Obama, Clinton Head for Democratic Showdown in South Carolina Jan 26

By Hazel Trice Edney
NNPA Editor-in-Chief

WASHINGTON (NNPA) – The score is now one to one.

Sen. Hillary Clinton with her 39 percent to 37 percent win in New Hampshire Tuesday night and Sen. Barack Obama with his 39 percent to her 29 percent win in Iowa Jan. 3 are now headed for a rematch in South Carolina Jan. 26 where the more than 40 percent Black Democratic voters will decide what happens next.

Obama says voter turnout will be the key.

“What will help me to get elected is making sure the people turn out to vote and that they recognize the opportunity that we have to - for the first time in a long time - really change our politics....And that's true,

Beyond The Rhetoric

I have been to Kenya three times and each time my love for this land and its people grows stronger and stronger. The lush green highlands and the robust savannahs have no rival. The view of Fern Valley from the mountainsides is absolutely astonishing. One can get “high” from watching a sunset before Mount Kilimanjaro.

Millions of animals in their natural habitat replete with the stoic Masai warriors walking amongst the wildlife with no fear at all. The city of Nairobi with its impressive skyline is indeed cosmopolitan. The people have the friendliest and most genuine smiles. They are good folks.

The current state of affairs of this nation cannot be considered a shock to me because I have been watching it “brew” for sometime. The rioting on television brings back the memory of the Rwanda Horror. Hopefully, it will cease soon but the possibility is causing me to lose sleep. I have made good friends and we have great plans for the future. Right now, my main concern is their safety.

Kenya is in its third presidential regime. The

Senator West Praises Auto Replacement Program

DALLAS -- State Senator Royce West (D-Dallas) praised the implementation of a plan to remove older, polluting automobiles from Texas roads. The accelerated vehicle replacement plan will pay up to $3,500 to auto owners in various parts of the state as part of an overall plan to improve air quality, particularly in Texas' urban centers.

“This is how Texas can say Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to thousands of drivers who own older vehicles,” said Senator West. “While the assistance program is not available to everyone, it's a great opportunity that amounts to a substantial down payment on a new or late model car that lower-income Texans should hurry to take advantage of.”

The program is part of a six-year-old emissions plan by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality administered by the North Central Texas Council of Governments. Single auto owners who live in Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Austin and their surrounding counties who earn up to $30,630 are eligible to apply for assistance. For

Big Oil Mission Creep Accomplished

Have you had enough yet? Are you convinced yet? Now that oil has hit that magical price of $100.00 per barrel, are you finally ready to respond with a strategy that makes sense this time? Or, do you want to call for another Gas Out Day? Been there, done that, right? Although we missed a great opportunity back in 2002 to show the oil thieves we would not take being ripped-off lying down, now that we are paying through the nose, and every other orifice, for gasoline and related oil products, maybe now we are ready to strike back.

Bush, Cheney, Rice, and their international crew of oil thieves have slowly but surely secured their futures and that of their families with their shady deals and secret meetings with the oil barons. Under the guise of developing an energy policy for the United States, “Darth” Cheney, the guy who has given new meaning to the “Vice” in Vice President, convened his boys and girls and has yet to divulge what went on in those meetings. He also, as former Chairman and CEO of Halliburton, negotiated pipeline deals for Chevron and, if you connect the dots, you will see why he was and still is so adamant about maintaining the wars

Carmin Coutee

Carmin Coutee, president of Magnolia Custom Homes, is one of the few woman-run custom home developers in the Chicago metropolitan area. The unique combination of Coutee's educational background, business acumen, Southern upbringing and motherly sensibilities gives Magnolia Custom Homes a distinctive edge in a cookie-cutter-homebuilder market.

Coutee founded Magnolia Homes out of frustration over the poor workmanship and uninteresting floor plans she discovered when searching for her family's home. After designing her home and acting as her own general contractor, she decided to put her MBA and business experience to work creating livable, unique homes that combined a woman's pragmatism with the grand, essential elements of Southern homes, such as roomy front porches to watch children play and visit with friends and neighbors, French Quarter-style gas lanterns that adorn the entries, abundant floor-to-ceiling windows, lavishly detailed kitchens, vintage bathrooms, three-car garages, and sweeping staircases.

Being the granddaughter of a builder, actively investing in real estate for over 10 years, and holding an Illinois Real Estate Broker's license gives Coutee the experience to create a successful venture by carving out a niche that serves those who desire upscale well-constructed, classic homes in great communities.

Prior to starting Magnolia Homes, Coutee founded and led a marketing and e-business strategy consulting firm that built its success by listening to its clients and their customers. That same customer focus still drives Magnolia Custom Homes as a key tenet for delivering distinctive homes and delighting homeowners.

