People In The News

Dr. Claire A. Nelson has been actively engaged in the business of international development for over twenty years, working in the area of project development and management, with a particular focus on private sector development.

The first Jamaican woman to hold a Doctorate degree in an engineering discipline, Dr. Nelson holds Industrial Engineering Degrees from the State University of New York at Buffalo, Purdue University, and a Doctorate in Engineering Management from the George Washington University. She has served on numerous Boards and Committees including: US Department of Commerce US/Caribbean Business Development Council; Advisory Board: DC Caribbean Carnival Association; International Think Tank, Commission on Pan-African Affairs, Office of the Prime Minister of Barbados; Task Force on International Finance, Constituency for Africa; National Democratic Institute/Carter Center Election Observer Mission to the Dominican Republic; Board of Directors, Caribbean Heritage Group, International Committee, National Society of Black Engineers-Alumni Extension; Quality Management Consultants. Her past affiliations include: Executive Committee, Organization of Caribbean Businesspersons; and Montgomery County Committee on Ethnic Affairs.

Residents of Allen who are experiencing gum recession, gum disease or need dental implants or other oral plastic surgery are lucky because board certified periodontist Fatima Robertson, DDS, PA opened for business in March of 2006.

Known for her compassionate, gentle chair-side manner, Dr. Robertson is committed to providing comprehensive, quality care. Her passion for her work and patients shines through in everything she does. "I enjoy getting to know my patients and helping them make an informed decision about dental care," Robertson said.

After receiving her bachelor's degree and DDS simultaneously from the University of Missouri-Kansas City, as part of an accelerated degree program, Dr. Robertson worked as a general dentist for three years. She then returned to the University of Missouri for an advanced education program in Periodontics. According to Dr. Robertson, her experience in general dentistry has enhanced her ability to serve her patients as a periodontist. Patients can rest assured that they are always getting quality, comprehensive care. Dr. Robertson is committed to making certain her patients are aware of any potential problems they may have, whether a crack in a tooth or a spot on the tongue.

"Having a background in general dentistry allows me to broaden my perspective a bit," Dr. Robertson said. "A comprehensive approach to oral health care yields a properly phased treatment plan for the patient."

Venton Jones, a native of Dallas, Texas, graduated from Texas A&M University in 2006 with a B.S. in Community Health. Jones is a volunteer Community Outreach Specialist with Abundant Prosperity, Incorporated. He has been involved in HIV/STD prevention and education since 2004. Using his Public Health background and work in the community, Jones strives to increase prevention and awareness of HIV and other STDs in the African-American community. He currently serves on the Texas HIV/STD Prevention Planning Group. In addition to continuing his work as a health educator, Jones is pursuing his Master in Health Care Administration degree from the University of Texas at Arlington. In his free time, Jones enjoys traveling, cooking, and music.

VNA Needs Volunteers To "Adopt A Grandpa"

VNA Eldercare volunteers assist the homebound elderly with shopping, escorted transportation, and errands, as well as provide needed companionship.

The Visiting Nurse Association's Eldercare program is looking for volunteers to visit the homebound elderly in the Dallas area and provide assistance with shopping, escorted transportation, errands, and other outings.

Volunteer training will be held on September 19 from noon to 12:45 p.m. at the VNA headquarters on 1600 Viceroy Drive, 4th floor, in Dallas. There is no cost to attend the class. Volunteer training can also be scheduled by appointment.

Additional information about Eldercare volunteer training can be obtained by contacting Nancy Jellinek, VNA Eldercare Coordinator, at 214-689-2209 or jellinek@vnatexas.org.

College In Nigeria Slammed For Compulsory HIV Testing

Christianity university says it is trying to promote high moral standards

A private Christian university in Nigeria has come under fire from activists and health officials over its policy of compelling students to undergo HIV and pregnancy tests.

Earlier this year, Covenant University, in Otta, a town near the port city of Lagos, in Ogun State, introduced mandatory testing for new students and those about to graduate, as part of its "Total Man" concept. The university says this ensures that its graduates are not only academically sound but of high moral standard. Pregnant students who cannot prove they are legally married risk suspension or expulsion. Covenant University - rated as the best private tertiary institution in Nigeria last year - implements a strict code of behavior: all students have to live on the campus and, among other restrictions, are not allowed to use mobile phones.

"With the level of moral decadence in our society, the Covenant University is determined to ensure the purity of our graduates before they are released into the society. They must be found worthy both academically and morally," said Chancellor Bishop David Oyedepo, of Living Faith Church, which owns the university.

The controversial policy has caused an outcry among HIV/AIDS activists and government officials, who have warned that the move could be a setback in tackling the country's widespread problem of stigma and discrimination.

