitment to maintain financial flexibility; and a manageable debt position."

Among cities which seek bond ratings, Richardson is among the top 6.8% in the nation, and 3.1% in Texas, to hold AAA status. That makes Richardson one of only five cities in Texas to be rated so high, and places the community in the top one-percent when you factor in all cities in the nation.

The AAA designation helps the City attain low interest rates on debt, which will be helpful as the City moves forward later this month to sell bonds. The new debt issuances include $66 million recently approved by voters for a series of community infrastructure and improvement projects.

Richardson successfully weathered the telecom downturn a decade ago. Since then, the City has focused on strategically diversifying its economic development strategy, which has helped during the current downturn. Evidence can be found by the community's relatively strong sales tax figures and consistently strong fiscal ratings from outside examiners.

Prosper launches inaugural Senior Citizen Program

(NDG Wire) Citing the need to provide more activities for members of an aging population, the Town of Prosper is developing a Senior Citizen Program that hopes to address the social, emotional and community needs of older adults, according to the program's administrator Kelly Vanaman, Utility Billing Clerk. Residents 65 years of age and older are welcome to become members or participate in events.

"Seniors are an important constituency for us, and we want to ensure that, to the extent possible, we try to meet their needs by creating programs that keep them engaged in Town activities and provide an outlet for them," she said.

To that end, the Town has already sponsored a "Coffee with the Mayor" event in which some 20 senior citizens were in attendance. Mayor Ray Smith addressed the assembled group at the Town Municipal Chambers.

He entertained a number of questions from the enthusiastic group and met with individuals to address their specific concerns.

Following the Mayor's address, Vanaman spoke about the proposed Senior Citizens Program. She asked participants to fill out a survey of their preferences and asked each to become charter members by filling out a membership form. "We still have many other seniors who are eligible to participate, but were not at the coffee. We'd love for them to come by Town Hall and register," she said.

The next event planned for the program is a potluck picnic to coincide with other Independence Day activities. Set for Monday, July 5 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., the picnic will take place at Main Street Park, 201 S. Main Street just south of the downtown area.

"We're asking seniors to bring a small covered dish to share with others. Since we will not have adequate refrigeration and we're set for an outdoor venue, we're asking people to be mindful of spoilage. And, of course, people should dress appropriately for the hot weather," she said. Additionally, to prepare properly for the picnic, Vanaman is asking those planning to attend to submit an RSVP either by phone or e-mail.

To RSVP for the picnic or to obtain more information on the program, residents should contact Vanaman at 972-569-1004 or kelly\_vanaman@prospertx.gov.

Older Americans are frequent financial swindle victims

(NDG Wire) More than 7.3 million older Americans one out of every five citizens over the age of 65 already have been victimized by a financial swindle, according to a major new Investor Protection Trust (IPT) survey conducted by Infogroup/ORC and released last week to mark World Elder Abuse Awareness Day.

paigned will educate medical professionals about how to spot older Americans who may be particularly vulnerable to financial abuse and then to refer suspected investment fraud involving these at-risk patients to state securities regulators and/or to local Adult Protective Services (APS) professionals. (See more details below.)

sured in such a fashion.

* Almost half of those aged 65 or over (44 percent) got at least two out of four questions wrong about basic investment knowledge.

* About one out of three older Americans (31 percent) says they are vulnerable in one or more ways to potential financial victimization.

of 65, more than a third (36 percent) are very or somewhat worried about being less able to handle money issues over time.

IPT President and CEO Don Blandin said: We now know that a shockingly large number of older Americans are already victims of financial swindles and millions more are in danger of being exploited in such a fashion. Given that front-line medical professionals who deal everyday with older Americans are ideally positioned to spot the impaired mental capacity that can leave seniors vulnerable to financial abuse, our new program seeks to inform doctors, nurses and others about the warning signs of elder investment fraud and financial exploitation. Our goal is to improve the communication among medical professionals, older Americans, adult children and state securities regulators in order to head off financial swindles before the damage is done."

