Obama Takes Potomac Primary

By Hazel Trice Edney
NNPA Editor-in-Chief

WASHINGTON (NNPA) - U. S. Sen. Barack Obama won big this week over Sen. Hillary Clinton in their contest to win the Democrat nomination to the presidency.

In a clean sweep of Tuesday's Potomac Primary - Washington, D.C., Maryland and Virginia - Obama took his number of pledged delegates to 1,215 to Clinton's 1,189.

"This movement won't stop until there's change in Washington. Tonight, we're on our way," declared Obama at a thunderous rally in Madison, Wis., where he moved ahead to campaign for votes in Wisconsin's Feb. 19 primary. Hawaii will also hold a primary that day.

"This is what change looks like when it happens from the bottom up," he told the Madison crowd in the televised speech. "This is the new American majority."

Obama's reference to a "movement" not only hits home with African-American voters, but with battle-weary voters of all races. Polls have shown that concern over the war in Iraq and economic issues

New Report: Black Children Doing Better Than Ever, But Still Trail White Children in Quality of Life

LOUISIANA (NNPA) - Black children are doing better than ever, but still have a long way to go before closing the racial-ethnic gap in quality of life, according to a report released last month, by the Foundation for Child Development (FCD).

The report was the first ever to analyze and compare trends in the well-being of Black, white, and Hispanic children over a span of nearly two decades.

According to the report, all children experienced overall improvements in quality of life between 1985 and 2004. However, because improvements were greater for Black and Hispanic children during this time span - particularly after 1993 - the gap between them and Whites is narrowing.

But even if trends continue at their current pace, it will take at least an entire generation to fully eliminate these gaps.

"Even if we manage to continue to make progress towards closing the racial-ethnic gaps in children's well-being at the same rate we have been, it would take another 18 years before Black children essentially caught up with White children," Ruby Takanishi, President/CEO of FCD, said last week. "As a leading world superpower,

Black Consumer Report Boosts Power of the Black Press

By Hazel Trice Edney
NNPA Editor-in-Chief

LAS VEGAS (NNPA) - Black consumers, with an annual worth of nearly $750 billion in buying power, are disrespected on a daily basis by merchants across the nation. Now, Black-owned newspapers - which regularly endure discrimination in ad sales and publish weekly news stories of racial profiling, false accusations and disparate arrests of customers in retail stores, shops and businesses - have a new tool by which to empower those local and national reports of injustices by disclosing the worth of African-American consumers.

"Every time you do a story about a grocer who disrespected a customer and that customer calls and says, 'They do this stuff all the time...And that customer calls and says, 'I want you to write them up because I'm going to sue them,' when you do the story, just put in, 'According to Target Market News, Black Households in Philadelphia [for example] spent $25 million on tires, on gasoline, on groceries,' says Ken Smikle, president of Target Market News, which annually releases "The Buying Power of Black America."

Making Sure Our Children Know Their History

By Marian Wright Edelman

"Those who have no record of what their forebears have accomplished lose the inspiration which comes from the teaching of biography and history." So said Dr. Carter G. Woodson, the scholar and historian who is called "The Father of Black History," and who founded Negro History Week in 1926 to help give this record and inspiration to other Black Americans.

At the time Dr. Woodson was alarmed because so few people, White or Black, knew anything at all about Black history and Black people's achievements. He would even meet other Black college history professors who had no idea Blacks had made any significant contributions to national or world history. Dr. Woodson understood just how critical it was to claim our rightful place in the history books, and so the national celebration of Black history was born.

While you ponder that thought we would like to announce that Minority Opportunity News, Inc., formerly a Dallas based renaissance community tabloid, founded in 1991, has relocated to Plano, Texas, and changed our name to MON-The Gazette. In addition to moving our offices to Plano, our editorial coverage has also shifted to encompass Dallas' Northern Corridor. The Northern Corridor is clearly the fastest growing region in Texas, if not in America. MON-The Gazette believes that the engine to continue this growth is the airport expansion in McKinney, which is the largest and most visible of many area opportunities. As always, and true to tradition, MON-The Gazette will be there carving a world of opportunity for those seeking to provide quality services. Should you dare to expand your quest for economic parity outside the southern region or just want to know what is going on up north- Think of MON-The Gazette as your paper of opportunity!