Wrap-A-Loc Workshop And Hair Day Happening

Sonya Nandi Gilkey, the Atlanta-based inventor of the revolutionary dual hair-styling tool and lock-wrapping technique is coming to Dallas to teach workshop participants how to turn ordinary locks into beautiful spiral curls!

The Wrap-A-Loc Workshop, sponsored by A Nappy Hair Affair (ANHA), will be held on Sunday, Sept. 23, from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m. at the Ice House Cultural Center, 1004 W. Page St., Dallas, Tex.

The workshop will be followed by ANHA's traditional Hair Day gathering which will be held from 4 p.m. until 8 p.m.

Professional hair stylists who want to offer their clients versatile styling options, have eagerly embraced the Wrap-A-Loc workshops which are conducted internationally. But the easy-to-understand workshops are also popular among regular folks who prefer styling their hair themselves.

The versatile Wrap-A-Loc tool can actually be worn undetectable in the hair as part of the style. When removed, it creates a head full of curls that are ready to be styled.

The Wrap-A-Loc Workshop fee is $75 per person. Products and material will be available for purchase. Register online today at www.wrapaloc.com. Seating limited.

Even if you do not participate in the workshop you will have an opportunity to meet "Sistah Nandi" and purchase her products at the Hair Day gathering. Doors will open for Hair Day at 3:30 p.m. Donation is $3 for youths and adults. "Village-trained" children, free.

Hair Day is a grass roots, social gathering where the emphasis is placed on grooming natural and African-inspired hairstyles. Most of the participants are not stylists but ordinary people who come seeking someone to do their hair and are willing to return the favor. Relaxation, networking and creative expression also take place at these events. While the emphasis is placed on celebrating hair with Africa at its roots, people of all hair textures are welcome to attend and participate!

Hair Day participants bring a potluck dish, snacks or non-alcoholic drink to share at the gathering. If you want to get your hair done, bring your own towel and hair products.

The Wrap-A-Loc Workshop and Hair Day gathering is supported in part by the City of Dallas Office of Cultural Affairs and the Texas Commission on the Arts.

Jena Judge Reduces Charges

College students rally nationwide

A judge has thrown out one of the two charges against the first Black student tried for beating up a White student at Jena High School, saying juveniles cannot be charged with conspiracy in adult court.

But Judge J.P. Mauffray Jr. rejected arguments that, for the same reason, he should throw out the aggravated second-degree battery charge on which Mychal Bell, 17, also was convicted.

The judge's decision means Bell will face at most 15 years in prison rather than 22 1/2 when he is sentenced Sept. 20.

Bell, the first of the students known as the "Jena Six" to go on trial, was 16 when he was charged with attempted murder of the White student, Justin Barker.

The attack on Barker, 18, came amid tense race relations in Jena, a mostly White town of 3,000 in north-central Louisiana where racial tensions have escalated since incidents that started last school year at Jena High. After a Black student sat under a tree on the school campus where White students traditionally congregated, three nooses were hung in the tree. Students accused of placing the nooses were suspended from school for a short period.

The six Black students were accused of beating and kicking Barker on Dec. 4. A motive for the attack was never established. Barker was treated at a hospital emergency room and released after about three hours.

Murder and attempted murder are charges on which a juvenile can be tried as an adult, but aggravated battery is not, defense attorney Bob Noel argued.

He said LaSalle Parish District Attorney Reed Walters used "bait-and-switch" tactics to try Bell as an adult. Bell was indicted on a charge of attempted murder, but Walters changed to the battery charge

Garland Announces Plans For 2007 Neighborhood Summit

The City of Garland's Office of Neighborhood Vitality will host its annual Neighborhood Summit on October 27, 2007. The theme for this year's event is "Built to Last." As Garland nears buildout, ensuring the health and sustainability of neighborhoods is a high priority. What all healthy neighborhoods have in common are residents who connect through shared commitment and shared responsibility. Building social capital is as important as protecting the physical environment of neighborhoods.

"Last year, the Summit kicked off the City's new Strategy for Vital Neighborhoods. This year we want to share what we've learned during this first year of the Strategy and offer Summit attendees the chance to dig deeper into some of those issues," says Felisa Conner, the City's Neighborhood Vitality Manager. "We hope to provide participants with insight and tools in building neighborhoods that last."

The Summit will offer workshops on several topics including managing change in diverse neighborhoods, community policing as a neighborhood management tool, goal

THE TRUTH CLINIC

Remembering The Little Rock Nine

By: James W. Breedlove
School bells tolled across the country last week as students were beckoned to the start of a new school year. Summer vacation was over, and, for most who were heading back to school, the major concerns on that first day were what to wear and locating the right classroom.

But last week was also noteworthy for another reason. September 4 marked the fiftieth anniversary of an ugly chapter in Little Rock history when vicious mobs and the Arkansas National Guard stopped nine black students from answering the school bell at Little Rock Central High.