NASAA President and Texas Securities Commissioner Denise Voigt Crawford said, "The success of a Texas pilot program to train medical professionals to identify and report the signs of elder financial abuse to the Texas State Securities Board encouraged NASAA to form partnerships to expand this education and awareness campaign nationwide. We are pleased to have the support of family physicians, adult protective services workers and other caregivers in the effort to detect and fight the persistent problem of elder investment fraud and abuse. Investment fraud against seniors too often goes unreported, but by teaming up with clinicians and APS workers to give voice to the silent victims, state securities regulators will have more information to investigate and prosecute those who financially exploit our nation's seniors."

The survey results underscore the urgent need for a new partnership between the nonprofit Investor Protection Trust, the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA), and the National Adult Protective Services Association (NAPSA) in cooperation with leading U.S. medical associations including the American Academy of Family Physicians, the National Area Health Education Center Organization and the National Association of Geriatric Education Centers. The "Elder Investment Fraud and Financial Exploitation" prevention cam-

Key findings of the IPT survey of 2,022 American adults including 706 adult children with at least one parent aged 65 or older and 590 adults who are aged 65 or older and have children include the following:

* Half of older Americans exhibit one or more of the warning signs of current financial victimization. For example, more than one out of three seniors (37 percent) are currently being pitched by "people (who) are calling me or mailing me asking for money, lotteries, and other schemes," while a much lower 19 percent of adult children believe that their parents are being pres-

* Only 5 percent of adult children in touch with their parents doctors report the healthcare providers ever mention[ing] any concerns about your parents handling of money or relayed any concern from your parent about handling money. However, of that same group, nearly one in five (19 percent) report the health care provider has mentioned concerns about your parents' mental comprehension. Only 2 percent of Americans aged 65 or older say that their healthcare provider has ever asked about "how you are handling money issues or problems."

* Four out of 10 children of parents 65 or older are very or somewhat worried that their parents have already become or will become less able to handle their personal finances over time. "Among those investigate and prosecute those who financially exploit our nation's seniors."

NAPSA Executive Director Kathleen Quinn said, "The National Adult Protective Services Association represents the boots on the ground in the fight against elder abuse. Adult Protective Services professionals are the first responders to elder financial abuse, so they see the devastation these crimes wreak in older persons lives every day. It is imperative that a serious national campaign be launched to end rampant elder financial exploitation and to protect and help vulnerable older victims."

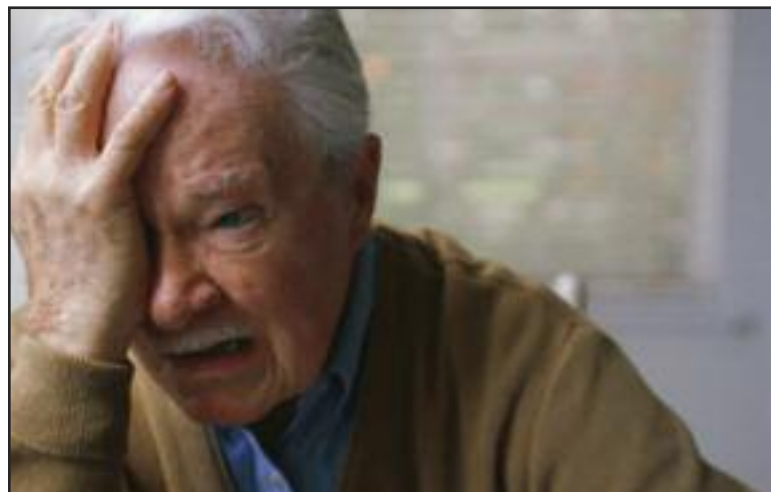

The Elder Investment Fraud and Financial Exploitation project will allow collaborators to work as a team to refer cases to each other, whether it is to report fraud to securities regulators, report abuse to Adult Protective Services (APS) workers, or refer a patient to a clinician for further medical evaluation.

Of particular concern are seniors with mild cognitive impairment who can perform most daily functions, but have trouble or become confused with others, like following their medicine regimen and managing their finances. A 2008 Duke University study found that about 35 percent of the 25 million people over age 71 in the U.S. either have mild cognitive impairment or Alzheimer's disease. This makes them especially vulnerable to financial exploitation, including investment fraud.

