NTTA Board approves new diversity policy

(NDG Wire) On Wed, Jan. 20, the North Texas Tollway Authority (NTTA) Board of Directors approved a new Diversity Policy, which outlines the specific programs and goals to ensure participation of disadvantaged, minority, women-owned and small business enterprises in all NTTA contracting opportunities.

“By implementing industry best practices as well as recommendations from the 2008 Availability and Disparity Study (A&D Study), we have created an effective Diversity Policy that will assist the NTTA in achieving more diverse participation,” said NTTA Assistant Executive Director of Administrative Services Kim Tolbert. “I am pleased we were able to align our policy with the current needs and objectives of the organization. I anticipate more diverse participation moving forward.”

The new policy confirms NTTA’s commitment to diversity in contracting and procurement opportunities by:

What Texans should know about providing their social security number

BY GREG ABBOTT
TEXAS ATTORNEY GENERAL

According to the Federal Trade Commission, Texas ranks second in the nation for identity theft complaints. In 2008, nearly 32,000 Texans were identity theft victims and, as a result, lost thousands of dollars and hours of time attempting to correct their credit ratings and personal financial history.

Identity theft occurs when a criminal illegally uses someone else’s personal information: a name, address, driver’s license number, credit or debit card account number or Social Security number to commit fraud or other crimes.

Fortunately, increased identity theft awareness has made Texans much more cautious about freely providing their personal information. One particularly sensitive part of a person’s identity is his or her Social Security number (SSN). Many Texans call the Office of the Attorney General (OAG) to

Do Democrats have what it takes to lead?

BY JAMES BREEDLOVE

While Democrats have shown they have the political skills to win elections they have not shown they have the political fortitude or attitude to lead.

What matters most in politics is the public’s perception of the party in power. Obama is president and the Democrats hold majorities in both Houses of Congress because voters became so dissatisfied with former President Bush’s dictatorial image, the war in Iraq, and the series of scandals that made Republicans appear to be a cesspool of corruption.

A troubling signs for Democrats is that the public is losing faith in their ability to lead on virtually every domestic issue including healthcare, the economy, double digit unemployment, the trillion dollar debt, and corporate bailouts.

While recent polls do not validate the Republican image, the war in Iraq,

Susan E. Rice

Susan E. Rice, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, a member of President Barack Obama's Cabinet and a national security advisor, will be the 2010 Commencement speaker at Stanford University.

Stanford's 119th Commencement Weekend, scheduled June 11-13, also will feature a Class Day lecture by philosophy Professor Debra Satz and a Baccalaureate address by Eboo Patel, a member of President Barack Obama's faith advisory council and founder and executive director of the Interfaith Youth Core.

"Ambassador Rice was chosen to represent America at the United Nations in order to advance international peace and security, strengthen human rights and support democracy," said university President John Hennessy. "Her goals mirror those of Stanford: to tackle the most pressing global challenges, including addressing climate change and combating poverty, disease and violence to promote peace. I am proud that a Stanford alumna is in this vital international role, and I know she will challenge our graduates to embark on meaningful lives as our next generation of leaders."

Ambassador Rice has long been involved in political, economic, security and humanitarian issues. As Assistant Secretary, she formulated and implemented overall U.S. policy for 48 countries of Sub-Saharan Africa and oversaw the management of 43 U.S. Embassies. Rice was co-recipient of the White House's 2000 Samuel Nelson Drew Memorial Award for distinguished contributions to the formation of peaceful, cooperative relationships between states. She served as the Director for International Organizations and Peacekeeping on the National Security Council staff from 1993 until 1995. Rice was also a management consultant with McKinsey and Company and served on numerous boards, including the National Democratic Institute, the Partnership for Public Service and the U.S. Fund for UNICEF.

Senior Class Presidents Walter Foxworth, Dan Ha, Ansaif Kareem and Aria Florant said that Rice's Stanford connection and position of global significance would be most welcome at the Commencement ceremony.

"We are thrilled that Ambassador Rice will return to Stanford to share her perspective on some of the greatest challenges facing the world," the Class Presidents said in a joint statement. "She is in a position of international leadership with a record of service promoting peace and humanity. Every one of us will benefit from hearing how we can similarly go forth and make a difference in the world with a Stanford education."

Ambassador Rice earned a bachelor's degree in history from Stanford in 1986. She was a Truman Scholar and graduated junior Phi Beta Kappa. She received her Masters in Philosophy and Doctorate of Philosophy in International Relations from New College, Oxford University, England, where she was a Rhodes Scholar.

Joyce Baumbach

Plano City Manager Tom Muehlenbeck has announced the retirement of Joyce Baumbach, Director of Libraries, effective January 31, 2010.

"The Plano Public Library System has always been a vital part of our community, reflecting and responding to the information and literacy needs of our citizenry through unrivaled service and programming," said Muehlenbeck. "To enjoy the legacy Joyce has nurtured over her 22-years of service to our Plano citizens, one only has to walk through the doors of any of our five all-star Plano public library facilities."

After entering the Plano Public Library System on May 23, 1988, Baumbach was promoted to Library Systems Administrator in March 1994, Technical Services Manager in February 1996 and assumed the position of Director of Libraries in February 1999.

"Joyce capably oversaw the construction of both Maribelle M. Davis and Christopher A. Parr Libraries as well as numerous expansions and remodels at our other three library facilities," said Mr. Muehlenbeck. "She has responded to the needs of our community by employing an enthusiastic and customer-service oriented staff and introducing relevant children, teen and adult programming and technology access into our library system."

Under her leadership, Harrington, Schimelpfenig, Haggard, Davis and Parr libraries continue to be prime sources for community and regional information. Patron visits are rapidly approaching the 2 million mark annually and the loan and distribution of materials has surpassed 3 million items annually. Exciting and relevant informational, educational and social programming reaches all ages, from infant to teens to seniors, with a broad slate of bi-lingual and literacy programming also enhancing library services.