Coutee holds an MBA from Northwestern University's prestigious J.L. Kellogg School of Management, a Master of Science degree with highest distinction from DePaul University, and a Bachelor of Science degree from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge.

Additionally, Coutee is a member of the Northern Illinois Home Builders Association, the National Association of Realtors, and the Realtor Association of West/South Suburban Chicagoland. She is also active in many philanthropic and social organizations such as Junior League and Jack and Jill Inc.

Coutee, 33, currently resides in Naperville, Ill., with her husband Winston and four children, ages 10, 6, 4 and 2, as they await the completion of their Magnolia Custom Home. Is the sky clearest on the day it is most blue?

While you ponder that thought we would like to announce that Minority Opportunity News, Inc., formerly a Dallas based renaissance community tabloid, founded in 1991, has relocated to Plano, Texas, and changed our name to MON-The Gazette. In addition to moving our offices to Plano, our editorial coverage has also shifted to encompass Dallas' Northern Corridor. The Northern Corridor is clearly the fastest growing region in Texas, if not in America. MON-The Gazette believes that the engine to continue this growth is the airport expansion in McKinney, which is the largest and most visible of many area opportunities. As always, and true to tradition, MON-The Gazette will be there carving a world of opportunity for those seeking to provide quality services. Should you dare to expand your quest for economic parity outside the southern region or just want to know what is going on up north-Think of MON-The Gazette as your paper of opportunity!

THE TRUTH CLINIC

The Iowa Enigma

Something unique and perhaps even providential happened in Iowa last Thursday.

Barack Obama became the first black candidate to win a presidential caucus or primary in over 230 years of America's history.

The fact that rural Iowa, 95 per cent white, elderly and the epitome of conservative convention, voted for a black man should cause voters in the two immediate primaries in New Hampshire and South Carolina and then the February 5th cluster of primaries to pause and think seriously about the profound statement made by Iowans.

Obama, 46, the son of a black Kenyan father and a white American mother from Kansas is a Harvard Law School graduate who launched his political career by organizing black churches on the industrial South Side of Chicago. He was elected to the Illinois legislature in 1997. He was thrust into the national spotlight when he was chosen as the keynote speaker for the 2004 Democratic National Convention. Elected to the U.S. Senate just four months later he became only the third black U.S. senator since Reconstruction.

The first-term Illinois senator gained momentum at just the right time. An influx of new caucus-goers and independents helped to propel Obama past Hillary Clinton, the well funded and well known front-runner. "We came together as Democrats, as Republicans and independents, to stand up and say we are one nation, we are one people and our time for change has come," Obama said as he spoke to the delirious crowd of happy supporters.

Obama received 38 percent of the caucus vote, John Edwards 30%, while the preordained invincible Clinton came in third with 29%.

Iowans didn't vote for Obama because of his eloquent oratory or his Kennedy like charisma.

They embraced his opposition to the Iraq war, his mission to clean up the corruption and special interests that control Washington, his promise of universal health care, and the enthusiasm for political change generated by his grass roots organization. His army of volunteers and professionals turned out a massive number of first time caucus participants estimated at over 320,000. The enormity of this accomplishment can only be realized by comparing it to the 125,000 that turned out in 2003 and the 59,000 in 2000.

Obama campaigned aggressively on a promise to change Washington. Clinton had cast doubt on Obama's ability to bring about the change he advocated and accused him of being naive and inexperienced while touting her decades of Washington experience.

Iowans questioned the ability of the "experienced" candidates, who are bound hand and foot to the party playbook, to bring about needed change and voted accordingly.

A victorious Barack Obama portrayed his decisive first-place finish in the Iowa Democratic caucuses as a "defining moment" that he said would lead the way to change in Washington and an end to the war in Iraq. Throughout his campaign he has encouraged voters to set aside the cynicism, doubt, and fear that has become the focus of American politics and set a course for change rooted in new hope and a new destiny that we the people create.

Race remains a bitterly divisive issue in the US, and the Iowan moment could change dramatically as the radical elements that thrive on divisiveness, racism and fear begin their stealth campaigns to retain the status quo. For all of Thursday night's drama, the startling results in Iowa do not preclude a tight race going into New Hampshire and South Carolina. Hillary Clinton has raised plenty of money and assembled a sophisticated and tough politically savvy field organization.

While the momentous and magnificent moment of Obama's win in Iowa may be just a fleeting aberration and may never to be seen again for a long time it must be savored and appreciated like a rare vintage wine by those who witnessed it.