THE TRUTH CLINIC

Bush Conservatism Smacks of Deceptive Advertising

John McCain, following his primary victories on Super Tuesday, appeared to solidify his status as the front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination. He declared that he was the conservative leader who could unite the party.

President Bush, speaking at the Conservative Political Action Conference, urged conservatives to unite behind the presumptive Republican nominee to ensure his election as the successor president.

For many conservatives the main question hanging over John McCain's head at this time is: Is he conservative enough? While he claims that he has always been on the conservative team many hard line conservatives don't consider McCain as being on their team and don't want to be on his team.

McCain has established himself as embracing many of President Bush's disastrous policies. His support of the U.S. military mission in Iraq is a mainstay of his campaign contrary to the wishes of two-thirds of Americans.

While it is difficult to predetermine the validity of campaign promises the conservatism that President Bush campaigned on is not what his administration delivered to the American people. He promised a tax cut, an end to nation-building, smaller government, and an administration that would restore honor and integrity to the White House. Those were the recurring themes of his campaigns.

The conservatism that George Bush perpetrated on the American people does not adhere to the principles of democracy and liberty nor did it deliver less government. Under Bush, power has been concentrated in fewer hands in both the government and corporate sectors. It does not matter that the political power that was allocated by the constitution to the executive, legislative, and judicial branches instead of being conferred by a right of birth because Bush conservatism has usurped power and transformed popular elections to the equivalent of third world chicanery. The result is the accumulation and concentration of political and economic power has become a threat to both democracy and liberty.

True conservatives understand that power corrupts. The true conservative are not blind to the corruption in the Bush administration and Republicans are beginning to break ranks with the President as evidenced by his lowest ever approval ratings.

The very words "nation building" were considered derogatory when candidate Bush first ran for the White House. He promised to end the nation-building policies associated with the Clinton administration.

Now, seven years later, American intervention in Iraq, Afghanistan and other countries are examples of how nation-building and nation-destroying have become the dominant feature of his administration's foreign policy.

The administration would have Americans believe that this policy reversal resulted from the terrorist attacks of September 11. The reality is that the threats of terror preexisted September 11 as did the Bush plans to explicitly control affairs in the Middle East.

In Afghanistan and Iraq the Bush administration in its ego driven quest for power has found itself enmeshed in the daily workings of failed states and has taken on responsibilities as far ranging as protecting government leaders, repairing infrastructure, and serving as a de-facto police force to a predominantly hostile citizenry. The American presence has resulted in the loss of thousands of American lives, cost billions of dollars, and directly contradicted how candidate Bush said he would govern as president.

The highly touted Bush tax cuts are in reality smoke and mirrors. In essence he deferred sending Americans their tax bills by increasing the national debt. He also redistributed a significant portion of the tax burden from the wealthiest Americans to the middle class.

Government cannot make a real tax cut without either decreasing spending or securing additional money from other sources. Bush has replaced a $236 billion surplus in 2000 with a 2008 deficit of $410 billion by borrowing money that puts the country in unprecedented debt. Is this fiscal conservatism? Bush promised a tax cut both to get votes and to redistribute the tax burden from the wealthy to the middle class.

Real conservatives want smaller government and were duped by Bush promises. Instead of delivering on this promise Bush is loading up the bureaucracy and peeking in our windows while simultaneously telling Americans that law-abiding citizens have nothing to fear from increased domestic surveillance and disappearing civil liberties.

If this is the Bush conservative formula that John McCain intends to follow then conservatives, independents, evangelicals, and disillusioned Republicans need to question party loyalty and look elsewhere for leadership.

Former Mugabe Minister to Challenge Mugabe in Polls

(NNPA) – A senior member of Robert Mugabe's Zanu-PF has broken with the president and will challenge him in elections scheduled for next month.