State securities regulators and participating medical professionals now have available the project's Clinician's Pocket Guide and an informational brochure for patients/investors. The pocket guide which outlines common red flags, how to ask about a patient's financial capacity and what types of referral may be needed can be used to train medical staff, as well as functioning as a handy reference card. The brochure tells how to protect against elder financial fraud and where to get help.

With a grant from the Investor Protection Trust, the new program was developed by clinicians and geriatrics faculty from the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas. For more information, go to <http://www.investorprotection.org>.

New CRL report: $350 billion of wealth lost in communities of color

Findings highlight need for a strong Wall Street Reform bill

BY CHARLENE CROWELL

As a joint conference committee of Congress works to reconcile two versions of the largest Wall Street financial reform since the 1930s New Deal, a new report from the Center for Responsible Lending (CRL) details how widespread foreclosures have drained an estimated $350 billion from communities of color. These losses are attributable to both foreclosed homes and nearby neighbors whose property values plummeted as a result of neighbors' foreclosures. In many instances, homes near foreclosures leave nearby homeowners owing a mortgage far more than their home is now worth.

This loss of wealth may exceed the total cost paid by the Gulf Coast states in response to Hurricane Katrina.

According to Foreclosures by Race and Ethnicity: the Demographics of a Crisis, for every 100 African-American homeowners, 11 have either lost their homes or at imminent risk of foreclosure. For Latino families, the figures are even worse – 17 of every 100 Latino homeowners are affected by foreclosures.

"Whether we're talking about oil spills or housing catastrophes, it's clear that America needs to invest in prevention, clean-up and recovery," said Mike Calhoun, CRL President. "As Congress works to finish financial reform legislation, the rules on home lending need to get stronger, not weaker.

We need to make sure a foreclosure crisis of this type never happens again; and though so many homes have been lost, it is not too late to prevent more damage."

The report cites lending industry figures showing that the percentage of homes in some stage of foreclosure in the United States is the highest on record and five times the norm. According to CRL's research, from January 2007 through December 2009, 2.5 million foreclosures were completed nationwide. Another 5.7 million borrowers are at least two or more payments behind, leaving them at imminent risk of foreclosure. The vast majority of homes lost to foreclosures were originated from 2005 through 2008 for owner-occupied borrowers, not speculators.