Obama described the moment this way, "But sometimes, just sometimes, there are nights like this, a night that, years from now, when we've made the changes we believe in, when more families can afford to see a doctor, when our children inherit a planet that's a little cleaner and safer, when the world sees America differently, and America sees itself as a nation less divided and more united, you'll be able to look back with pride and say that this was the moment when it all began."

His vision is now one step closer to reality thanks to that enigmatic happening in Iowa.

first was led by their liberator Jomo Kenyatta. His term was long but necessary as they transitioned from colonialism to revolution to democracy. Arap Moi was an interesting leader as he led by tribal coalition versus the Kikuyu dominance of the Kenyatta regime. The current president is Kibaki who is Kikuyu but is constantly reminded that the other tribes, especially the Luo, have their place in government and power as well. Personally, I feel the fault of Kibaki's leadership is not tribal based but due to downright personal greed. Whenever I note a conflict of interest in commercial matters there appears to be a direct relative of the President involved. It's not coincidental and of course any relative of Kibaki would have to be Kikuyu. One should not get the impression that there is an official tribal conspiracy.

We once spent a lovely evening with a cabinet member enjoying libation while looking out over his personal farm – palatial estate. He told us that President Kibaki had recently sent a military helicopter over his land to assess its beauty and value. Later, the President informed him that he was considering annexing (eminent domain) his land. I asked, "How did you respond"? He retorted, "I told him if he tried I will personally kill him".

Confrontation between a President and a cabinet member can become very serious hard ball.

Such disputes and mysterious deaths (often reported by the press) becomes a way of life in Kenyan politics and it makes us appreciate our style of democracy.

Another indicator that something bad was about to happen was the recent elections held by the National Chamber of Commerce and Industry. We learned that our first contact and good friend, Laban, had won the vote. We later learned that he could not be inaugurated because the incumbent was refusing to relinquish the office. It was going to court and that may take years. Laban is Luo and his rival is Kikuyu and the opposing sides were starting to assemble in like fashion. Such is the case in the current national presidential elections. They (Kikuyu's) want to tie it up in court which would give Kibaki years of continued reign. The courts in Kenya move at a snail's pace. Thus, there is conflict in the streets.

In Kenya, one would think the tribal deal was all over by now. Every Kenyan is fluent in three languages. English is taught in the schools; each has his own tribal tongue (37 tribal dialects); and finally Swahili are the three forms of communication. Swahili is a regional language developed for commercial communication over 1,000 years ago. It is spoken from the Congo, Uganda and Southern Sudan down through Tanzania and Malawi. It is truly a "Lingua Franca".

Basically, the Kenyans are united. They tolerate many religions and honor all cultures. It is this political/power thing that is causing the friction. It doesn't help that the United States and Britain, the colonial oppressor for over a century, have been rather silent on this election issue. The US is always poking its "nose" in foreign elections but, for some reason Jimmy Carter and others weren't around for this last election.

President Kibaki is letting his lust for money (by way of power) get in the way of the democratic process. I say to him: It is time to go to Switzerland and count all the money you already have. The "party" has come to an end.

In the name of Jomo Kenyatta, let freedom ring loud in your great nation. Allow an accurate, transparent and honest vote tally to occur. Kenya is greater than you and freedom has no patience.

My beloved Kenya, I pray for your safety and peace.

Ravenell named recipient of grant from Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

DALLAS – Dr. Joseph Ravenell, assistant professor of internal medicine at UT Southwestern Medical Center, has received a Harold Amos Medical Faculty Development Award from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. The $416,558 award supports his research for the next four years.

The Harold Amos award was created to increase the number of academic medicine faculty from historically disadvantaged ethnic, financial or educational backgrounds. The awards identify researchers who have excelled in their education and who have completed or are completing formal clinical training. Recipients are committed to pursuing academic careers, serving as role models for students and fellow faculty, decreasing health disparities, and improving the health and well-being of the underserved.

A native of New Jersey, Dr. Ravenell completed medical school at the University of Chicago, where he first became interested in academic medicine and in treating underserved patients.

"I had the opportunity to work on a black men's health project where we did focus groups with underserved patients," said Dr.

Dr. Joseph Ravenell

Ravenell, who completed his residency at the University of Pennsylvania and a clinical epidemiology fellowship at Cornell University Medical Center. "The results of that study were used to get funding to start a black men's health clinic."

He was recruited to UT Southwestern in 2005 by Dr. Ronald Victor, professor of internal medicine and principal investigator of the Barbershop Project, a barber-run program aimed at improving diagnosis and treatment of hypertension in black men. Dr. Ravenell said the Barbershop Project is key in linking clinical work and research designed to benefit underserved patients.