Speaking to the press, the 57-year-old Simba Makoni said:

"Following very extensive and intensive consultations ... I hereby advise the people of Zimbabwe that I offer myself as candidate for the office of president...Let me confirm that I share the agony and anguish of all citizens over the extreme hardships that we all have endured for nearly 10 years now," added Makoni, who lost his finance minister's job in 2002 over policy differences with Mr. Mugabe.

"I also share the widely held view that these hardships are a result of failure of national leadership and that change at that level is a prerequisite for change at other levels of national endeavour."

Mugabe is seeking a sixth term in office in presidential elections on March 29.

Makoni's bid emerged after the opposition Movement for Democratic Change failed to agree on a candidate to take on 83-year-old Mugabe.

Zimbabwe's economy now has an annual inflation rate of more than 26,000 percent, the highest in the world. Only an estimated one adult in five has a job.

Mandela's Wife Warns Against "Ethnic Chaos"

(NNPA) – Former first lady of Mozambique and South Africa, Graca Machel, urged Kenyans to avoid the slippery slope toward ethnic chaos.

"Do not let your country go the ethnic way, because if you do, you are going to boil each other. Then there is going to be no country to speak of," she cautioned.

Wife of former president Nelson Mandela, Machel is part of the mediation team that includes former Secy Gen. Kofi Annan, among others. She herself took part in armed struggle in pre-independence Mozambique through her active participation in the Mozambican Liberation Front (Frelimo).

"Our anger should be against injustice and the inability to recognize our rights. Anger is being thrown towards the wrong direction which can throw the country into an ocean of bloodshed," she said.

Addressing a group of women leaders, she lamented the absence of more women at the negotiation table. Saida Ali, head of the Young Women's Leadership Institute, echoed her concern. "Where have the women been since the madness began? Why did we wait so long for women and children to die before we could step in to help?" she said.

"As women," said Mrs. Machel, "we are the ones who carry the child in our wombs, who give birth, who go through the same pain. We know that all the children we give birth to are born equal, (despite ethnic origin). That is why it is up to us to demand that the children of this nation be treated equally. That should be the voice of women in bringing peace in this country," said Mrs. Machel.

About 1,000 people have died and up to 300,000 have been displaced since the disputed re-election of Mwai Kibaki on Dec. 30.

America can do and should do better than this."

The report is entitled "Racial-Ethnic Inequality in Child Well-Being from 1985-2004: Gaps Narrowing but Persist." The researchers pulled data from several years of the FCD Child Well-Being Index (CWI) - an annual analysis of the quality of life for all American children. It found that the gap in the overall quality of life separating Black children from White children narrowed by 26 percent - a change driven largely by promising improvements in safety, economic security and health for children of color.

A few other key findings of the report include:

- Education is stagnant: While Black children have made progress in many areas, substantial gaps in education between White and Black children have shown little improvement. The Black disadvantage in preschool enrollment has been eliminated, but the gaps in reading and math indicators have barely changed, and the same is true of the Black-White gap in completing a Bachelor's degree.

- Black children have seen the biggest improvement in their likelihood to commit a violent crime.

- While the likelihood of all youth voting is up, Black youth are now more likely to vote than ever before, and the likelihood of Black youth voting is improving faster than it is for White children.

- The poverty gap between White children and Black children is closing. While rates of poverty are decreasing for all racial/ethnic groups, they are decreasing more rapidly for Black children than they are for White children.

- Gaps in family economic well-being narrowed for both Black and Hispanic children as parental employment and health insurance coverage increased.

- Obesity rates rose less for Black and Hispanic children, although they remain higher than for Whites.

- Both Black children and Hispanic children were advantaged compared to White children in the emotional/spiritual domain.

"With the possibility of an economic recession, policies should aim to protect the economic security of American families, as well as key programs in health and education that support the largest number of children, especially those whose families earn below the median family income," said Don Hernandez, researcher and author of the report. "A number of the positive changes outlined in this report can be attributed to smart policies and an active community. If we want to continue to improve our children's lives, we must continue push for this kind of smart policy."

The FCD Child Well Being Index CWI is an annual analysis of the quality of life for American children. It measures how well or poorly they are doing in seven areas: Health, Poverty, Education, Safety and Behavioral Concerns, Social Relationships, Community Connectedness and Emotional/Spiritual Well-Being, and then compares how well our children are doing today with how they have done in the past - to give an overall sense of whether their quality of life is improving over time.