Under Baumbach's guidance, technology has become a major element in library programming meeting both the need and demand for public access to computerized services and desktop program access. Her development of a 1995 Internet Policy relating to public Internet access from library computers was quickly identified as groundbreaking, leading to national attention and emulation. The library Web site continues to top the "most popular" list of municipal departmental pages and the expansion of online cata-

Dr. Homero Cavazos

Dr. Homero Cavazos continues to create a list of success stories by implementing a revolutionary, drug-free approach to treating some of today's most common childhood neurodevelopmental disorders. Cavazos' attributes his success to his unique, multi-modal therapy program, "BrainworX". BrainworX is a comprehensive, brain-based rehabilitation program, which targets neurological deficiencies identified with AD/HD, autism, dyslexia, Asperger's, and various learning disabilities. The therapy offers long-awaited answers to frustrated parents, teachers, and most importantly children.

What differentiates BrainworX from other therapeutic approaches is the unique combination of biomedical therapy, neurological rehabilitation, and dietary/nutritional support.

Biomedical therapy involves the use laboratory analysis to determine the most efficient combination of natural herbs and supplements needed to correct biochemical deficiencies in the body. Identifying neurological deficiencies is vital in creating an effective treatment plan. Dr. Cavazos evaluates functional and structural weaknesses such as balance, gross/fine motor abnormalities, and posture along with behavior questionnaires to assess neurological deficiencies.

Proper nutrition plays an important role in your child's success. BrainworX utilizes the latest and most accurate laboratory testing available to identify which dietary changes will be most beneficial for your child. Find out what is needed for your child before putting him/her on a restrictive and lifestyle changing diet.

BrainworX unique multi-modal treatment approach, allows activation, stabilization, and retraining of the brain's underdeveloped areas. BrainworX patients have seen decreases in impulsivity, aggression, and anxiety. Children have also seen great improvement in verbal skills, attention and focus capabilities, and balance and coordination. Children in the BrainworX program have made great gains in Map testing scores, and full letter grade increases in reading and math grades.

If a child is suffering from AD/HD, autism, dyslexia, asperger's, learning disabilities, visual and auditory processing disorders or other types of pediatric neurodevelopmental disorders, BrainworX may be able to help.

Typical treatment frequency is 2-3 times per week and the sessions are one hour in length. All sessions are "one on one" with the doctor and/or therapist. At the current time, Dr. Cavazos continues to accept new patients.

BrainworX is located at 4508 Legacy Drive, Suite 200, Plano, TX 75024. Dr.

Cavazos is available for individual consultation and is scheduling speaking engagements to groups and associations. Please direct any questions to the office at 214-377-4833 or email drc@brainworxcenters.com.

No jobs, no recovery, no votes

BY HARRY ALFORD

(NNPA) - It is a pretty simple formula. Yet, many of our federally elected officials don't seem to understand or at least listen to the masses. The messages in Virginia and New Jersey were certainly clear. Still they prodded on with their largesse and out of touch agenda.

Then comes Massachusetts like the thunder of an electrical storm or the roar of the mighty ocean. Still I wonder if they have figured it out yet. The people want jobs, jobs, jobs! Big schemes like healthcare reform, energy bills, greedy attempts by union lobbyists, etc will have to wait. The Clinton Campaign's slogan still applies: "It's the economy stupid!"

For the first time in many decades the very democratic state Massachusetts voted to kill the humungous Healthcare Reform Bill and turn the efforts into job creation. Families are hurting and many are being destroyed. Hope is fading as we go through the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression. The population demands a full concentration on getting America back on its economic feet. Those officials who don't concentrate on this task will be heading for unemployment themselves. This election cycle is going to be very exciting.

The Healthcare Reform effort is pretty much dead. The Republicans, thanks to Massachusetts, now have the filibuster weapon. The Democrats can get around that if they accept the Senate version of the bill as it stands. But the House, like much of America, has serious issues with the Senate version and probably could not gather enough votes to pass it.

For instance, the Congressional Black Caucus insists that a public option be available in the legislation. However, the Senate version has no public option. Then there was the vote swapping via kickbacks, bribery, and downright financial whoring. It's now ugly and the people don't want it. After nine months, this amounts to a monster that no one intended to create. It is going to die and still we have no jobs.

Listen Congress and lis-

can proclamations that their gubernatorial wins in New Jersey and Virginia and senatorial win in Massachusetts are a repudiation of Obama's presidency it is a well known fact that even a lie that is repeated often enough with conviction will become a reality for many. Republicans have pounced on this apparent voter backlash to put the Administration and the Democratic agenda on the defensive.

Presidential senior advisor David Axelrod made a valiant attempt to defend Obama on ABC's "This Week" program and stated, "When the president walked in the door, he was handed the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression, a financial crisis that held out the prospect of the collapse of the financial system and a fiscal crisis. President Clinton left a $237 billion surplus; President Obama received a $1.3 trillion deficit."

Axelrod indicated that the President is up to the challenge of leading the country out of this recession and to make this economy work for all Americans and not just a fortunate few.

These issues and specific initiatives to address the issues will be discussed in the State of the Union speech on Wednesday, January 27 when the President will make a concerted effort to reconnect with the nation. Aides say President Obama's speech will give frustrated Americans, despite their doubts and concerns, a clear sense of how everything he's pursuing fits together for their benefit.

Supporters and opponents know that President Obama can deliver an awe inspiring and mesmerizing speech. However, it is one thing to talk a good message but another thing to deliver on that message.

While bi-partisanship and extending olive branches may appear noble and benevolent it has not played well in the real world of cut throat partisan politics practiced by the Republican minority.

President Obama's governing strategy must change if he is to have any chance to deliver on his promise to revitalize the America that disintegrated under the failed policies of the Bush administration.

One reason that Democrats have failed to bring about the change demanded by the voters is in the game of political chicken Democrats have flinched first in just about every legislative impasse and allowed the minority Republicans to not only set the agenda but also to define the public discussion of the agenda.

This is not the kind of leadership that gives comfort and confidence to the frustrated American people.

There are similarities between what President Bill Clinton had to deal with in neutralizing Republican Newt Gingrich's congress in 1994 and Obama's Republican congress. A paper entitled "President Clinton and the Republican Congress 1995-2000" by Richard S. Conley of the University of Florida's Political Science Department gives some useful insight.