Dr. Ravenell said funding from the Harold Amos award will allow him to study a phenomenon known as "physician inertia," where doctors may be reluctant to aggressively treat hypertension in African-American men.

"I'm interested in studying reasons why doctors may not be more aggressive in initiating or intensifying therapy for high blood pressure," he said. "Poorly controlled hypertension in patients can have severe and devastating consequences."

The award was named in honor of Dr. Harold Amos, who was the first African-American to chair a department, now the Department of Microbiology and Medical Genetics, at Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Ravenell is the seventh UT Southwestern researcher to win this prestigious grant. Other UT Southwestern winners and the years grants were received include: Dr. Richard King, assistant professor of neurology (2006); Dr. Ohwofiemu Nwariaku, associate professor of surgery (2002); former faculty members Dr. Edsel Arce-Hernandez (1999), Dr. Carmela Morales (1996) and Dr. Ivor Benjamin (1985); and former fellow Dr. David Wilkes (1992).

Clean Hands are Key to Fighting Cold, Flu Germs

With the cold and flu season now upon us, it's time for health-minded individuals to pay particular attention to washing their hands on a regular basis because, according to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), cleaning our hands is the single most important measure people can take to keep from getting a cold or the flu.

"Studies have shown that 40 percent of women and 58 percent of men do not routinely wash their hands-including after using restroom facilities," says Adam Siegel, a certified hygiene program manager at UniFirst, which provides safety apparel and facility cleanliness products to companies throughout North America.

Health studies have shown that cold and flu germs are able to survive on and be transferred from many commonly touched surfaces for up to 48 hours. Some are obvious, like door handles, phones, and computer keyboards. But others tend to be less apparent, like elevator buttons, cafeteria tables, and debit card keypads.

When soap and water are not available, medical experts recommend that waterless hand sanitizing gels or wipes, such as Purell(R) products, be used as they can kill 99.9 percent of the most common germs that cause illness.

For hand washing to be truly effective, the CDC says it must be done for at least 20 seconds and involve a thorough cleaning of the front and back of the hands, as well as the areas between fingers and under the nails. And since damp faucets can provide inviting homes for cold and flu germs, cleanliness experts generally recommend turning knobs with paper towels and, similarly, activating blow dryers with paper or even elbows.

As experts at the Mayo Clinic point out, hand washing doesn't take much time or effort, but it certainly offers great rewards in terms of preventing illness-particularly, they would likely add, when it comes to enjoying a sneeze-free cold and flu season!

Mayor's Human Relations Advisory Council

City of Irving

Rolanda Medina, Sharon Barbosa-Crain, Colvin Gibson, Members of Irving Human Rights Committee Meeting

Jack Singley, Superintendent of Irving ISD, Sharon Barbosa-Crain, Colvin Gibson, Members of Irving Human Rights Committee Meeting

The Mayor of Irving, Herbert A. Gears, formed the Mayor's Human Relations Advisory Council (MHRAC) in April 2007 to seek solutions on diversity issues in the community by engaging in solution-based dialogue. The goal of the eighteen-member MHRAC is to assist the Mayor in building public awareness of the diversity in the city by advocating respect for the differences that makes human beings unique through inclusion, education, and opportunity. The MHRAC serves as a resource, identifying various opportunities the city should pursue to promote, value, and respect diversity in the community.

The role of the MHRAC is to assess problems, issues, and concerns plaguing the minority populations; recommend alternative solutions for resolving problems; prepare a fact sheet of information that can be used in shaping public policy and local initiatives; improve cultural understanding and communications between ethnic communities and the community at large through publications, special projects, community forums; encourage civic participation at all levels through educational programs and community awareness programs and assist city departments in establishing a mechanism for communicating with linguistically isolated communities.

The MHRAC meeting is held the first Tuesday of each month from 4:30p.m. – 6:30p.m. in the Civic Center Complex, Council Conference Room, 825 W. Irving Blvd. For additional information, please call 972-721-2600.

not just for Black folks, but for all people who've been locked out of the process," Obama said in a telephone interview with the NNPA News Service Tuesday. "But, there's no doubt that my candidacy builds on the sacrifices and work of those who came earlier, people who were willing to go to jail and march and sit in and heroes like Dr. King who were willing to sacrifice their lives so that a future generation could have the opportunities that I have."

Arizona Sen. John McCain led the New Hampshire Primary ahead of former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney and former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, who won in Iowa. African-American voters sparingly support Republican candidates, usually about 10 percent.

It takes 2,162 delegates to win the Democratic nomination.

Pundits predict that between South Carolina and Super Tuesday Feb. 5, when 22 states will go to the polls, the obvious Democratic nominee will emerge.