Texas Health Care Association Urges Wide-Ranging Debate on Medicaid Financing Issues in 2008 State, Federal Elections

New Eldercare Reform Plan Released in Washington D.C. Serves as Excellent Vehicle to Drive Policy Discussion

AUSTIN, Texas -- Saying it is time for the state of Texas to have a major public policy discussion of eldercare financing issues in the 2008 state and federal elections, the Texas Health Care Association (THCA) praised the release in Washington, D.C. today of a new long term and post acute care reform proposal that strengthens the financial underpinnings of the nation's Medicaid program with private sector investment, and ensures seniors now and in the years to come will have maximum choice and quality across the spectrum of long term care settings and services.

"With demand for long term care across the range of care settings growing, we encourage Texas' consumers, providers, regulators and lawmakers to have an intelligent, far-reaching policy discussion about strengthening the financial underpinnings of Medicaid - vital to so many of our most vulnerable citizens," stated Tim Graves, President of THCA. "With Medicaid financing a joint state-federal responsibility, we sincerely hope our Austin and Washington-based lawmakers can help address the fact Texas ranks toward the very bottom nationally in terms of the average Medicaid reimbursement rate. The plan released today has the potential to help drive a necessary debate about strengthening Medicaid at a time when demographic challenges are mounting."

Graves said a THCA compilation of the most recently available Medicaid payment rate data by the national accounting firm BDO Seidman, and the Lancaster Group, finds the average daily Texas Medicaid rate at $106.59 - 49th in the nation. The national average rate is $153.83, according to the data. Comparably for the region, the New Mexico ranks 30th nationally, at $137.24; Oklahoma ranks 44th, at $116.84; Arkansas ranks 47th, at $111.76; and Louisiana ranks 45th, at $115.00.

The reform plan - prepared with the assistance of Avalere Health, LLC and released jointly at a National Press Club policy briefing by the American Health Care Association (AHCA), National Center for Assisted Living (NCAL) and Alliance for Quality Nursing Home Care - features a restructuring of the Medicaid financing system based partly on more private sector involvement. Medicaid, established in 1965, and which currently finances the lion's share of long-term care in America, remains a literal lifeline for Texas' less fortunate elderly. The THCA President said Medicaid must be reformed in a manner that ensures consistent care and services, adequate financing and payment stability, and that helps relieve the financial pressures on state government.

Concluded Graves, "It is a positive development that we've seen so much talk on the presidential campaign trail about improving Americans' access to health care, but we must also hear far more throughout 2008 about strengthening our long term care system so every Texan will have access to quality care when they need it."

are fueling the swelling support for Democratic candidates after eight years of the Bush administration.

Meanwhile, Sen. Clinton is scheduled to kick off her campaign in Wisconsin on Saturday. She is scheduled to attend a Democratic Dinner in Milwaukee.

With 2,025 delegates needed to win the nomination, it is still far from final who will come out the Democratic nominee. There are 18 more primaries to go with 1,375 more delegates up for grabs.

The next primaries are: Feb. 19: Hawaii and Wisconsin; March 4: Ohio, Rhode Island, Texas and Vermont; March 8: Wyoming; March 11: Mississippi; April 22: Pennsylvania; May 3: Guam; May 6: Indiana and North Carolina; May 13: West Virginia; May 20: Kentucky and Oregon; June 3: Montana and South Dakota; June 7: Puerto Rico.

Much debate is taking place over super delegates, Democratic Party leaders, who could break a tie if the race between Obama and Clinton are too close to call by the Aug. 25-28 Democratic Convention. Clinton currently has 261 super delegates to Obama's 178.

However, one super delegate, Jason Roe, appearing on CNN Tuesday night, predicted that a winner will be clear by the Pennsylvania primary April 22.

The big Potomac win comes after a weekend sweep also to Obama's favor. He won handily in primaries held in Nebraska, Louisiana and Washington State.