It is worth reflecting on and remembering the events that precipitated the conflict that terrorized the young black students who were seeking nothing more than to be educated in a neighborhood school that had never before and better facilities than their previous school.

During the spring of 1957, after much legal maneuvering in the courts, the Little Rock School Board adopted a policy for integration that would start at the high school level and gradually include other grades over a period of six years.

There were 517 black students who lived in the Central High district that were eligible to attend Central in the fall. Following extensive interviews with the Superintendent and staff, 17 are selected to initiate integration at Central. Eight of those opted out and decided to remain at the all-black high school.

That left nine students to undertake the arduous and dangerous mission of being the first blacks to attend the all-white Little Rock Central High School. They were: Ernest Green, Elizabeth Eckford, Jefferson Thomas, Terrence Roberts, Carlotta Walls, Minnijean Brown Gloria Ray, Thelma Mothershead, and Melba Pattillo who would later become known as the "Little Rock Nine."

But Arkansas' Governor Orval Faubus had other ideas as he proceeded to orchestrate a series of despicable actions to prevent the nine from entering Central High.

When the black students showed up at Central on September 4, 1957, escorted by two white and two African-American ministers, they were met by a frenzied mob who cursed, jeered, threatened, and screamed, "go home nigger...go back to Africa...go to your own school."

They surged menacingly toward the bewildered and frightened black children. The National Guard, sent by Governor Faubus to keep the students away from Central, held the rabid hecklers back and turned the black students away.

Fifteen-year-old Elizabeth Eckford, who became the face of the Little Rock desegregation crisis said, "That's when I knew that they were just not going to let me go to school...that they were not there to protect me."

She walked alone that first day because her family had no telephone to receive the message on where to meet the others. The chilling images of teen Elizabeth in her crisply starched shirtwaist dress walking through the screaming white mob are gut wrenching. But one photo stands out that characterizes the depth of the enmity being hurled at Elizabeth. It is a photo of a little white girl mimicking her elders as she yells through contorted lips while shaking a menacing fist as Elizabeth walks slowly through the gauntlet of guardsmen.

On September 23, 1957, after more legal skirmishes, the nine black students were escorted into the school through a side door as several thousand protesters milled around in front of the school. When the mob learned the students were inside, it became unruly and several riots broke out. The police, fearful they would be unable to maintain control, took the black students out of the school through a back door.

President Eisenhower finally stepped in and asserted the U.S. government's authority over the defiant Governor Faubus. He sent over one thousand members of the 101st Airborne Division to Little Rock and federalized ten thousand Arkansas National Guards.

The next day, September 25, 1957, under escort by bayonet-wielding federal troops, the "Little Rock Nine" were allowed to enter Central High for the first full day of classes.

The black students thought things would now be relatively quiet. But when the 101st transferred its duties to federalized Guard troops — many of them opposed to integration — a small group of white students were encouraged to begin "a reign of terror" against the black students.

Reacting to the harassment of white students, Minnijean Brown threw a bowl of chili on several of her antagonists in the cafeteria. She was suspended for six days but later had other altercations that led to her being suspended for the remainder of the 1957 school year.

Melba Pattillo, who was beaten, stabbed and cursed by white students, had acid thrown in her eyes. Her alert guard saved her from blindness by throwing water over her face and eyes.

Earnest Green graduated from Central High on May 27, 1958, as he joined 600 seniors in the commencement exercises. Two more of the "Little Rock Nine" would also graduate—Carlotta Walls in 1959 and Jefferson Thomas in 1960.

This story is just one of many that occurred across the nation documenting the tortuous path blacks had to take in an attempt to gain equal educational opportunities following the 1954 Brown decision.

And after fifty years of struggle the task is still not complete.

Authorities: West Africans Used As N.J. Hair-Braiding Slaves

Federal authorities say it's a case of modern-day slavery.

Two men and a woman were charged Thursday with smuggling at least 20 girls and young women from the West African nation of Togo and forcing them to work at hair braiding salons in Newark and East Orange.

The females told investigators that they worked without pay for up to 14 hours a day, six or seven days a week. They said that if they complained or did not follow the rules, they would be beaten. And they were threatened to be sent back to Africa if they objected to working without pay, they said.

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement officials said the workers were brought to the United States through a lottery that lets people from some countries have visas to move to the U.S. Authorities said the alleged victims posed as relatives of lottery winners so they could get into the country.

"This is a case of modern-day slavery," said Tom Manifase, deputy special agent in charge of investigations for the immigration agency's Newark office.

"These women were promised a better life in the U.S. but instead ended up becoming victims of human trafficking."