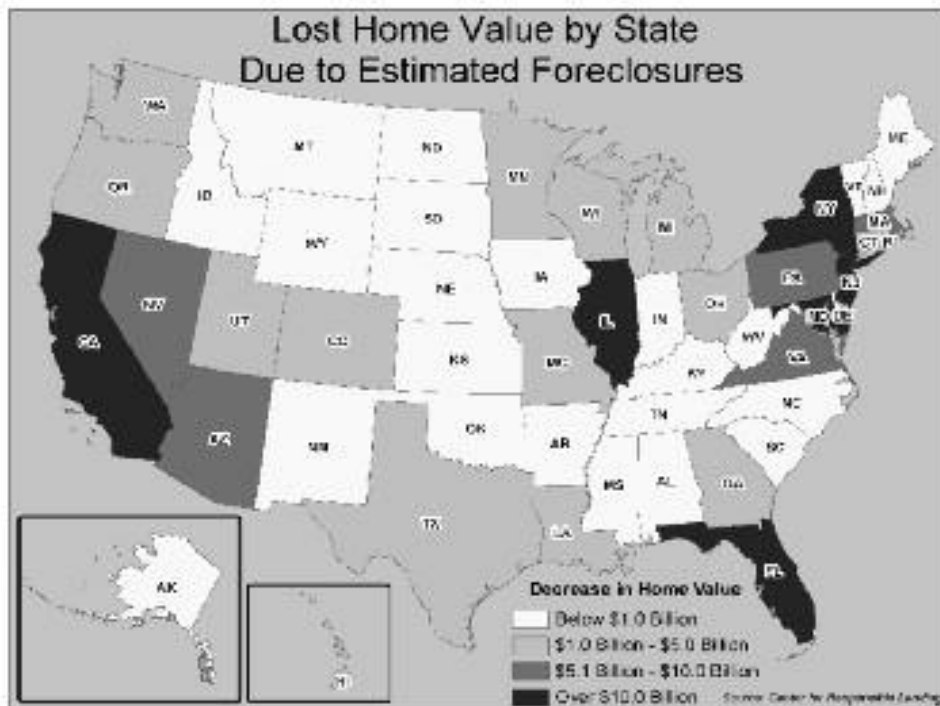

A related June case study by CRL shares the ongoing plight of a 79-year old widow whose only income is social security. When Mrs. Louise Golden's husband, Stanley, suffered a stroke and their income was drowning in medical costs, they decided in 2006 to refinance their long-time home, using the equity in the house to pay off bills. She and her husband thought they were getting a 30-year low fixed-interest loan.

Mr. Golden passed the following year and while his spouse was still grieving, learned that their loan was actually an adjustable rate mortgage or ARM. The payments that began at just over $1,000 a month rose in excess of $1,700 a month – more than her modest monthly income.

Unfortunately, Mrs. Golden's case is repeated throughout much of the nation and the problem is par-

Local leaders call for 500 Dallas residents to join national town meeting on federal budget

(NDG Wire) Local leaders are actively inviting Dallas citizens to participate in a non-partisan, national town meeting, called AmericaSpeaks: Our Budget, Our Economy, to discuss the nation's deficit. Registration for the Saturday, June 26 event is now open at USABudgetDiscussion.org.

A diverse group of local leaders have come together to endorse the effort, including Central Dallas Ministries, Community Council of Greater Dallas, Dallas Black Chamber of Commerce, the Dallas Regional Chamber, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. (Southwest Dallas County Alumnae Chapter), DFW International, League of United Latin American Citizens, League of Women Voters, LULAC-SMU, Oak Cliff Chamber of Commerce, South East Dallas Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Urban League of Greater Dallas, and West Dallas

Community Centers.

"Ordinary citizens will get a chance to engage one another around our country's persistent, threatening fiscal conundrum," said Gerald Britt, vice president of Public Policy & Community Program Development for Central Dallas Ministries. "If you participate in the June 26th national discussion, you get a seat at the table."

AmericaSpeaks: Our Budget, Our Economy is funded by three foundations aiming to shed light on the country's fiscal realities, including the Peter G. Peterson Foundation, John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation and the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

Dallas is one of 19 communities across the country chosen to host a national town meeting, each of which will be linked together by satellite and the Internet for the national discussion. Participants will use keypad polling and groupware technology to register their opinions. The public discussion will produce a set of national priorities that AmericaSpeaks will present to the President and Congress, as well as the National Commission on Fiscal Responsibility and Reform.

The Dallas AmericaSpeaks event will take place in Ballroom C at the Dallas Convention Center from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on June 26. Refreshments, transportation and daycare will be made available to participants.

More information can be found at USABudgetDiscussion.org, including videos, reports on the budget and economy, blog posts, site registration and much more. The site also provides a platform to share ideas at the national and local levels through links to Facebook, Twitter, MySpace and LinkedIn.

TXU Energy Launches Summer Solutions Website

(NDG Wire) Just in time for the hot summer season, TXU Energy, the number one choice for electricity in Texas, has launched an interactive, Web-based suite of tools and resources aimed at helping customers lower their electricity bills through better control of their energy usage.

The website, located at txu.com/billhelp is designed to give consumers the ability to identify common causes of high electricity costs and provides a number of easy-to-use tools to help consumers learn about and manage their energy consumption.

Highlights of the website include:

- An Energy Thieves Calculator that helps identify household electronic devices that continue to draw power even when they're not in use;
- An Energy Savings Guide for indoor and outdoor tips to save energy;
- The TXU Energy Personal Energy Advisor that provides consumers with a list of tools, tips, and projects which can help them reduce usage based on their responses to a few simple questions;

- A section on understanding electricity costs with information to help consumers understand their bills by walking them through how to read their meters and understand their electricity bills;
- Information on TXU Energy AidSM, the company's bill payment assistance program, the largest among electricity providers in the nation;
- Information on TXU Energy's low-income discount program. TXU Energy is the only retail electric provider in Texas that voluntarily provides an approximate 10 percent discount for participating low-income customers. This discount is in addition to the one provided by the State of Texas' System Benefit Fund -- the state directed program for low-income assistance on energy bills;

- Information on the TXU Energy summer moratorium on disconnects for customers in need. A flexible payment plan is available for residential customers designated as low-income, ill or disabled, or who are at least

62 years of age; and

- Access to the company's Average Monthly Billing program that helps smooth out the seasonal highs and lows of customers' electricity bills.