The Clinton campaign appears to be taking Obama's big wins in stride, anticipating comebacks with big primaries such as Texas with 228 delegates and Ohio with 161, both on March 4. Pennsylvania on April 22 with 188 delegates and North Carolina on May 6 with 134 delegates are also among the big prizes.

Obama's weekend and Tuesday wins came as no surprise. Polls have long shown him as favored in those states.

Working for Obama's favor in conservative Virginia were Richmond Mayor L. Douglas Wilder, who was elected there in 1989 as the nation's first Black governor; the endorsements of U.

S. Rep. Bobby Scott and Gov. Tim Kaine also helped. In Maryland, Rep. Elijah Cummings has long campaigned for Obama. In D. C., Mayor Adrian Fenty has supported Obama. Also, amidst the excitement of this week's primary, another key Obama endorsement was announced.

D. C. Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton announced her endorsement of Obama.

"Barack will be an exceptional president," she said in a statement. "He is the president that our country, our party and this city needs at this turning point in our history."

As a super delegate for the convention, Holmes said she had expected to make her endorsement closer to the general election. However, she explained that she felt the need to announce her choice in order to commit her super delegate vote to Obama if it is needed in a tie.

Despite what appears to be an Obama craze of sorts sweeping the country, even he realizes the race is not nearly over.

He told the cheering Wisconsin crowd, "We have much further to go."

11th Annual Trailblazer Awards

Over the last eleven years, forty-three men and women received the Harriet Tubman Trailblazer Honor. Annually, during Black History Month, the Saint Mark Baptist Church of McKinney has recognized African-Americans throughout Collin County for their exemplary achievements and outstanding service to the community. Sunday February 10th, Hattie Kelly and Thurman R. Jones were named recipients of the 2008 Harriet Tubman Trailblazer Award. The theme of this year's event was "A Celebration of Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow: Celebrating the History of African-American Greeks." Senior Pastor Charles S. Wattley, began the celebration with a prayer, followed by the Negro National Anthem, "Life Every Voice." The event ended with the presentation of the 2008 Harriet Tubman Trailblazer Tribute Awards. Ms. Kelly was acknowledged for her devotion to her Farmersville based company, Power Pages Publishing. Mr. Thurman Jones was memorialized for the long years of hard work put into building his well-known, Plano-based newspaper, (I'll give you a hint, you're reading it at this very moment...) The North Dallas Gazette, formerly MON The Gazette. "I'm honored that Saint Mark thinks enough of my community involvement to recognize it," Mr. Jones shared.

The honorees were praised as distinguished, extraordinary citizens, and commendable members of the community. Saint Mark's own passionate choir handled the musical score with grace and ease. Following the presentation, Michael Sorrell, Paul Quinn College President, made a special guest appearance. Mr. Sorrell provided the keynote speech of the night focusing on leadership, after which, Pastor Charles Wattley closed the ceremony with a blessing.

The Designing Dreams retail boutique, located at South Side on Lamar, provides young designers with a venue to sell their lines directly to consumers. Porter stated, "We now have seven girls and three boys involved. Every Saturday, we work with the youth." They teach them key fundamental skills, such as

Perhaps more importantly the students are taught how to come together as a team. For example, Porter said, "If I teach one person, they

The inaugural event will take place at the Warner Theatre in Washington, D.C., on Saturday, January 12, and premiere on the network during Black History Month on Friday, February 22 at 8:00 p.m., ET/PT. Additional presenters and performers will be announced shortly.

"We are thrilled to present the first-ever BET HONORS and pay tribute to the thinkers, trailblazers and trendsetters whose accomplishments serve as inspirations for current and future generations," said Debra Lee, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, BET Networks. "Each of these remarkable individuals has made significant contributions to the Black community and American culture overall, and BET Networks is proud to recognize them through this very special, new tentpole event. We've done a number of significant shows in other cities, but what better place to honor these individuals than in our home city of Washington, D.C."