President Clinton's attempt to coordinate his domestic initiatives after Republicans captured both chambers of Congress in 1994 necessitated a fundamental reorganization of his legislative strategy. The breakneck speed with which Speaker Newt Gingrich pushed his Contract With America relegated Clinton's agenda to the sidelines of congressional and media attention.

Clinton's strategic response to the Gingrich threat was to skillfully use the Constitutional power provided by the presidential veto. The combination of his artful use of the bully pulpit and the threat of the veto enabled President Clinton to play a pivotal role in legislative outcomes when the governing environment became politically polarized.

During the course of his six year legislative confrontation with the GOP he vetoed thirty-five bills from 1995-2000 to neutralize the Republican divisive agenda.

Republicans challenged eleven of the thirty-five vetoes but managed to override the president only once. Clinton successfully relied on an implied use of the veto on over 140 bills to wrest policy concessions from them.

Currently, Republicans in the Senate and House have rejected every Obama backed Democratic compromise offered in favor of the American people and subordinated them to the best interests of the Republican Party.

A primary lesson from President Clinton's tenure that could serve Obama is: The only thing other politicians respect is power and popularity. Clinton's veto threat was his power and his charisma gave him the ability to make average Americans believe that he was on their side which kept his popularity ratings high even during difficult times.

Take heed President Obama. America is asking: Do Democrats have what it takes to lead?

Taking control of your healthcare

(NDG Wire) Whatever is about to happen in health-care reform, one thing is certain: we will all have to play an active role in our healthcare if we want to get the right care. Research shows that those who participate in their healthcare, rather than relying on their doctors to make all the decisions, reduce their health-care costs and they get the care they need.

Taking Control of Your Healthcare (published by iUniverse), written by a group of physicians and counselors, gives you the information you need to actively participate in your healthcare choices by focusing on “shared” versus “delegated” decision making.

The book will teach you through numerous life saving examples how to ask the your doctor the right questions; manage your chronic in the hospital. Other topics in Taking Control of Your Healthcare include disease and other health related issues including issues with seniors; take prescription medications safely; and control and stay safe while doctor office and hospital conduct, health insurance, and the importance of second opinions.

You will also have helpful websites and other resources which will empower you on Taking Control of Your Healthcare. Each chapter includes a specific checklist objective to guide you to make the best decision possible and provides facts for the common myths and beliefs in the U.S. regarding health-care and illnesses.

The Kreisbergs challenge common myths and beliefs among many in the U.S. and bring facts that shine light on truths. Each chapter has objectives that can be used as a checklist to guide patients to the best decisions for them.

Scam artists prey on older Texans' best traits

BY TEXAS HEALTH & HUMAN SERVICES COMMISSION

Older adults are rightly admired for their tendency to be polite, open-hearted and generous. Most of us respond to those traits with respect and efforts to follow their example.

Con artists, unfortunately, are responding with a growing number of scams — often phone and Internet-based — that turn Texas seniors' character assets into liabilities.

Laura Albrecht of the Texas Department of Aging and Disability Services (DADS) said many older people consider it rude to question a pleasant-seeming stranger's good intentions.

“These folks were raised in an era when politeness earned trust and it felt deeply uncomfortable to tell a nice-sounding person, ‘I won't give you that information’ or ‘I never do that kind of business over the phone,’” Albrecht explained.

There's no clearinghouse of statistics on fraud against elders, but AARP surveys suggest that telemarketers most often target victims 50 and older with scam attempts increasing with age.

Some of the more common phone-based scams identified by law enforcement agencies and consumer advocates include:

- Pitches, often for travel packages and sweepstakes, that start with the phrase, “You've already won!” but require you to pay upfront for “postage and handling” or other charges. “Must act now” is another sure fire tipoff line.

- Any phone messages in which the caller demands a callback to “discuss an urgent matter concerning your credit card account.” Never call the given number. Instead, call the toll-free customer service number on your bill and ask if there's an issue with your account.

- Any unsolicited call in which you're asked to give your credit card number or expiration date, date of birth, bank account number or Social Security number, or any kind of account password.

- Sales offers for deeply discounted vitamins, medicines or health care products.

- Charities that ask you to give over the phone.

Albrecht noted that seniors should be especially cautious about phone charity calls made in the aftermath of major disasters such as hurricanes.

“That's a classic time when you see a lot of solicitations designed to prey on people's emotions,” Albrecht said. “Some may be legitimate, but it's best to be double safe and not respond directly to the call. Look them up first.”

That's also good advice for any phone request for a donation. Decline the phone donation request and check the charity out with the Better Business Bureau (www.bbb.org/us/charity) before making your contribution.

Although senior-targeted Internet scams still lag behind telemarketing fraud, they're growing fast. The creativity of Internet swindlers sometimes rivals the legitimate masterminds of Apple and Google.

However, their meat-and-potatoes schemes tend to focus on credit card fraud, identity theft, fraudulent billing, illegal pharmacies (often selling counterfeit medicines) and merchandise that will not be delivered.

Never buy from unlicensed distributors or ones that sell drugs without a prescription.

If your medicines look different from what you've been taking — or look suspicious in any other way — show them to a pharmacist or doctor before taking them.

Never respond to unsolicited e-mails that require you to supply or “verify” your information. This is often done by e-mailing you a link to a fake (though often very real-looking) website.

Non-delivery of ordered merchandise and other Internet scams can be reported to the FBI's Internet Crime Complaint Center. Go to www.fbi.gov and search on Internet Fraud.

Another good resource for Texas consumers is the Attorney General's Consumer Protection unit: www.oag.state.tx.us/consumer/scams.shtml.

She has served as President of both the Public Library Administrators of North Texas and the Texas Library Directors Association. She has also served as the Library Representative on the Texas Municipal League Board of Directors.

Baumbach named Harrington Library Manager Cathy Ziegler as Deputy Director August 3, 2009. Ms. Ziegler, who has been working directly with Ms. Baumbach since that time, joined the City of Plano team as a Library Page in December 1994 becoming Davis Library Manager in 2001 and Harrington Library Manager in 2009. # Children drop out and into lives of poverty and imprisonment

BY MARIAN WRIGHT EDELMAN

(NNPA) A homeless man talking about how he ended up on the streets said he had wanted to get in with the "cool" crowd in 8th or 9th grade—a crowd that smoked marijuana, got into fights, and skipped school. No adult reached out to help him turn his life around so he continued his decline into a life of chronic joblessness and poverty, and long stretches of incarceration after he dropped out of school.