Several factors indicate that anything could happen. The members of the Congressional Black Caucus who have chosen to endorse have now tipped 15-16 in favor of Clinton. The score was tied until New Jersey Rep. Donald Payne endorsed Clinton last week.

The day after Clinton's Iowa loss to both Obama and former North Carolina Sen. John Edwards, who got 30 percent of the vote, she told NNPA that she was not intimidated by Obama's momentum, even in South Carolina, where polls indicate he will be favored among Black voters.

"I do not see myself as being disadvantaged. I have a very long record of working with and producing results for African-Americans, for poor people, for hard-working people, for kids. And I'll put that record up against anyone. And if you want to know what kind of changes any of us will make, look at what we've already done. That's the best predictor of what we will do in the future," says Clinton in the interview.

As Obama prepares to take his message into South Carolina, polls show him with a double-digit lead over his opponents. Then they will compete in the 22 states where large Black turnouts are expected to go to the polls on Super Tuesday, Feb. 5. Clinton said in the interview that she will fight back with issues.

"I have a long history of fighting to expand civil rights and improving our public schools and giving every child a chance to go to college. I'm going to crack down on predatory lenders and put homeownership back in reach for middle income and low income Americans. I'm finally going to be able to deliver on health care because I think the plan I have is not only totally universal to cover everybody, but it's politically doable. And we'll be doing more to address the high rates in which African-Americans suffer from chronic diseases like diabetes. I will continue the work I've done to expand access to capital and technical assistance for minority entrepreneurs and small business owners. And I have paid particular attention to the economic vitality of both, our inner cities, and our rural areas."

Obama said in the interview that he too will stress his issues platform. He says education, more money and health care are the three most essential issues for Black America.

"Number one has to be education. And that means education from the day a child is born until the day they graduate from college. So, we have proposed an additional $18 billion a year in education spending," he said.

He stressed the need for early childhood education, raising teachers' salaries, offering more professional development for teachers, changing parts of Bush's "No Child Left Behind" so that schools that are already behind get resources that they need and granting a $4,000 a year tuition credit for every college student.

Secondly, "We need to put more money into the pockets of our community," he said. He said tax breaks for middle and low income people, including mortgage deductions would be a part of his economic plan.

Finally, a universal health care system would be his third priority, he says, "Making sure that everybody has a health care plan that is at least as good as the health care plan that I have as a member of Congress."

South Carolina has the nation's largest contingency of Black Democrats.

Educating Tomorrow's Workforce

By Jacquinette D. Murphy

Investing in the educational future of the next generation is the focus of Dr. Marcus Martin, the newly appointed President and CEO of Education Is Freedom (EIF). The organization is a national non-profit organization headquartered in Dallas, Texas that provides access to higher education for high school and college students across the United States of America. The main goal of EIF is to remove the economic obstacles to higher education through the awarding of scholarships to students outside the traditional scholarship program criteria.

Dr. Martin is an accomplished research scholar and was initially connected to EIF through his role as the director of the J. McDonald Williams Institute, the research arm of the Foundation for Community Empowerment.

"Education Is Freedom asked me to perform a measurement evaluation on the organization's success and it took about 14 months," stated Martin. Two days prior to the close of the research project and the presentation of the major report, the chief executive officer informed Martin of her departure. Thus, he was soon appointed as the successor.

"The organization was having great success in helping kids go to college and I was excited to have the opportunity to help," said Martin.

Helping youth to excel in education is something dear to Martin whose own rocky start in the educational arena serves as the memorable link to the children he now prepares to become the success stories of the next generation.

"In the experience of the kids that we serve, I see my experience. I was a bad student," Martin informed. "I was placed in special education in the third grade and I flunked the sixth grade," he shared. Martin eventually graduated from high school and attended college on a football scholarship.

It was while in college that he experienced a personal turning point that became the launch pad for his academic and career success. "I was an education major and was planning to become a teacher and a coach. During my junior year, my best friend was killed by a police officer, my brother was in prison and my younger brother was on his way to prison. My friends were dead or struggling," he recalled. Martin soon had a deeper understanding of his opportunity for higher education and its necessity to obtain eco-

Martin pressed forward amidst these circumstances and graduated with a bachelor's degree in education and continued to achieve a master's degree in criminal justice from Northeast Louisiana University. He also obtained a PhD in Applied Statistics and Urban Sociology from Howard University and a Master of Public Health degree with concentrations in epidemiology and community health from the University of North Texas Health Science Center of Public Health.

Now, instead of being a casualty of the educational system, Martin is spearheading a catalytic organization aimed at increasing the knowledge of our nation's future workforce. "The number one way to increase the potential of economic mobility is through education," said Martin.