Dallas Defenders Of New Premier Basketball League (PBL) Season Underway

The Dallas Defenders of the new Premier Basketball League (PBL) inaugural season, which will begin in January. The local Dallas ownership group is headed by Erin Patton, the renowned brand management expert hand-picked by Michael Jordan as architect of Nike's JORDAN brand. Patton also recently spearheaded the launch of NBA star Stephon Marbury's affordable Starbury line of sports apparel and $14.98 basketball shoes. (Marbury has agreed to outfit the Dallas team with his clothing line.)

modeled on the success of minor league baseball. Further, the team will support a number of community initiatives, such as offering Amber alert registration for parents and kids.

Patton introduced the new team's head coach Chuck Davisson, a former assistant coach of the Minnesota Timberwolves and advance scout for the Los Angeles Lakers; Nancy Lieberman, a Dallas Defenders team consultant, NBA Hall of Fame player, and two-time Olympian; and Equity Bank's Paul Cohen, a Board Member.

Local hero, Chris Moore, McKinney, TX native and a standout shooting guard at Tulane, is among the top players on the team, as is Luis "Triksz" Da Silva, the former Harlem Wizard widely known as the "greatest ball handler in the world." Triksz was the youngest basketball athlete (age 18) ever signed by Nike.

"The PBL operates with a "Fans Come First" mission. Our players will participate in fan meet-and-greets after each game, sign autographs and pose for pictures," said Kenny "The Jet" Smith, the PBL Commissioner, former NBA star and TNT hoops analyst. "We also intend to make sure ensure that ticket and concession prices remain fan-friendly, as well."

The ten-team Premier Basketball League season concludes with its championship playoffs in April 2008. The Dallas Defender will play their home games at the Alfred J. Loos Fieldhouse, 3815 Spring Valley Road, Addison, TX. Other PBL franchises are the Arkansas Impact, Chicago Aztecas, Jacksonville Jam, Maryland

Their call may be preventing your arrest!

Municipal Services Bureau (MSB) is partnering with Texas jurisdictions to remind people with outstanding warrants to make payment in full on outstanding fines prior to the mid-February annual statewide "Warrant Round-Up." MSB is working with Texas courts, sending notifications to defendants to remind them to resolve their obligations or face arrest. The Warrant Roundup begins on February 16th in most areas. "We are giving defendants the opportunity to clear their name before the annual statewide Round-Up begins. If you receive a letter or a phone call from us, please take note as it may be your last reminder about an unpaid balance," says Med Fadel, MSB's Chief Operating Officer. In addition to in-person payments at the two Plano Municipal Court locations, The City of Plano Municipal Court offers the option to pay warrant fines and costs via online or telephone through Government Payment EXP (GPE). are watching with excitement as Senator Barack Obama makes contemporary Black history before our eyes just as Senator Hillary Clinton is making women's history. Many children are now taught in school about some of the lions of Black history, like Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Rosa Parks. Who else should we be sure to teach our children about to inspire them today?

They should know about our earliest heroes like 18th century poet Phyllis Wheatley and scientist Benjamin Banneker, as well as freedom fighters like Frederick Douglass, Harriet Tubman, Sojourner Truth and so many others who were born in slavery but never gave up in their passion to be free. They should know about the following generation of brilliant Black leaders and thinkers like W.E.B. DuBois, Booker T. Washington, and Ida B. Wells-Barnett and about pioneering inventors and educators like George Washington Carver and Carter Woodson himself. They should study the Harlem Renaissance and the writers, musicians and artists who bloomed there and changed American culture forever.