The suspects, like the females, are Togolese nationals. Lassissi Afolabi, 44, Akouavi Kpade Afolabi, 39, and Dereck Hounakey, 30, all face charges of harboring illegal aliens, which carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison. Kpade Afolabi is also charged with smuggling illegal aliens for financial gains, which can be punished by 10 years in prison.

The Afolabis, who are related, share an East Orange home.

Lassissi Afolabi's 19-year-old son, Akl Afolabi, told the Star-Ledger of Newark for Friday's newspapers that the claims against his mother, aunt and family friend were false and that the women were paid for their work.

"They got everything they needed and it was better than Africa," he said. "Everybody was treated well. We helped them."

He showed a reporter two bedrooms in the family home where he said three of the salon workers lived. Each room had a television and closets that were full of clothing.

The 20 females are now in protective custody where they have access to emergency housing and counseling.

The suspects were ordered held without bail and were due in court again Friday.

Ban Ki-moon Comments On Sudan With U.N. Correspondents

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon speaks with correspondents about Sudan outside the Security Council chamber at U.N. headquarters in New York

SG: Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. I'm glad to see you all again. I returned yesterday night, and I would like to briefly tell you. My visit to the region, to Sudan, Chad and Libya, was very useful and constructive in generating a momentum to bring an early resolution of the situation in Darfur. As you are already aware, we have announced the political negotiation meeting to be held on October 27 in Tripoli, Libya. And I was assured the full support from all the leaders in the region, including Presidents of Sudan, Chad and [Libyan] leader [Muammar] Qaddafi and [other] leaders in the region —

The country's licensing body for universities, the Nigerian University Commission (NUC), last week summoned Covenant University officials to clarify the policy, which the NUC says is unjustified. Professor Ignatius Uvuh, the NUC's deputy executive secretary, stressed that Covenant University was bound to respect national and international conventions on HIV/AIDS, which demand that tests should be voluntary. According to news reports, the Public Relations Officer of the NUC, Alhaji Ibrahim Yakasai, said the issue would be resolved "very soon."

The National Agency for the Control of AIDS (NACA) has also condemned the compulsory testing of students, saying that "in line with the national guideline for HIV/AIDS counseling and testing, the administration of HIV tests should be with the full consent of the individual involved, and it must be voluntary, confidential and offered only as a package that includes pre- and post-test counseling."

Although the University had earlier stated that negative HIV and pregnancy test results were a condition for graduation, its spokesman, Mr. Emmanuel Igbani, said the tests were a routine exercise to determine the health status of students.

"It is not true that anyone who tests positive for HIV/AIDS would be denied the opportunity to graduate, contrary to media reports," Igbani said in a statement issued in response to growing condemnation of the university's policy. Bisi Ladipo-Salami, of BAOBAB, a women's human rights activist group, described the compulsory testing as a violation of the students' rights, and maintained that there was no law prohibiting HIV-positive and/or pregnant students from graduating.

"We believe that the fundamental rights of all Nigerians, irrespective of religious affiliation, are non-negotiable, and demand an end to the infringement on the rights of the young people under any guise," she said. Princess Olufemi-Kayode, Executive Director of advocacy group Media Concern for Women and Children, commended Covenant University for its efforts to ensure a high moral standard among its students.

However, she added that there was a need for better understanding of the human rights perspective on HIV/AIDS tests, because "the virus can be contracted through various means other than sex, which seems to be emphasis of the university." Notwithstanding these criticisms, the chancellor believed that the students should be guided to protect them from possible HIV infection or unintended pregnancy because in the past some students had been caught engaging in "reprehensible sexual activities."

"It is a very bad situation that requires every possible approach to ensure that we produce the kind of graduates that can guarantee a better future for this country," he said.

before trial, as he did Sept. 4 with the charges against two more students, Carwin Jones and Theo Shaw.

But Mauffray agreed with Walters that, once a case against a juvenile is in adult court, reducing the charge did not automatically return the case to juvenile court.

Walters quoted state law: "The court exercising criminal jurisdiction shall retain jurisdiction over the child's case, even though he pleads guilty to or is convicted of a lesser included offense."

Bell's attorneys said they would appeal that and another rejected request to return the case to juvenile court. Walters said he would appeal the conspiracy ruling.

Bell's attorneys also argued that the convictions should be thrown out because there was no evidence of conspiracy or of the dangerous weapon required for an aggravated battery charge. Walters said the weapon was shoes. Louis Scott, another of Bell's attorneys, said there was no evidence that Barker's injuries were caused by tennis shoes rather than a punch or hitting a wall.

People in the packed courtroom sometimes cheered or made loud noises of disgust or disbelief during the arguments.

That was but a mere taste of what is expected to be a massive public outcry against the perceived racial discrimination and unfair targeting of the boys in this case on Sept. 20.