While there are other programs similar to EIF that offer scholarships to high school students and college students, its 2003 launch of the pre-college school incubation project, The Dallas Model, brought a new meaning to the term "college preparatory" in the Dallas Independent School District.

The program currently serves about 1,200 at-risk students from three Dallas-area high schools and is styled as an in-school resource center that is dedicated to helping at-risk high school students graduate and embrace a higher education with the essential tools to perform well during in their college years.

"The program efforts are intensive and extensive. We get kids in academic shape." Per Martin, it was understood that sometimes the obstacle to obtaining a higher education is not solely due to a lack of finances.

"Those kids suffer from cumulative disadvantages. In order to be fundamentally effective, you have to catch them in their environment. We have a high school adviser at the school that works to make changes in the kids in the school. The greatest advantage is to work with them in their environment." Martin explained. "I know that it works because I was one of those kids."

EIF also assists with the navigating of the college admissions processes and serves as a financial bridge to "close the gap" in tuition scholarship funds.

The Dallas Model is currently available at only three schools in Dallas ISD and will expand to more campuses in the next year. Ultimately, this local model is being developed as a pilot for an educational revitalization program that can be utilized in other disadvantaged urban school districts nationwide.

During the last five years, over $5 million dollars have been awarded and of the 161 seniors in the program, Martin stated 145 are attending college.

"Our kids performed better on every academic measure than those that are not in the program. We recruit at the freshman level so we are making an eight year investment."

An investment that has not gone unnoticed by Dallas Mayor Tom Leppert. During a visit to James A. Madison High School, he recently committed $200,000 of mayoral salary for the next four years to help fund college scholarships for those in the Education Is Freedom high school program.

EIF can benefit from more mentors to help the students build relationships with positive adults and applauds the organization's partnership with Big Brothers Big Sisters, the Junior League of Dallas and the 7-11-Corporation. To volunteer, obtain scholarship criteria or to be a partner of EIF, please visit the organization's website www.educationisfreedom.org or call the toll free number 1-866-EIF-EDUCATE.

"The end result is to give every young person a chance to achieve a higher education. For every kid that we send to college, we have impacted five or six generations," concluded Martin.

DCHHS Issues Consumer Warning Regarding Stolen Ground Beef

(Dallas) – Dallas County Health and Human Services (DCHHS) is issuing a consumer warning in response to a public health alert issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) for approximately 14,800 pounds of ground beef products that may be contaminated with E. coli O157:H7. The products were produced by Texas American Food Service Corporation, a Fort Worth establishment doing business as American Fresh Foods. The FSIS initiated a public health alert after a trailer containing the products was reported stolen by the company.

DCHHS has not received any reports regarding the purchase or consumption of the suspect products. The USDA confiscated approximately 20 pounds of the beef products from the Chicken Shack in the 6000 block of South Lamar Street.

DCHHS reminds local retail food establishments, including restaurants, caterers, grocers, as well as private citizens, to be aware of Texas Food Establishment Rules as they relate to the purchase and sale of food from approved sources. "Retail food establishments and the general public should make sure that any vendor they use is permitted and in compliance with local and State regulations to ensure the health and safety of the public," said Tony Jenkins, DCHHS Assistant Director of Environmental Health.

The consumer products subject to this public health alert include:

- 2-pound approximate weight packages of "73/27 GROUND BEEF" bearing a sell-by date of "12.30.07"

- 2-pound approximate weight packages of "80/20 GROUND BEEF CHUCK" bearing a sell-by date of "12.31.07"

- 1-pound approximate weight packages of "85/15 GROUND BEEF ROUND" bearing a sell-by date of "12.31.07"

- 1-pound approximate weight packages of "90/10 GROUND BEEF SIRLOIN" bearing a sell-by date of "12.31.07"

- 1-pound approximate weight packages of "96/04 EXTRA LEAN GROUND BEEF, 4% FAT" bearing a sell-by date of "12.31.07"

Each package label bears the establishment number "EST. 13116" inside the USDA mark of inspection and the company name "American Fresh Foods, Ft. Worth, TX 76102" below the nutrition information. Each package has a net weight of approximately 1 to 2 pounds. Bulk product also subject to this health alert includes:

- 40-pound "net wt." box of "73/27 100% GROUND BEEF; REWORK MAP"

- 260-pound "net wt." combo bin of "CHUCK 100% GROUND BEEF; REWORK MAP"

Each bulk product label bears the establishment number "EST. 13116" inside the USDA mark of inspection as well as a date of "12-19-07" with the production information filled in by hand.