They should learn about civil rights leader A. Philip Randolph, whose first threatened Civil Rights March on Washington inspired the second, and Ralph Bunche, who won the Nobel Peace Prize for his U.N. peacemaking efforts in the Middle East. He, like Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., who won the Nobel Peace Prize 14 years later, refused to be "ghettoized" and saw the connection between the quest for justice at home as part of a global struggle. Young people must celebrate all the strong women who were indispensable in the struggle for freedom: Fannie Lou Hamer, Ella Baker, Septima Clark and so many more. Our youth should bask in the light of pioneers who broke racial barriers throughout the 20th century including Marian Anderson, the Tuskegee Airmen, Jackie Robinson, Thurgood Marshall, Shirley Chisholm and Mae Jemison. Of course they should applaud our elders and honor them for their lifetimes of achievement: civil and human rights leaders like Myrlie Evers and Dr. Dorothy Height, scholars like Dr. John Hope Franklin, and cultural leaders like Harry Belafonte, Ruby Dee (who at age 83 is nominated for an Oscar at this month's Academy Award® ceremony for Best Supporting Actress) and Dr. Maya Angelou. The list of great Black Americans goes on and on, and our children should know their stories and be given the tools and motivation to emulate them. Finally, we should teach our children as much as we can about the heroes in their own families and try to be the people we want our children to become: the grandparents and great-grandparents who came before them and paved their way. Family stories are often the most memorable inspiration of all. They bring history alive and reinforce the idea that anyone and everyone can use their lives to make a difference. This is a key lesson not just for Black History Month but every day. Every time we look back at our history to celebrate, we must remind ourselves and our children of just how much unfinished business we must attend to and be inspired by our history to write the next chapter.

Envision Garland Kicks Off Planning For Garland's Future

Garland - February marks the launch of Envision Garland, the City of Garland's citywide effort to develop a comprehensive plan addressing the opportunities and issues that affect the community's future. The project will identify a vision and lay out a master plan to achieve that future, impending challenges, and take full advantage of the opportunities in Garland's future. The City of Garland invites all residents, property owners, and business owners to participate in the development of the Envision Garland comprehensive plan.

Envision Garland kicks off with a citywide opinion survey, which is included in the February edition of the Garland City Press and is also available online at <http://www.envisiongarland.org>. Garland residents (ages 18 and up) are encouraged to complete the survey and submit it to the Planning Department by March 15, 2008, as indicated on the survey form.

The survey is the first of several opportunities that residents, property owners, business owners, and other stakeholders will have to share their vision, their hopes, and their concerns about Garland's future. Throughout 2008, the City will host a series of public workshops and meetings to take additional public input into the development of the new comprehensive plan for Garland.

A comprehensive plan is a written document identifying goals, policies, and strategies for the growth and development of a community. The plan reflects community values and provides a guide for making land use changes, planning capital improvement programs, and directing future growth.

Comprehensive plans often address the topics of land use; economic development; neighborhood vitality; urban design; infrastructure and transportation; parks, open space, and the environment; and special districts within the city. Most importantly, the plan should address those opportunities and issues that will affect the city's growth, development, and vitality in the future.

For additional information on Envision Garland, please visit the Envision Garland website at <http://www.envisiongarland.org> or call (972) 205-2865.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH CONTINUES

they are slow to recognize that there are many Black Americans that have excelled, and are continuing to invent effective and life-changing devices, they use math and science to make a difference in how we live, work, play, and entertain today. As a parent, grandparent, and a teacher, I also wish that all history of great magnitude is put in textbooks, especially Black history, which is, as I have stated, the history of America and the world; in spite of what we have been taught. But wishing it is not going to get the information in our textbooks on the grand scale that it needs to be. It's going to take changing minds and hearts of our society to accomplish that. What needs to be done is for Texas and California, two states that purchase the largest amount of textbooks, demand that textbooks are updated with relevant, useful and accurate history. I guarantee you that when it's the bottom line (business profits) that counts and it's in the best interest of publishers; textbooks will reflect history

February is not just Black History month, and it's not just America's history, but it's the history of the World that we are celebrating. There are great and valuable inventions that are being used worldwide and they are taken for granted that were invented by Black Americans. Henry T. Sampson in 1911 invented the cell phone. From the cell phone we have the iPod, the Blackberry, etc. Dr. Philip Emeagwali, considered a 'father of the Internet' helped give birth to the 'supercomputer' the technology that spawned the Internet, World Wide Web (WWW.) Otis Boykin invented more than 25 electronic devices that are used in computers and guided missiles today.

Various industries that are vital to America's success have been profoundly influenced by the contributions of Black Inventors. There is an endless list of contributions by Black people in America. We would not have many agriculture and automobiles products; and communications as we know it. Thank God for Black History Month.