Though the case received little mainstream media attention, a groundswell of sentiment in support of the Black students began on the Internet in blogs; Black media portals like The Final Call and BlackAmericaWeb.com; websites dedicated to the cause (http://jenasix.org) and online petitions to drop the charges in the case (www.colorofchange.org).

The movement is sweeping through college campuses as well.

On Sept. 5, a group of Howard University students comprising the Save the Jena Six Planning Committee, which is working to raise money for and awareness about the Jena Six cases, held a rally at the school's Cramton Auditorium.

"It would behoove students at a Historically Black University to show solidarity with any case that calls into question the blindfold that the court is supposed to wear," said Chigizog Onyema, a member of the planning team in The Hilltop article.

Jessica Harris, a student at Morgan State University in Baltimore and a member of Delta Sigma Theta, said as soon as she learned the details of the case, she knew she had to do something.

"I was immediately disgusted," Harris said of the case. "It shocked me back into the reality that racism is alive and well."

On July 31, the Rev. Al Sharpton of the National Action Network went down to Jena to lead in the battle cry of "No justice, no peace!" and he, along with Martin Luther King III, radio host Michael Baisden and other national leaders will lead an expected thousands in a national vigil before the Jena Louisiana Court House on the day of Bell's sentencing.

Harris said while she cannot make the trip, she is working on organizing a simultaneous "Black Awareness" rally at the school.

"Even if I can't go down there and scream on the courtroom steps I can do something here to raise awareness of not only the Jena Six case but also the other important issues facing the Black community."

Is the sky clearest on the day it is most blue?

While you ponder that thought we would like to announce that Minority Opportunity News, Inc., formerly a Dallas based renaissance community tabloid, founded in 1991, has relocated to Plano, Texas and changed our name to MON-The Gazette. In addition to moving our offices to Plano, our editorial coverage has also shifted to encompass Dallas' Northern Corridor. The Northern Corridor is clearly the fastest growing region in Texas, if not in America. MON-The Gazette believes that the engine to continue this growth is the airport expansion in McKinney, which is the largest and most visible of many area opportunities. As always, and true to tradition, MON-The Gazette will be there carving a world of opportunity for those seeking to provide quality services. Should you date to expand your quest for economic parity outside the southern region or just want to know what is going on up north.

Position Your Company For Minority Contracts

By: Madison J. Gray
For Stephen Jackson, one of the most important keys to successfully becoming a corporate supplier was networking.

"It was about being in the right place at the right time, but also about being able to solve a problem," said Jackson, general manager of RoadDogz Productions, a New York-based video and film production company, which produces, edits, encodes and uploads web video for Segram's Walk of Fame Tour.

Jackson's company got the deal because the marketing company Segram's was using didn't know what to do with the video it had. An associate of Jackson's who knew about Segram's dilemma suggested he contact Segram's to talk about improving the quality and helping the Walk of Fame Tour develop an Internet presence.

"They liked the concept and brought into it," Jackson says. "After that, they asked us to go out and produce the entire Walk of Fame concept."

RoadDogz Productions' story is just one example of how minority businesses can position themselves to become suppliers and contractors to major companies. In 2004 corporations working with the National Minority Supplier Diversity Council, an organization that helps provide procurement opportunities for minority-owned enterprises, spent $87.4 billion with minority businesses.

Corporate America is becoming more willing to partner with minority owned businesses. Marriott International was the first worldwide hospitality company to establish a supplier diversity program and did $347 million with minority- and women-owned enterprises in 2005. IBM Corp. has an entire Global Supplier Diversity Program that spends $2 billion a year in business with minority companies. Building relationships is an important part of getting a piece of that pie.

Stephen Jackson used networking to secure a minority contract.

"From the perspective of the minority business enterprise, most of them don't know how to penetrate the maze to get to the people that make business decisions," says Reginald Williams,

CEO of Procurement Resources Inc. and an expert on supplier diversity issues. "A second challenge is, unlike the consumer market, you have to understand the business culture in order to assimilate within it. For a businessman or woman wanting to enter the relationship, you have to understand how the company is organized."

It's also important to think of every relationship as a potentially long-lasting one, Williams says. "I'm not just selling them some paper today, corporations thrive on long term strategic relationships that add value to their mission."

Although companies such as RoadDogz Productions have figured how to create relationships with larger companies, many don't know where to start. Minority business advocates say fostering and maintaining a healthy network is key to being able to grasp opportunities when they come up. One way is to join advocacy groups such as the local chapter of the National Minority Supplier Development Council (nmsdcus.org).

"Getting into the mix is important because rarely does a contractor come knocking at your door," said Lynda Ireland, president of the New York & New Jersey Minority Supplier Development Council. "If you don't know about the contracts, you can't go after them. When you know what your services are and you know your capabilities, you discover which companies you can add value to."