Youths who drop out of school represent a colossal loss to our communities and nation. And many dropouts are condemned to the social and economic fringes of our society and lives less fulfilled than their peers who graduate from high school. Today, more than half of all young adult dropouts are jobless. And dropouts are at greater risk of being incarcerated and having poorer physical and mental health than those who graduate.

The impact of the enormous dropout problem is not evenly shared among children in America. Poor and minority youths are far less likely to graduate from high school than White children.

An October 2009 report released by the National Center for Education Statistics says 59.8 percent of Blacks, 62.2 percent of Hispanics, and 61.2 percent of American Indians graduated from public high school in four years with a regular diploma in the 2006-07 school year compared to 79.8 percent for Whites and 91.2 percent for Asian and Pacific Islanders. Black and Hispanic dropout rates were more than twice those of White youths.

Children do not just wake up one morning and decide to take a path to a dead end life. So how is it possible that more than half a million of them drop out every year? I believe the main reason is that adults have often let our children down and abandoned our responsibilities to prepare them for healthy and productive lives in our homes and communities. We'd rather punish children after they get into trouble than prevent child problems. The only universally guaranteed child right is a jail or detention cell after they come in conflict with the law.

We do not even assure all children prenatal care to be born as healthy as possible. We have deprived our children of fathers by locking up young men and putting them in a pipeline to prison, and we've allowed our community supports to fray, depriving children of safe havens and positive mentors.

For most of the week, congregational doors are locked and we've cut back on the hours when community centers and libraries are open. Some have decided that after-school and summer enrichment programs are too expensive. Some states spend more to incarcerate a child for a year than it would cost to send him to Harvard University! Some New York state youth prisons cost $210,000 to house one child for a year. Gangs and drug dealers are open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, offering apprenticeships in drug dealing and car stealing and other illegal behaviors.

So many of our nation's schools have let our children down and are unwitting accomplices to the pipeline to prison's destructive work. Academic tracking, social promotion, and out-of-school suspensions and expulsions contribute mightily to the discouragement, low self-esteem, and disengagement of so many poor and minority children.

One-size-fits-all school zero tolerance disciplinary policies are responsible for the growth in the number of school-based arrests of poor and minority children, funneling them into the juvenile and criminal justice systems at younger and younger ages. So many are suspended, expelled, even arrested, for nonviolent infractions such as being "disruptive" or "disrespectful."

In the past, many of these problems would have been resolved in the principal's office or referred to a pastor or social worker or by calling the parent (who may no longer be in the house). Too many children today end up with an arrest record and are labeled a troublemaker, increasing the likelihood of dropping out of school.

There are a lot of things we know about preventing children from dropping out. New research has led to a better understanding of how to turn this enormous crisis around and has identified schools where graduation is not the norm. Researchers at Johns Hopkins University have identified 2,000 high schools in the country (12 percent) responsible for nearly half of the nation's dropouts. The children attending these "dropout factories" are overwhelmingly minority.

We can spot students in elementary school who, if adults intervene, will be less likely to drop out. Potential dropouts can be identified as early as the fourth and sixth grades by looking at attendance, behavior and, of course, failure in math and English. We can focus our resources on these schools and their students with the goal of turning them around and rescuing hundreds of thousands of children from the cradle to prison pipeline. But the community has to care and raise a ruckus for our children's and nation's sakes.

This is a national problem requiring all of our focused attention. The dropout crisis is too costly to our children, communities, and nation to let it persist. We know how to keep children in school. We simply must decide to mix our knowledge and experience with the will to educate every child.

King's legacy celebrated in speech, song

(NDG Wire) On the anniversary of President Barack Obama's inauguration, students, faculty, staff and community supporters gathered at The University of Texas at Dallas to celebrate the man whose legacy made Obama's election possible.

The Martin Luther King

Jr. Celebration Breakfast featured a talk by the Rev. James Young, who made history last year when he became the first African-American to be elected mayor of Philadelphia, Miss.

Philadelphia became infamous when three visiting civil rights workers were murdered there in 1964. The incident inspired the 1988 Academy Award-winning film Mississippi Burning.

"Not often do you get to live long enough to experience hatred and prejudice, but to also be a byproduct of change," said Young as he began his speech.

Young spoke of his background, his experiences with his own children and how

King was able to make an impact through non-violent protest.

"Dr. King was a man of his time," said Young. "He went to a supreme power to affect change, and he understood that education was needed to 'think your way through.'"

Amid insights, Young infused his remarks with humor.

"My dad taught me to work hard," he said. "My mom told me to get an education so you don't have to work that hard."

Young also discussed the attention generated by his election. He recalled a media interview during which he was asked how he represented all his constituents.

"I walk down the middle of the road so I can reach out on both sides," he said.

As Young summed up his talk, he reflected on the three voter registration workers who were killed in his hometown almost 50 years ago.

"I get emotional when I think about the blood that was shed," said Young. "All they did was register people to vote. Racism, hatred and prejudice put them in the ground. If we're not careful, we'll make the same mistakes."

At the conclusion of his speech, Vice President for Diversity and Community Engagement Magaly Spector and UT Dallas President David Daniel presented Young with a Champion of Diversity award "in recognition of his contributions to the goals of diversity in America."

"Mayor Young is a living example of our theme today, 'Sharing the Dream,'" said Spector.

The Office of Diversity and Community Engagement, the Multicultural Center, the Student Union & Activities Advisory Board (SUAAB) and the University Committee on Equity and Diversity sponsored the event.

King's birthday was Jan. 15. The MLK holiday for staff and students was observed Jan. 18, the same day as the federal holiday. President Ronald Reagan signed a bill creating a federal holiday to honor King in 1983. It was observed for the first time on January 20, 1986.