For more information on the new website visit txu.com/billhelp els," said LiA Committee Co-Founder Yesenia M. Blandon, who works in Perkins+Will's Dallas office. "We want to be able to help people who have an interest in architecture but might have limited English skills. We don't want Hispanic people to think this door is closed to them."

"It's wide open, and this committee will help keep it that way," Blandon said.

The committee's success could help prevent projects that fall within predominately Hispanic neighborhoods from being overlooked, said Perkins + Will, Dallas Office, Principal Tom Reisenbichler.

"And when these neighborhoods miss out on projects, students miss the opportunity to witness the impact an architect can have on his or her community," Reisenbichler said. "Maybe they even fail to realize Hispanics can be architects. As a community and an industry, we miss out on some very potentially talented future architects. One of LiA's goal is to create a mentor program to prevent this."

Membership in LiA is open to architects, landscape architects, interior designers, educators, students and the community at large. Blandon and fellow coworker and Co-Founder Jimmy Castellanos, began looking into the group's formation after discovering no other inclusive organization for Hispanic architects existed in the country.

"We started with a simple Facebook page, but the response was overwhelming. It was clear we stumbled upon a dire need," said Blandon, who is earning her architect license. "The first week, 70 people signed up. We received positive responses from all corners. It's almost scary."

Next on LiA's agenda — an introductory event in September tied to Hispanic Heritage Month that will include a nationwide book drive. Dallas high schools will receive the donations. "LiA is in the planning stages to become a American Institute of Architects Dallas Chapter Committee.

How do I get a job in the 'New Economy?'

(NDG Wire) When the media is throwing around terms like "jobless recovery," it's a little easier to understand how a drop in the unemployment rate can actually be bad news.

At least that's how Chris Tidball, career coach and author of Kicked to the Curb (christidball.com), sees it.

"Last May, the Department of Labor Statistics touted the creation of 431,000 new jobs, but behind that nice six-figure number is the fact that about 95 percent of those new jobs were temporary government jobs related to the U.S. Census," Tidball said. "In this instance, the lower unemployment figure is worse news than a higher one, because an increase in government jobs can actually contribute to a higher long-term unemployment rate. The full report by the Labor Department still paints a bleak outlook for jobs, which is why people need to be extra competitive in the job market."

How bad is it? Tidball puts it into historical perspective.

"To put it mildly, we have never lost as many jobs as in the current recession," he said. "Not during the great depression, not after World War II -- never. What's worse is that we have never been confronted with such a perfect storm of government mandates -- such as healthcare and the inevitable cap and trade tax -- that could permanently derail any glimmer of hope."

Tidball said his analysis isn't meant to scare people, but rather, to motivate them.

"I have developed 20 rules that are designed to help people get back to work," he said. "The key thing is to look at getting a job a little differently. Instead of just looking for work, look at your household as a business, and look for revenue opportunities. They may exist in odd jobs, freelance work, starting a new business, getting a part time job to begin with -- or any combination of those

Sister Tarpley

Jesus said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:" John 10:27 (KJV)

This is the time of the year that I attend my maternal (63 years) in Limestone County and my paternal (25 years) in Freestone County family reunions in Mexia, Texas.

There is something very special about going to the farms where my parents (Mr. Lloyd David and Mrs. Cedella Baker Demus) grew up and where they met and married. Both farms are approximately seven miles from the City of Mexia, deep in the country, where the nights are so dark, the stars shine like diamonds and you can't see your hands in front of you.

Both parents lived and grew up in Mexia, but in different counties, yet their homes were only two miles apart, separated by State Hwy 1365. Mom lived south of Hwy 1365 and dad lived north of Hwy 1365.

I love going to the farm often and spending quality time with Uncle Charlie & Aunt Eva Joyce High Baker who are the caretakers of the farm, and learning more about my family history and things about my parents as they were growing up and as a young married couple.