Business Assistance Center Launches Its Fall Calendar & Training For Small Business Owners And Aspiring Entrepreneurs

Business Assistance Center, Inc., a nonprofit community development entity (BAC, Inc.), has created over 58 small business owners & employees who have surpassed over $1,000,000.00 in generated gross revenue.

The new 2007 Small Business Start-up training class for Fall 2007 begins September 18, 2007 with two pre-orientations being held September 13, 2007, Thursday, 1-4 p.m. and 6-9 p.m. at 1201 Camp Wisdom, Dallas TX 75231.

Van Howard, BAC President/CEO said, "This fall marks our fourth training of Dallas entrepreneurs who want to create jobs, follow their passion and give back to the community."

"Historically, people of color have not had viable access to capitol or entrepreneurial training programs," said Terry Allen, Business and Development Director. "The BAC, Inc. start-up class will provide information on how to gain access to financial support by building relationships with our partner banks and we will showcase the small business owners' roadmap to the process for procuring contracts."

Allen said, "This time we will be able to showcase our partnership Constant Contact. We will be able to provide our business owners with easy to use email marketing and online survey products that build strong, lasting customer relationships and readily capture revenue opportunities faster. Constant Contact, Inc. is one of the leading providers of email marketing and survey tools for owner managed organizations. Since we joined Constant Contact's Business Partner program we will be able to offer to the southern sector Small Business Network clients two classes with the Constant Contact Development Director, Julie Neihoff in October and November 2007."

House Of Blues, Skoolboy Entertainment & Panic Switch Present Tyrese On September 30 @ 9 p.m.

Tyrese Darnell Gibson (born December 30, 1978), often known simply as Tyrese or Black-Ty, is an American R&B and hip hop singer, songwriter, rapper, actor, and former fashion model and MTV VJ. After releasing several successful albums, he made the transition into films, with lead roles in several Hollywood films, including Baby Boy, 2 Fast 2 Furious, Flight of the Phoenix, Four Brothers, Annapolis and his latest, Waist Deep, and Transformers.

Gibson was born in the Watts district in Los Angeles, California, where he attended Locke High School. His mother, Priscilla Murray Gibson (née Durham), raised him and his three older siblings as a single parent after Gibson's father left in 1983. Gibson's career began when he won a talent show at the age of fourteen. An appearance in a 1997 Coca-Cola advertisement, singing the phrase "Always Coca-Cola," led to wider fame, and at the age of seventeen his chiseled looks opened the way for him to model for Tommy Hilfiger. In regards to beefing up, he told CraveOnline that he does "just a few push ups here and there... I'm doing push ups and eating Ding Dongs. That's it, man. Twinkies, got to keep it right."

Initially an MC, Gibson rapped under the alias of Black-Ty and was a member of an underground group known as Triple Impact, but he didn't hesitate to follow another career route as an opportunity to launch his R&B career came up first. He released his self-titled debut music album, which went platinum, in 1998; his second album, 2000 Watts, shares the name of the organization he founded to help inner city children. Tyrese also co-wrote with Teddy Riley and Michael Jackson the song "2000 Watts," included in Michael Jackson's 2001 album "Invincible." Gibson was given the role originally intended for Tupac Shakur in the 2001 film Baby Boy; the movie was a critical success and performed fairly at the box office. Gibson subsequently appeared in the 2003 box office success 2 Fast 2 Furious (opposite Paul Walker), as well as Flight of the Phoenix (2004), Four Brothers (2005) and Annapolis

(2006), co-starring James Franco. Gibson was picked as one of People Magazine's Sexiest Men of the Year in 2000.

In 2006, Gibson starred in Waist Deep, in which he played a man fighting to rescue his son from kidnappers; his co-stars in the film, Meagan Good and Larenz Tate, are personal friends of Gibson's in real life. Like several of his previous roles, the film is set in an urban environment, but

[Alpha Oumar] Konaré of the African Union. This political negotiation will be led by the African Union and the United Nations, in close cooperation and support from the countries concerned. We have agreed -- all the leaders in the region have agreed that we should make this negotiation as a final phase for final settlement of this issue. I was so struck when I met all these people in the IDP [internally displaced people] camp, with their aspirations to see peace and security in their country. And I also encouraged leaders of South and North Sudan to faithfully implement the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, which is the core in this issue. I again expect that they will faithfully implement [it]. At the same time, the leaders in the region, particularly Sudan, should make their utmost efforts, to make this political process move smoothly, keeping the cessation of hostilities and helping the humanitarian assistance flow smoothly, without any hindrance.