Consumers and food retailers should check for these products in their homes and establishments. The products should NOT be eaten. Anyone with any knowledge of these products or who may have these products in their possession should immediately contact the company at their consumer toll-free hotline at 1-800-724-1136.

E. coli is a potentially deadly bacteria that is particularly dangerous for young children, seniors and people with compromised immune systems.

in Iraq and Afghanistan. "There's oil in them there hills, boys!"

Condi, as she is affectionately called by George, gave up her seat on the Chevron Board in 2001 when she was named National Security Advisor, and Chevron changed the name of its oil tanker from the "Condoleezza Rice" to the "Altair Voyager." Maybe that's why Rice was so supportive of the war as well.

George W.? Well we all know his deal. He is just the puppet that keeps us all laughing. He is the stringed marionette that dances across the world stage, keeping us diverted from reality.

Among the three of these characters and, of course, more second-string players, such as Ken Lay (Is he still dead? Did he really die?), Daddy Bush and James Baker with the Carlyle Group, and others, there must be billions of dollars hidden in some international pipeline somewhere.

The stage was set even before Bush, Jr. became President, and now the die has been cast. Think back to 1999; oil was below $20.00 per barrel, and it was only after Saddam Hussein halted production late in 1999 that it went to $27.00 per barrel. Then about a year later, around October 2000, Saddam decided he would take euros for his country's oil rather than the vaunted "petrodollar." Uh Oh! All of a sudden, "Houston, we have a problem."

Now, what do we do? Having tried one-day boycotts and protests of big oil companies, as if that would hurt them — they make billions of dollars per quarter and pay their executives hundreds of millions annually — it's not likely that a one-day refusal to buy gas would do anything but make them irritated to the point of raising prices, the way they did on the last "Gas Out Day."

I reiterate what I wrote in my last book, "Black Empowerment with an Attitude." It's not good enough simply to complain; heck, you can see how much good that has done. We must "restrain and sustain." Restrain ourselves from frivolous driving; carpool, walk, scooter, or bicycle when and where possible; and stop buying those gas-guzzling behemoths that car manufacturers have convinced us we need to have.

How stupid are we as consumers? Is there no limit to how much money these thieves can steal from us, and how many times they can do it before we wake up and decide to respond in kind? That's where the "sustain" part of the strategy comes into play.

On a local level, we must refuse to purchase gasoline from a selected few stations and sustain that effort until either their prices fall or they go out of business. I can hear some of you now. "Jim, that's not fair to the local dealer."

When prices escalate the way they have since Bush and company took, and I do mean "took" office, when the mere threat of a hurricane can cause the price to rise even more, and when every station in your area gets the same call to raise their price to the same amount at the same time, you have to know there is some stuff in the game.

When stations start to close we will see a change. That's it; bottom-line. If we are unwilling to make the sacrifices necessary to respond to the thievery of the oil barons, we simply need to shut-up! Or, develop a good relationship with Hugo Chavez.

08 Hummer H3

The H3 is Hummer's midsize SUV and the third model in the vehicle lineup. The H3 is designed to deliver authentic HUMMER style and off-road capability in a smaller, more fuel-efficient package. Ever since it debuted for the 2006 model year, Hummer's H3 has been one of the toughest-looking SUVs around with its bulging fenders, short side windows and massive tires. The exterior is all Hummer with the chrome seven-slot grille, flanked by round headlights within square openings. For 2008 Hummer added the H3 Alpha edition that comes with 16-inch chrome wheels, Alpha badging and chrome door handles and mirrors. On the inside of the Hummer H3, the driver faces a perforated leather-wrapped steering wheel and brightly accented instruments. Sporty bucket seats up front and a 60/40-split folding rear bench accommodate up to five occupants. Cloth upholstery is standard; heated leather seats are optional. There is 29.5-cubic-foot cargo area behind the H3's rear seats and folding the backseat provides a maximum of 55.7 cubic feet of space. The base H3 is powered by a 242-horsepower, 3.7-liter inline-five-cylinder engine that makes 242 pounds-feet of torque, while the Alpha's 5.3-liter V-8 generates 300 hp and 320 pounds-feet of torque. Hummer says the Alpha can accelerate from zero to 60 mph in about 8 seconds, which isn't bad when you consider the SUV's near 5,000-pound curb weight. The V-8 gets an estimated 13/16 mpg (city/highway); in comparison, the inline-five with the automatic transmission gets 14/18 mpg. Regular H3's are rated to tow up to 4,500 pounds, but the Alpha can pull a hefty 6,000 pounds when properly equipped. Hummer says the smaller, more fuel-efficient H3 is about the same length as a typical midsize sedan — and therefore is able to maneuver through urban traffic. When necessary, however, the H3 can demonstrate Hummer's famous crawling and climbing abilities. The H3 can ford 16 inches of water at 20 mph or up to 2 feet if it slows to 5 mph. It can also climb 16-inch vertical steps and rocks. For 2008 a number of safety equipment is now standard, including side curtain and dual front airbags, four-wheel antilock brakes with traction control, electronic stability control system and a tire pressure monitoring system. The 2008 Hummer H3 can be a satisfying vehicle to own, especially for those drawn to its distinctive styling and macho image.