Several individuals think it's an accident that Black Americans have done anything worthwhile. Certain people easily accept that we have a few famous entertainers, sports figures and a few entrepreneurs making millions of dollars; but more accurately.

Read the story of Carter G. Woodson, Father of Black History (December 1875 – April 1950) it is a captivating and inspiration story in itself.

Dr. Woodson said, "Those who have no record of what their forebears have accomplished lose the inspiration which comes from the teaching of biography and history." Dr. Woodson, a distinguished Black author, editor, publisher, and historian put his money, life, blood, sweat and tears in establishing Black History Week, (in the 1960s it was established as Black History MONTH) he believed that Africa Americans should know their past in order to participate intelligently in the affairs in our country. He strongly believed that Black history—which others (even some Black Americans) have tried so diligently to erase—is a firm foundation for young Black Americans to build on in order to become productive citizens of our society.

Dr. Woodson often stated that he hoped the time would come when Negro History Week would be unnecessary; when all Americans would willingly recognize the contributions of Black Americans as a legitimate and integral part of the history of this country. His concept has given a profound sense of dignity to all Black Americans; and we must not forget it! Nor should we stop Black History Month as some believe.

Smikle encouraged Black publishers convening in Las Vegas last week, "Put the number in there so that people will get a sense of their value and their power."

Among the figures in the report – which lists incomes as well as expenditures: Total earned income among African-Americans has risen from $719 billion in 2005 to $744.1 billion in 2006, a 3.5 percent increase. It also shows a nearly 90 percent increase in earned income among African-Americans over the past decade, from $392 billion in 1997.

It also reports that African-Americans spend $3.5 billion on consumer electronics a year, among the highest level of expenditures. That includes $1 billion on TVs, VCRs and related equipment.

The figures also show Black women spending $143 million on shoes annually while men spend $139 million. They spend even more for their children, the report shows - $251 million for girls footwear and $269 million for boys.

Parents in the audience, including Washington Informer publisher Denise Rolark Barnes, who has two sons, concluded that the purchase of pricey athletic shoes might account for the higher dollar amount spent on boys footwear.

"Every shoe manufacturer in the world, from Nike to Florsheim, should be doing business with us," Smikle says.

A former editor with the New York Amsterdam News, Smikle drew chuckles from the audience when he said he considers himself to be "an honorary member" of the NNPA. He articulated the tribulations of the Black Press. "Give yourself some power by giving your readers their power," he says.

Smikle believes the report, which gives both local and national configurations of Black buying power, is also a powerful tool for advertising sales for the Black Press, which is often a target of discrimination by local merchants and major corporations.

"It really would be nice if Black newspaper sales folks were the ones to come in to say, 'I've got something new for you that nobody else has,'" Smikle told the group. Using the Barack Obama presidential campaign as an example of the energy that could come about with new information, he said, "It's time for us to energize our base... We must engage this country in a conversation."

One In A Million

Dallas entrepreneur couple James and Valder Beebe, were inducted into 2007 National and Texas Black Marriage Hall of Fame by The Alliance for North Texas Healthy Effective Marriages (ANTHEM) coalition and The Marriage Day Marriage

Hall of Fame. James and Valder began with a sweep-you-off-your-feet romance here in Dallas. He was visiting his brother but had to return to Lansing, Michigan, after two glorious weeks. At home James called daily, playing piano and singing to

Valder in his Larry Graham voice. The turning point came quickly. After a few weeks of his calls and her letters, he phoned and sang Stevie Wonder's "I Just Called to Say I Love You." Then he confessed, "I can't live without you." James and Valder have been married 23 years have two children, and are still enjoying an incredible love affair and friendship.

As the authors of the e-book, "20 Inspirations for an Inspiring Marriage" currently available on www.valderbeebe.com and [phy-by-james.com, the authors have extended their "happiness ratio" with this downloadable book. The book can be downloaded free until February 15th, and then it reverts to the price of \$9.99. The Beebe's state "we want everyone who](http://www.photogra- to experience the joy that we have through our love-affair." James and Valder Beebe are profiled in the February 2008 issue of the Dallas, Texas publication, Epitome Magazine (epitomemagazine.com) as the magazine role model couple.