I visited again the future site of the hybrid operation, UNAMID [UN Assistance Mission in Darfur]. Initial preparations are going on well -- on track. Again, President [Omar El] Bashir of Sudan has assured me of his Government's full support -- logistical, administrative areas, including some additional land which may be required for operations. We must build upon this momentum. The Chadian Government is going to hold a preparatory meeting with all the representatives of movements, in about two week's time. I have asked my Special Representative, Mr. Jan Eliasson and African Union Special Envoy, Mr. [Salim A.] Salim, to fully utilize this opportunity to engage in talks with the leaders of rebel groups. They will have to engage in shuttle diplomacy before this formal meeting takes place, to see that [there is] the smooth process of this meeting. I am going to be continuously engaged in this and you will have my full commitment to it. I am grateful to all the leaders for their political flexibility and cooperation.

Gibson has said that he does not view the role as a "step back", rather seeing the film as taking "another direction" due to some of its themes and action sequences.

Gibson prefers his music career to acting, but will focus on both areas. His rap persona was finally revitalized on December 12, 2006, with the release of his newest album, titled Alter Ego, with one disc featuring R&B (as Tyrese) and one disc featuring hip hop (as Black-Ty). His most recent role was in the big-budget action movie, Transformers, which was released in July 2007; the film's director, Michael Bay, had Gibson in mind for the role before he was cast, and thus Gibson did not have to audition for the part. Gibson may also star in a film version of the superhero Luke Cage; as of 2006, the script was being re-formatted.

Gibson has been attached to a new R&B supergroup entitled

TGT with Ginuwine and Tank. He is quoted in saying, "With all the support our fans have given us individually over the years for our distinct signature styles, collectively we felt our fans deserved to hear great music in a way that they could never have imagined. I've known these guys for years and they truly are like brothers, so it only felt right to come together as a trio to make history." The group is first featured on Tank's remix to the song "Please Don't Go." They also plan an international tour entitled "The Shirts Off Tour." TGT stands for "Tyrese, Ginuwine, Tank."

During a 2003 appearance on the New Tom Green Show, it was revealed that Tyrese has an immense fear of owls. On the show, Tyrese confessed that he has such a fear of owls that looking at a picture would make him freak out. Knowing this, Tom Green began to draw a picture of an owl, causing Tyrese to go into a panic and threaten to leave the stage.

setting for neighborhoods and more. Noted neighborhood developer and advocate Jim Diers from Seattle, WA will present a workshop titled "Neighbor Power". Diers will share real-life examples of how neighborhoods have worked together to develop community-driven plans and neighborhood self-help projects. He will offer practical applications and invaluable lessons for ordinary, caring neighbors who want to make a difference. It also provides government officials with inspiring stories and proven programs to help them embrace neighborhood activists as true partners.

"Mr. Diers has shared his

The Neighborhood Summit will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Atrium at the Granville Arts Center, 300 N. Fifth Street in Downtown Garland. The Summit is open to the public. Early registration costs $15. After October 1, 2007, the cost increases to $20. The registration deadline is October 19, 2007.

Sister Tarpley

John paced up and down outside his cabin and asked, "Why did the Lord allow my wife to suffer so, to approach death with no hope of a doctor's help? Perhaps they should never have come to this lonesome jungle without a government outpost near. Why did they come to Africa? But no! That was doubting God. He had sent them here, and He had blessed their work; souls had been saved, and a church was established. God wanted them here.

But why was God allowing his wife to die? She couldn't last the week out until the messenger would bring the doctor from the coast. And that strange request of hers—three ripe tomatoes. She thought they would help her and give her nourishment to sustain her until the doctor arrived.

As far as John knew, there weren't three ripe tomatoes in all of Belgian Congo. There might be some canned tomatoes at their distant outpost but ripe ones? They just did not grow tomatoes in this part of Africa.

John thought of praying for tomatoes but considered it unreasonable to ask God for the impossible. Tomatoes couldn't grow like the beanstalk in the old fairy tale even if he did have seeds, and he didn't.

Steadily the tropical fever was burning the very life from John's wife. By nightfall, she was so weak she could not talk; lack of food had sapped her strength until she could only moan and whisper occasionally to her husband. Only the prayers of the entire mission compound kept her alive through that night, alive to face another day of suffering—physical for her, mental for John. As he leaned over her bed in the morning, again he heard her whisper, "If-only-I-had-three-ripe-tomatoes."

Three Ripe Tomatoes

In agony, John heard that dying request—three ripe tomatoes. If only it were humanly possible to get them. He would go to any extreme. He picked up his wife's hot hand and gripped it compassionately in his.

As he stood looking down at his wife, a native servant appeared at the door and said there was a nearby tribeswoman out in front who wanted to see him. Reluctantly John left his wife and stepped outside. He had never seen this woman before, yet her tribal dress was familiar. Questioning her, he found that his guess had been correct—a bush woman from the tribe he had visited last month. But what was she doing here at this season of the year?