Featured speaker James Young talked about his election as the first African-American mayor of Philadelphia, Miss., a town that has carried the stigma of the murders of three civil rights workers since 1964.

Big Bad Voodoo Daddy gives tribute to Cab Calloway at Eisemann Center

(NDG Wire) Big Bad Voodoo Daddy's eighth studio album, How Big Can You Get? A Tribute to Cab Calloway, captures the essence of an American icon in a rowdy celebration of musicianship, mischief, genius, street smarts, and fun. It's also possibly the timeliest and most welcome album of the year -- bringing a much-needed high-voltage jolt of winning, feel-good energy to a country slogging through tough times that may be getting tougher. The music that Calloway helped revitalize and uplift the spirits of troubled individuals during the American Depression-era. Big Bad Voodoo Daddy (BBVD) will appear in the Eisemann Center Presents Spotlight Series for one performance only on Saturday, January 30th, 2010 at 8:00 pm in the Hill Performance Hall.

Longtime fans of "America's favorite little big band" will immediately recognize the album as a milestone in Big Bad Voodoo Daddy's multi-platinum-selling sixteen-year career. "Making the album was one of our biggest musical moments," says lead vocalist, guitarist and songwriter Scotty Morris, who co-founded BBVD with drummer Kurt Sodergren in southern California. "Delving into Cab's songs made us all realize how relevant they were to our time, and working on someone else's music inside out caused a growth and depth in my work as a songwriter, arranger, and producer."

How Big Can You Get is not only an illuminating revival of Cab Calloway's songbook: the making of the album was also the revelation of a lifetime for the band as a whole, whose ensemble playing, arranging and interpretive powers were honed to an all-time high by the excellence of Calloway's songs. Trumpeter Glen "The Kid" Marhevka recalls being captivated by Calloway on-stage as a seventh-grader: "I was 11 years old, and I was blown away; he had so much energy and so many great musicians. This album concept seemed a perfect fit for us, because of Cab's visuals, performances and intense energy. As soon as we rehearsed and played these songs live, it was musically challenging and refreshing to all of us."

Recorded in Los Angeles' legendary Capitol Studios, located at the famous record-shaped building at Hollywood and Vine, How Big Can You Get came out of the rooms where innumerable classics had been recorded by Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Nelson Riddle, Billy May, and many others. BBVD used Capitol's vintage microphones and studio equipment to achieve a real marriage of Calloway's music and the group's arrangements and the group's voice. Morris stated, "We played songs top-to-bottom live, and chose the best takes for the album, because so many of Cab's definitive performances are live in films and radio broadcasts. This is the best and most ferocious we've ever sounded." With the band's stated mission to broaden the image of Cab Calloway beyond his signature tune, Minnie the Moocher (a BBVD live staple from the beginning), Calloway's frequently hilarious - and just as often socially aware - material held its own keys to completing the album in a way that did justice to him.

Since their arrival on the music scene in 1993 in a legendary residency at Los Angeles' Brown Derby nightclub, Big Bad Voodoo Daddy's irresistible live show and aggressive, musically perceptive approach has proven them over time to be the singular standout among the numerous bands that launched the Nineties swing revival. The seven-man group forged a massively successful fusion of classic American sounds from jazz, swing, Dixieland and big-band music, building their own songbook of original dance tunes, and, sixteen years later, BBVD theaters and performing arts centers, selling out shows at the Hollywood Bowl, Walt Disney Hall, Lincoln Center, Chastain Park and Constitution Hall, just to name a few. They have appeared as special guests with the great symphony and pops orchestras of the nation, including their first symphony show with the US Air Force Orchestra. The unparalleled gift for vivid storytelling, as well as his pointed social commentary. "We all noticed that the lyric of How Big Can You Get is unbelievably poignant to our time," says Morris. "In The Ghost of Smokey Joe, we were excited going in to cut a trilogy of three big songs from Cab's early days, making the stories cohesive." Scotty

You Get have now brought the band's horizon into exceptionally clear focus -- both on a musical and a group level. "We just turned sixteen this month. I couldn't be more proud that this is the album we've made at this moment," says Morris. "I did think it would last this long," reflects trumpeter Marhevka, who joined BBVD over fourteen years ago, when the band was one year old and still a trio. "I had played in many groups, and stopped doing everything else -- I put 100% in, and never looked back. People ask:

'Are you gonna be here in five years?', and I say: Yeah! Every guy in the band has that feeling about it. The greatest moment is being here right now, doing this. The goals are always the same: getting better at what we do individually, and moving forward in the same direction. We're still playing, and have something to say."

Tickets for the Sat., Jan. 30th performance range from $27-$55 and are available in person, online at www.eisemanncenter.com or by calling the Eisemann Center Ticket Office at 972-744-4650. Ticket Office hours are 10:00 am until 6:00 pm Monday through Saturday and one hour before performances. Group discounts are available for 10 or more by calling 972-744-4657.

The Charles W. Eisemann Center is located in the Galatyn Park Urban Center at 2351 Performance Drive in Richardson, Texas. The Eisemann Center is easily accessible from Highway 75 North taking the Galatyn Parkway/Renner Road exit going north and the Galatyn Parkway/Campbell Road exit going south or from the DART light rail station at Galatyn Park is a veteran force that to this day adds new fans by the roomful every time they play.

BBVD's originals skyrocketed the group into its first phase of stardom, when You & Me and the Bottle Makes Three (Tonight) and Go Daddy-O were featured in the 1996 Indie film landmark Swingers. Big Bad Voodoo Daddy, named famously after an autograph by blues legend Albert Collins, sold more than two million copies of the albums Americana Deluxe and This Beautiful Life, and received national critical acclaim while the band's music has appeared in over sixty movies and television shows. With their 2003 New Orleans-inspired album Save My Soul, BBVD began playing in band's career milestones have included appearances in the Super Bowl half-time show, writing theme music for ESPN and network television, and performing for three American presidents. They have appeared numerous times on The Tonight Show with Jay Leno, Late Night with Conan O'Brien and Live with Regis & Kelly, and wrote, performed and recorded the current theme song for the Carson Daly show after appearing multiple times as the show's house band. And now, Big Bad Voodoo Daddy's songs have passed into the classic American songbook, playing alongside pop standard songs in film and television, and even on reality competitions like Dancing With the Stars.