Sister Tarpley

On December 31, 2007 I received a call from a cousin of mine about "Watch Night Services." She asked me why we celebrate them. She also said that the reason for her inquiry was because she had talked to a pastor of a church asking her when their "Watch Night Services" would start that night and what the program would consist of because she was thinking of attending their services. The pastor told my cousin that "Watch Night Services" were started by slaves and that her church did not follow the tradition of celebrating "Watch Night Services." That started my cousin to thinking about the tradition of "Watch Night Services," and why we celebrate them.

I told her that my last column in 2006 told the common theory of why "Watch Night Services" has been celebrated throughout the years in the

WATCH NIGHT SERVICES

Black community and churches.

I told her that it is my belief, from my ancestor's view point, and the tradition they passed down to their heirs, was that "Watch Night Services" had more to do with my family and church thanking God for His blessings in tion of our discussion. I am going to research "Watch Night Services" and how they came about. In fact, my prayers are that many of my readers will give me some feed-back on this annual event in many African American churches and communities. I am asking you if you attend "Watch Night Services" now, or did you grow up attending them and for some reason stop attending them. Moreover, I am going to call some pastors that I know and ask them to give me their input; I will print their information in a future column. I will start with part of my column last year on this subject.

Excerpts from Sister Tarpley's Column, December 28, 2006

2006 will end with "Watch Night Services" at various churches in America in three days. For 100 years or more my ancestors celebrated "Night Watch Services." Later, I did the same and taught my children to do the same, not knowing why this was a tradition in my family.

This tradition brings warm memories to me. My parents, my siblings and I would often visit both sets of grandparents in Mexia, TX during the summer and the Christmas Holidays. At Deacon & Mother Demus' home, every Sunday morning everybody in the house would gathered in the living room; got on their knees and prayed prior to eating breakfast and going to church; this seemed to strengthen "family unity and love." To be continued January 17, 2008.

a family of four, the figure is $61,950. Other requirements include that the vehicle must have been registered within a participating county for the previous 12 months and have passed inspection within the past 15 months. The car or truck must be at least 10 years old. Officials say the program may remove as many as 40,000 older vehicles from the road.

"During the 2007 legislative session, more funds were approved for the vehicle emissions-auto replacement program," said Senator West. "When added to existing funds, about $100 million is now available to Texans to help buy new cars and clean up our air," said Senator West. "It's a win-win situation for everyone involved."

Brochures on the vehicle replacement program can be found at authorized vehicle inspection locations. Money is also available for minor vehicle repairs if a car fails inspection. If eligible, a voucher of up to $3,000 for gasoline-powered vehicles and $3,500 for hybrids will be issued and can be redeemed by participating auto dealers. The payments can go toward the purchase of a new car or truck, or a one to a two-year-old vehicle worth up to $25,000. The program will go into effect this month.

Dr. Creflo A. Dollar, a native of College Park Georgia, was awarded an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree from Oral Roberts University in 1998. Dollar is known for his teachings of prosperity theology which has netted him two Rolls-Royces, three private jets, a million-dollar home in Fayetteville, and a $2.5 million apartment in Manhattan. Dollar's message: that religious faithfulness will be rewarded by material wealth. He is the publisher of CHANGE magazine, a quarterly international publication with nearly 100,000 subscribers, and The Max, a bimonthly resource newsletter for ministers and ministry leaders. His award-winning Changing Your World television broadcast reaches nearly one billion homes in practically every country in the world. A much sought-after conference speaker and best-selling author, Dr. Dollar is known for his practical approach to the Bible and has encouraged thousands to pursue a personal relationship with God. Dr. Dollar and his wife, Taffi, have five children and live in Atlanta.

Dr. Creflo A. Dollar illuminates eight steps to the magnificent life you crave in his new book. Confidence, peace, and abundant life: we all long for these things. But in this life-changing book, Dr. Dollar challenges readers to stop wishing for a satisfying life. Instead, Dr. Dollar proclaims, we should be claiming the success that God promises today. We do not have to be defined by past failures or mediocrity; we must move forward into the richness available to us right now. God has designed a glorious destiny for each of us, and all we have to do is take hold of it.