His question was answered. She had been sent to him for advice. Food was scarce this season, but she was afraid to eat this queer fruit she had grown from seeds left her by a white man. Were they all right to eat?

As John peered into the basket she carried, he almost cried for joy. These tomatoes came now in answer to his wife's prayers and in rebuke to his doubts.

And not only that, but the bewildered Black woman said that she had more! She scurried to get them at the missionary's plea.

John's wife ate the tomatoes and lived until the doctor arrived with healing medicine, lived for a successful ministry through the amazing appearance of three ripe tomatoes, that were planted, raised and ripened at the appropriate time by the hand of the all-wise God.

The seeds were sown long before—because someone prayed. The Black woman brought the tomatoes to the missionary because someone prayed. — From Miracles and Melodies, Only God Can Do The Miraculous!

Six Area Pastors' Wives Honored For Domestic Violence Advocacy

The Family Place will honor six area Pastors' Wives (First Ladies) who have taken a stand in proactively addressing the needs of domestic violence victims in the church community at the Belo Mansion on Saturday, September 29.

Domestic violence is the leading cause of death among women in the nation. Texas and Dallas is the leading state and city of domestic violence, respectively. The month of October is national awareness month bringing attention to this cause. As a result, The First Ladies Gospel Brunch and Fashion Show benefiting The Family Place has been created to help raise funds to continue awareness and education.

Honorees include Paula Coleman, Kingdom Harvest Church of God in Christ; Lois

Evans, Oak Cliff Bible Fellowship Church; Toy Sargent, Faithful Missionary Baptist Church; Denise Simon, All Saints Catholic Church & St. Elizabeth of Hungary; Glenna Smith, North Dallas Community Bible Fellowship; and Decia Terry, The Breakthrough Center.

For ticket information, contact Emily Santillan at 214-443-7717.

Tarrant County College Hosts HBCU College Fair

Tarrant County College will host an HBCU college fair on Saturday, September 15, on the TCC Southeast Campus, located at 2100 Southeast Parkway, Arlington, Tex. from 9:00 a.m. - 1:00 p.m. Participants will meet representatives from Dallas

Metropolplex Council of Black Alumni Associations (DMCBAA), The United Negro College Fund (UNCF), HBCU alumni and recruiters from public and private schools in the United States, and obtain scholarship and financial aid information.

All Arlington and Fort Worth students, parents, and educators are invited to attend.

For more information, contact DMCBAA at 972-220-0477, email dmcbaa@yahoo.com or go to the organization's website at www.dmcbaa.com.

Author Dr. Luther E. Smith Speaks About Theologian, Civil Rights Leader Howard Thurman

Christian Chapel CME Church will host a unique lecture titled "The Spirituality of Transformation: An In-depth Look at Howard Thurman" by Dr. Luther Smith of the Chandler School of Theology at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia. The free event will be held on Saturday, September 15, from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Christian Chapel CME Church, 14120 Noel Road in Dallas.

Dr. Smith is the author of a number of books about influential theologian Howard Thurman, including 2007's "Howard Thurman: The Mystic as Prophet." Thurman was a groundbreaking theologian, philosopher, and educator who influenced civil rights leaders like Dr. Martin Luther King.

For more information about the lecture, call 972-239-1120 or email rev.lucy@ccctof.org.

as a possible influenza pandemic, that the public need to be made aware of," said Zachary Thompson, DCHHS Director. "Through this public service television series, we hope to raise the public's awareness of current public health issues, emerging threats to the public health and well-being and what DCHHS is doing to address these issues." Efforts are underway to expand viewership to include additional venues.

The four-part series focuses on topics such as pandemic influenza, personal preparedness, and highlights the work being done by DCHHS to prepare for any public health emergency. "We are pleased to launch this new initiative that allows us to enter the homes of Dallas County residents and talk to them about important public health issues such as pandemic influenza," said Jennifer McMillian, Ph.D., DCHHS Assistant Director, Public Health Preparedness.

The series is being launched on September 11th as a part of DCHHS National Preparedness Month activities. National Preparedness Month is a nationwide effort encouraging Americans to take simple steps to prepare for emergencies in their homes, businesses and schools. Dallas County Health and Human Services has joined more than 1,000 organizations nationwide to sponsor the fourth annual celebration that encourages Americans to prepare for emergencies in their homes, businesses and communities.

"While September has been designated as National Preparedness Month, at DCHHS we consider the issue of preparedness year round," said Zachary Thompson, DCHHS Director. "It is incumbent upon each Dallas County resident to take personal responsibility by having a disaster plan for their homes and a Go Kit in their homes."

Dallas County Health and Human Services is at the forefront nationwide of public health preparedness efforts. DCHHS works diligently to keep the public informed about public health issues and to prepare critical partners for public health threats such as pandemic influenza.