Key to the depth of the new album is Calloway's points out: "Cab's early songs from Cotton Club era have a more vaudeville / cabaret feel, and storytelling is crucial in those songs. After Cab became a huge phenomenon, he had his own language, and he's vamping on his image and lifestyle in songs from the 1940s like Calloway Boogie, The Jumpin' Jive and Hey Now, Hey Now. Having feasted on his music in the studio, and headed out to the road to perform Calloway's music, "I'm even more in awe of him now," agrees Marhevka. "I want people to come from hearing our album, and find out who Cab was. You can see videos of him so easily on the Internet. He was larger than life -- the blueprint of a superstar."

Statement from Texas Motor Transportation Association President on texting ban

(NDG Wire) Texas Motor Transportation Association President and CEO John D. Esparza released a statement following the Department of Transportation and Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration's announcement regarding the ban on texting by commercial motor vehicle drivers.

"The trucking industry is the safest it has ever been on the roads today and that is a testament to the dedication and professionalism of the drivers we have moving Texas' freight," said Esparza.

According to figures released by the Federal Highway Administration last week, the truck-involved fatality rate in 2008 declined 12.3 percent from 2007. Most impressive is the substantial decline by 66 percent since 1975 when the U.S. Department of Transportation began keeping those records.

"The U.S. DOT and FMCSA have taken further measures to ensure that our industry remains safe and eliminate the threat of texting while driving with the federal ban for motor carriers," Esparza commented. "This will enhance the policies that many transportation companies already have in place and support the safety movement that we see across the nation for all drivers."

Nineteen states, along with the District of Columbia, have banned texting for all drivers, not just commercial motor vehicles. This is in addition to the President's executive order directing federal employees not to engage in text messaging while driving government-owned vehicles or with government-owned equipment starting December 30, 2009.

TMTA will continue to discourage texting while behind the wheel with regard to all drivers and educate Texans on increased safety measures for our roadways.

African-American takes No. 2 post at McDonald's

Don Thompson

(NNPA) McDonald's recently named Don Thompson, head of its U.S. Division, to president and chief operating officer, the second position in the international company. James A. Skinner, the company's chief executive, said Thompson would oversee operations at McDonald's nearly 32,000 restaurants in 117 countries.

Thompson, age 46, started at McDonald's as an electrical engineer in 1990. He has been president of the U.S. Division since 2006.

The first-time homebuyer tax credit is a big incentive to look for a home right now

(NDG Wire) First-time buyers can get a federal tax break of up to $8000, if they strike a deal before April 30th.

There's a lot of information and details that may be confusing for the first-time buyer, and it pays to do a little research on your own finances before checking out homes on the market.

Consumer ratings service, Angie's List, consulted highly-rated real estate agents for these tips before you buy home:

- Check your credit: Pull your credit report and double check that the information is accurate and up-to-date. If there are any discrepancies, work with the credit reporting agency to have those cleared up before you inquire about a loan.

- Are you approved? Get pre-approved for you loan before you start looking for a house. You should be able to produce: good credit, stable employment history, a positive debt-to-income ratio, document of your assets, and at least three percent of the home's sell value for down payment.

- What can you afford? You may qualify for a higher amount that you actually want to pay, so it's important not only to check with a mortgage agent to get pre-approved, but to know what the payments will be at that amount and that you are okay with it. Remember to factor in homeowner's insurance, property taxes, utility bills, moving costs, maintenance costs and any upgrades that you'll need to make.

- What do you want, Make a list of what you want and don't want. Search for homes online to get some ideas. Are you looking for a small home or a home where your family can grow?

- Location: Know the area where the property is located. If you see a lot of foreclosure signs in yards, it could be a sign that the area is declining in value. Take a look at the home's surroundings.

- Inspect before buying: In most cases you will be able to inspect the entire property before buying. Hire a professional home inspector to inspect the entire house so you know exactly what you are getting into. Most foreclosed properties come "as is".

- Do your homework: Make sure you find out if the property has any unpaid liens. If you don't, unpaid lenders could come after you to try and collect what they are owed. Call your local building department. They can tell you if there any building permits that were never closed out.

Everyone can use Free File

(NDG Wire) The IRS Free File service provides free federal income tax return preparation and electronic filing for all taxpayers. All you need is access to a computer and the Internet and you can prepare and e-file your federal tax return for free.

Free File is offered through a partnership between the IRS and the Free File Alliance, a group of private-sector tax software companies. Since Free File's debut in 2003, more than 27 million returns have been prepared and e-filed through this program.

Free File offers two options. The first is Traditional Free File, which includes approximately 20 tax preparation software products from which to choose. Taxpayers with 2009 incomes of $57,000 or less are eligible for this service. The second option

Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

is Free File Fillable Forms, which is an electronic version of IRS paper forms. All taxpayers can use Free File Fillable Forms to prepare and file tax forms electronically.

Use the following steps to file your return through IRS Free File:

Step 1. Get Started: Access IRS.gov and click the Free File logo or go to www.irs.gov/freefile. You must access Free File companies through the official IRS Web site to qualify for the free service.

Step 2. Determine Your Eligibility: If your 2009 income was $57,000 or less, you're eligible for Traditional Free File's easy-to-use, step-by-step software. If your income was higher, you are eligible for Free File Fillable Forms.

Step 3. Link to Free File Company Service: If you opt for Traditional Free File, you can choose one of the approximate 20 offerings by reviewing which one fits your situation. You can click "I Will Choose A Free File Company" or "Help Me Find A Free File Company." To get started with Free File Fillable Forms, just click the "Choose Free File Fillable Forms" button.

Step 4. Prepare and e-file your Federal Income Tax Return: Either Traditional Free File or Free File Fillable Forms will allow you to file your return electronically, for free.

Both the fillable-forms option and the "full service" Free File offerings are only available through IRS.gov. Whether you are new to Free File or a returning taxpayer, you must access Free File through IRS.gov; otherwise, the provider may charge a fee.

ment Programming in the state for Irving Community Television Network

- City/County Cooperation Award for the Irving Health Center

- Achievement Award for the city from the Quality Texas Foundation

- Chamber's 5-Star Accreditation (first in the state to earn this prestigious designation)

Public Safety

- Violent crime in Irving is down 31 percent over the past five years.