On one particular trip, while my uncle was tending to his cows, I walked to the tabernacle (where the main activities for our reunion are held); while mediating in the still quietness on the farm I heard my uncle calling his cows, rounding them up for the evening.

It was amazing to see the cows, looking up from their grazing, turn toward my uncle and began walking toward him, very slowly and gazing as they were going. These are farm animals that I am talking about; they heard my uncle's voice and they followed him; they depend on my uncle for everything! He feeds them, put them out early every morning to gaze in the pastures and calls them in every evening; he cares for them when they get sick.

How much more should Christians listen to God when He speaks to us? He created us; He has a vested interest in us and our welfare, "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16 (KJV) He personally speaks to us, but only in quiet tones, therefore, your spirit must be calm and you must listen to hear God speak to you.

A story is told of a Muslim man and a Christian man discussing the differences between the Muslim faith and the Christian's faith. When the Christian said that our God speaks to us personally, the Muslim challenged the statement; he said that it can't be proven that God speaks to Christians.

The Christian prayed to himself asking God how he could prove the statement to the Muslim. A few moments later the two men began walking toward two ladies on the other side of the road coming toward them. As they approached, the Christian spoke and made small conversation; he then said to one woman, "You are a nurse, is that correct?" The woman was startled and asked him, "How would you know that? I have never met you before." He replied, "I asked my Father and He told me." The Muslim had his proof.

Many of us do not hear God's voice because we do not believe He speaks or desires to speak to us. In order to hear, we must listen. In order to listen, we must believe that He speaks. Ask God for a listening ear so that others might know that you have a heavenly Father who speaks; then obey and follow Him.

things. Worry less about jobs, and think more about revenue."

Some of his rules are:

- Have a Plan -- We're all guilty of not planning, of not saving for that rainy day, and it may seem too late after you find yourself without a job. Not so. Look at your savings, your retirement accounts and all your resources. Examine the job opportunities available, from the least attractive to the most attractive. Develop your tactics for outreach, and stick to the plan.

- Forget Fear -- Fear can motivate, but it can also paralyze. It can derail a job interview faster than showing up late. Fear can prevent you from executing your plan, and it can prejudice people against you. It forces bad judgments. Remember, things WILL get better.

- Don't Let Up -- Perseverance is one of the keys to success. You will knock on a lot of doors, and you may bloody up your knuckles, but you better your odds with every new door that you knock on.

ticularly severe in Maryland's Prince George's County where in 2009 the number of foreclosure filings, 13,412, accounted for 31 percent of similar filings throughout the state. According to the Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development, one out of every 24 homes in this county was subject to a foreclosure filing last year, compared to the statewide rate of one out of 54.

Additional CRL research shows that without regard to ethnicity or race, 24 states and 38 counties will also experience a loss of over $1 billion each in local house prices and tax bases. Among the 24 affected states, the ten worst facing declines in house values and tax bases are: California, New York, Florida, Illinois, New Jersey, Maryland, Arizona, Massachusetts, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

As an independent research and public policy organization, CRL is among the advocates that are keeping a close eye on the House and Senate Conference Committee on financial reform to ensure that the policy reforms for mortgage lending are preserved in the final bill.

Stronger regulatory oversight, sensible underwriting standards, and removing financial incentives for lenders to steer consumers into higher-cost loans are among the items CRL believes will make a significant difference in preventing similar crises from recurring.

Rep. Barney Frank (MA), House Financial Services Committee, chairs the bi-partisan conference committee and has a target goal of sending a bill to the President by the upcoming Independence holiday, July 4. Three members of the Congressional Black Caucus

(CBC) serve on the full conference committee: Representatives Kendrick Meek (FL), Maxine Waters (CA) and Mel Watt (NC). Four additional CBC members are assigned to sub-committees and specific policy areas. They are: Representatives Bobby Rush (IL), Energy and Commerce; John Conyers (MI), Judiciary; Elijah Cummings (MD) and Edolphus Towns (NY), Small Business.

Consumers interested in commenting on foreclosures or sub-committee deliberations are urged to contact the offices of these Members of