- Overall crime rate has decreased for the past five consecutive years for a total crime rate decrease of 20 percent.

- Biweekly strategy development meetings, strategically placed Sky Watch trailers, and several public safety programs such as Citizens on Patrol have contributed to these significant decreases.

- Received recognition for having the highest cardiac survival rate in the state and second highest nationwide.

- Presented 800 safety education programs to nearly 20,000 residents.

- Reduced the number of emergency calls by 2.5 percent through prevention education.

Economic Development

- The chamber-managed Irving Economic Development Partnership handled 26 new economic development projects, which yielded more than 3,100 new jobs and approximately 780 retained jobs in the community. These projects also yielded millions - of dollars in positive economic impact for the city and school districts in the form of sales tax, property tax and utilities. Some of the high-profile companies that relocated and expanded in Irving include: Omega Environmental Technologies, Forward Air, ESPN Radio, Hostess Brands, GKN Aerostructures and HMS.

- The reclamation of an acre of Lake Carolyn and the construction of a new lake wall to prepare the Water Street site for development will be completed in June. Gables representatives have indicated the company's intent to begin Phase 1 construction by the end of the year. The Phase 1 project will include Phase I for Water Street – 320 apartment units (located in two buildings) and 140,000 square feet of retail (located in three buildings).

- The Convention Center is being built on time and within budget. General Manager Thom Connors is in place, and has begun building his staff. This month, there is a 12-month window for booking tradeshow events. Interest is high, with approximately 12 pending/tentative proposals and more than 20 are out on the streets.

The Economy

- Both Texas and the Metroplex are faring better than the nation with unemployment 3 percent below national rates and residential real estate unaffected by the housing bubble.

- Irving's diversified economy, which is not reliant on one major employer or business sector for employment or city revenue, is home to four Fortune 500 world headquarters.

- Residential property values are up slightly.

- The city's financial status remains strong with a structurally balanced budget for three consecutive years and a double AAA bond rating reaffirmed.

- Sales tax declines have been less than projected; however, due to operational efficiencies and reducing vacant positions, the city is operating with a balanced budget.

- Hotel occupancy taxes saw a sharp decline due to the national recession. Driven by business travelers, this is expected to recover as the recession eases.

- Decline in revenues have been offset by cost savings and efficiencies – no layoffs or furloughs for city employees and no reduction in city services.

Transportation and Infrastructure

- The current project cost for the Diamond Interchange (State Highways 184 and 114, and Loop 12) is approximately $224 million, with a current estimated completion date of September 2012.

- Sound wall designs for State Highway 183 are completed. Used to buffer road noise for residential properties that back up to the roadway corridor, the walls will be 10 feet tall with designs for the ornamentation and aesthetics consistent with the city's new mustang logo. Sound wall construction is expected to begin this spring, with completion in the fall.

Texas Stadium, redevelopment in Heritage Crossing, construction of the West Irving Aquatic Center, and the impact of Super Bowl XLV in Irving and in the North Texas region also were key topics of the Mayor's presentation. He highlighted accomplishments relating to city parks such as Veterans Memorial Park and the Cottonwood Creek Park Miracle League Field, an accessible playground and field, and spoke of achievements in workforce development with North Lake College and the Chamber's Business Resource Center at the new North Lake South Campus.

ten White House, not another program or major project until the economy gets right. If the jobs don't start rolling in between now and November a whole lot of you are going to be "toast". What else do we have to do to let you know? You who stutter are going to witness a very strong group of independents, if not a new third party. This nation is on the verge of voting revolution and that is a good thing.

Don't start talking about Cap and Trade. That is a hustle as much as the healthcare mess was. Card Check, Project Labor Agreements and anything else the radical, almost communist, unions pay you to put up to the people is going to be slammed down hard and with certainty. Your political careers will fizzle right before your eyes. From California to the East Coast the people will once again vote for change. That is a change for a better economy.

Here's the big deal that they refuse to look at. 70% of all new jobs come from the growth of small businesses. Yes, small businesses creates 70% of all new jobs. So Congress and Mr. President, how about setting the market for small business growth? Maybe we should infuse the Small Business Administration (SBA) with more capital guarantees for small business loans. Wouldn't that be positive?

How about returning the SBA to a staff of 5,000 like it was when Bill Clinton became President instead of the 1,700 you have now? Shouldn't we stop bundling contracts and break them down so that more small businesses can participate?

You know, the saddest thing about this is that it is so simple. It is simple to those who want to get it done but so hard to see for the greedy and special interest groups. If your congressperson or senator is not focusing on small business growth then it is time to vote him/her out. Upgrade your leadership and increase the number of new jobs being created.

Another important fact to remember: small businesses create jobs while unions manipulate jobs and limit them.

If a project is nonunion it will provide significantly more jobs. Any prospects which are union controlled will cost the client significantly more thereby limit the power of the budget (amount of jobs). Please notice that the highest unemployment areas in our nation are in places that are prevalent with union shops. Right to work states have significantly more employment than their union counterparts.

It is very clear and simple. Find out how much money your elected official gets from the union coffers. If they are on the "payroll" vote them out. That money should be used for pension funds anyway. Instead, the unions are trying to buy influence with their members' precious money.

Yes, it is POWER TO THE PEOPLE AND THE PEOPLE HAVE SPOKEN.

Texas Back to Work offers $15 million to Texas employers

(NDG Wire) Texas employers can receive monetary incentives for hiring unemployed workers under a two-year, $15 million program promoted by Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst and funded by the Legislature last session. Texas Back to Work offers employers subsidized-wage reimbursement, retention bonuses and other incentives for hiring qualified out-of-work Texans, the Texas Workforce Commission (TWC) announced last week.

"Texas employers are standing strong during tough economic times.

Businesses, small and large, can earn Texas Back to Work incentives to expand their operations and offer new opportunities to unemployed Texans," said Lt. Gov. Dewhurst.

Texas Back to Work is available to employers through the 28 Texas local workforce development boards, which also provide employers with workforce recruitment assistance, pre-screening of qualified applicants and training programs.

A past recipient of the Sansom Award himself, City Manager Tom Muehlenbeck, one of Israelson's mentors, applauds his accolade. "Mark joined our City of Plano team in 1999 and I am gratified he has not only sought out advice and counsel from those around him, but, more importantly, he has determined to help the development of younger next generation management."

Established in 1986, the Joy Sansom Mentor Award is awarded annually to a local public administrator who serves as a mentor, exemplifies the concept of leadership and is committed to the continued development of UMANT. UMANT.

"Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept My ways, but have been partial in the law." Malachi 2:9 (KJV)

My Work, My Way: When people live without Christ they fail to enter into a relationship with God that allows them to fulfill their destiny. In essence, they fulfill God's work, their way. Their life represents the carnal life of the flesh.

God's Work, My Way: When a person becomes a Christian they focus their attention on living for Christ. They realize it is God's work that they are doing but it takes time before they learn what it means to do God's Work, His Way.

My Work, God's Way: As the Holy Spirit does God's work in us, we learn to walk with God. We learn what it means to see our work as God's work and we desire to do it God's way. The Israelites were guilty of not knowing God's way and were unable to move into the Promised Land because of not understanding how to do their work, God's Way.

God's Work, God's Way: When Christians walk with God they realize that all that they do is God's work and He calls them to do it His way. When Christians walk with God in this manner they see the Kingdom of God manifested in their lives. They experience God's power and learn what it means to do God's Work, His Way. Christians give their lives to the Lord and ask Him to teach them His way. "And Moses said unto the Lord, See, Thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people; and Thou hast not let me know whom Thou wilt send with me. Yet Thou hast said, I know thou name, and thou hast also found grace in My sight." Exodus 33:12 (KJV) Moses realized that he needed God to teach him His ways in order for him to prosper.

God's Work, God's Way

Timing Factor. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and unbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." James 1:5 & 6 (KJV)

Have you heard the statement, "He was before his time?" There are examples of people who invented a product when the market was not ready to embrace it yet. Other things had to develop before the product could be a success. For example the 'picture telephone', the ability to talk to people on the phone and see them at the same time, idea prior to cell phones with the ability to take pictures and videos and send them all over the world.

Another product was by Mr. George Washington Carver, who was born around 1861 during the Civil War, a man who should have been a victim to his circumstances. He was discriminated against constantly when he lost his mother to slave traders. As a young boy he cried out to God in the midst of his situation and God heard him. God gave Carver a persevering spirit and he was highly motivated to learn.

He discovered that Southern farmers who planted cotton for years needed a new crop because the soil had worn out and they were going into debt as a result. Carver advised farmers to plant peanuts and sweet potatoes instead of cotton. Farmers gradually increased their peanut and sweet potato acreage. However, there was not a substantial market for their new products. They were forced to let the product rot in the field, they ended up losing more money. Carver became discouraged and took the problem to God in prayer and asked Him why He had made the peanut. God led Carver to his lab where he discovered over 300 marketable products from the peanut including lard, mayonnaise, cheese, shampoo, instant coffee, flour, face powder, plastics, adhesives, axle grease and pickles.

From the sweet potato he made over 100 discoveries, including starch, library paste, vinegar, shoe blacking, ink and molasses. Demand for peanuts and sweet potatoes transformed the Southern economy.

In the end George Washington Carver went to God and did His Work, His Way.

employers defray part of the cost of wages and on-the-job training," said TWC Chairman Tom Pauken.

Through the new program, some employers who hire people receiving unemployment benefits can receive a portion of the new employees' wages for a set period of time. Another possible incentive would provide employers with up to $1,500 in wage-retention bonuses if they continue to employ the formerly out-of-work employees for at least 120 days.

"Valuable programs like Texas Back to Work exemplify the progressive vision of our leaders and make Texas a great place to do business," said Will Newton, Texas Executive Director, National Federation of Independent Business.

Employers interested in participating should contact their local workforce development boards to learn about all options available in their areas and to help put Texas Back to Work. Employers also are encouraged to take advantage of WorkInTexas.com, TWC's online job matching Web site where more than 250,000 employers post job openings and find great employees. ask when and where they are required to give out their SSN.

One of our most commonly received questions on this subject is: can a private business ask for my Social Security number? Generally, the answer is yes. The law does not prohibit a business from asking for a person's SSN; however, the customer has options and does not have to provide that information.

Texans are not legally required to provide their SSN to private businesses unless the transaction is one which triggers mandatory Internal Revenue Service notification.

Texans should be aware, though, that businesses can refuse to provide products or services to customers who fail to provide their SSN.

If a business insists that customers provide their SSN and customers feel this is not justified, customers may want to ask for a supervisor or manager to discuss the situation. If the company is unwilling to budge, Texans may want to consider taking their business elsewhere.

Be aware that while federal law does not forbid a business from asking for a person's SSN, it does mandate that the business protect any numbers it collects. People who provide their SSN to a private business should familiarize themselves with the company's privacy policy.

Texas law also requires that businesses safeguard their clients' sensitive personal information, including names, addresses, financial information and SSN. The OAG has charged several commercial vendors with unlawfully failing to protect such information.

Many Texans also inquire about government agencies and whether they have the right to ask for a person's SSN. Federal law does compel government agencies to ask for a SSN in certain instances.

For example, certain government agencies, including taxing authorities, human resource offices and departments of motor vehicles, can require a SSN as mandated by federal law.

Federal law does provide protections when citizens are required to divulge their SSN. The Privacy Act of 1974 requires that all government agencies that request Social Security numbers provide a disclosure statement on the form. The statement explains whether citizens are required to provide their SSN or if it is optional.

The Privacy Act also provides that citizens cannot be denied government benefits or services if they refuse to disclose their SSN – if the disclosure is not required by federal law or if the disclosure is to an agency which has been using Social Security numbers prior to January 1975.

Texans who are asked to give their SSN to a government agency but do not receive a disclosure statement may want to cite the Privacy Act and contact their U.S. congressmen or senators.
