Bishop Eddie Long settles—instead of fighting as promised

Lawsuit questions left unanswered

By Talibah Chikwendu (NNPA) The Atlanta pastor facing four civil lawsuits accusing him of sexual coercion settled the cases out-of-court, his church announced May 26, but the agreement leaves plenty of questions unanswered.

The lawsuits were filed in September 2010 against Bishop Eddie Long, the leader of the 25,000 + member New Birth Missionary Baptist Church. Four plaintiffs alleged that Long gave them and others attention, money, and gifts, before and after they reached the legal age of consent. Such actions allegedly involved engaging them in manipulation, oral sodomy and other sexual acts.

Addressing his congregation and the world regarding the charges approximately eight months ago, Long said that he had

Brown said he had to leave early to attend the funeral of Boston Grant, former track coach at South Oak Cliff High School, who mentored him when he was a young man.

"His mission in life while I was in high school was to insist that the young men that he coached be leaders. He didn't take no for an answer," Brown said. "I hated running track for him. He would not let us even practice at half speed. It was 100 percent all the time."

Brown said he had to admit that he adopted a lot of the things he learned from Grant

If Van Duyne doesn't pay her biz taxes, why should Irving voters trust her?

Our View

Candidates in glass houses should likely consider not throwing rocks.

Former Irving City Council member Beth Van Duyne's has accused current Mayor Herbert Gears' administration of mismanagement of the proposed $250 million entertainment center. Her repeated claims regarding the disputed entertainment center were cited as the key reason she finished first and forced a runoff in last month's hotly contested election. Van Duyne received 41 percent of the vote and Gears received 38 percent.

According to Van Duyne, Gears' administration offers "a lot of pretty pictures but no real substance behind them," regarding economic development proposals for the city.

However, if voters take a closer look at Van Duyne's professional track record, they would likely come to the same conclusion. Her resume paints a "pretty picture" it just happens to not be true.

According to her on-

Melvin Williams

Gospel Music legend, Melvin Williams performs many gospel songs across the United States in some of the nation's most prestigious concert halls such as The Grand Ole Opry, Madison Square Garden, The Apollo Theater, Carnegie Hall, and Radio Music City Hall to name a few. His dedication to gospel music garnered Melvin Williams 6-GRAMMY® award nominations, and a host of Stellar Awards collectively as a solo artist and with The Williams Brothers. Now, after 50 years in the music industry, Melvin Williams, a long-time favorite in the world of gospel music continues to build his music legacy with his latest journey to Preserve Traditional Gospel Music and he is taking his mission globally!

In February 2011, Melvin Williams became US Music Ambassador for the US Department of State's initiative The Rhythm Road: American Music Abroad administered by Jazz at Lincoln Center. As Executive Director of

Jazz at Lincoln Center,

Adrian Ellis states, "The mission of The Rhythm Road is to share America's unique contribution to the world of music and to promote cross-cultural understanding and exchange among nations worldwide. Building on the rich legacy of the legendary Jazz Ambassadors, the program has expanded in recent years to include music that is quin-tesentially American." And for Melvin Williams that includes good Gospel music. In the 1950s, the US government sent Jazz musicians such as Dizzy Gillespie, Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington and Dave Brubeck across the globe to share America's culture. Today, explains the State Department's Majorie Ames, "The Rhythm Road is an expression of the artistic richness of our nation and its diversity."

So, Melvin Williams is picking up his acoustic guitar and singing lead for his newly formed band,

The Melvin Williams Group that comprises of bassist/BGV, Castro Coleman, vocalist, Andre Tate and percussionist/BGV, Bridget Fleury. During this 5 week tour, Williams will visit a selection of Europe and Eurasia countries like Russia, Azerbaijan, Turkmenistan and Georgia. His mission is to introduce and perform traditional gospel music through concerts and educational workshops to regions around the world that wouldn't otherwise get much exposure to Gospel music. MSNBC anchor Tamron Hall will address graduates, including her own mother, at the Columbia College-Forth Worth commencement ceremony on Saturday, June 4, at 11 a.m. in the Main Ballroom at the Fort Worth Convention Center, 1201 Houston St., Fort Worth, Texas. The event will recognize the 216 students who have completed degree requirements during the 2010-2011 academic year.

Hall is the host of

"NewsNation" on MSNBC and is a frequent substitute host for NBC's "Today" and "Weekend Today." Additionally, she served as co-host of the "Dateline" series titled, "You Might Be Rich."

Dr. Eric Cunningham, associate dean for Adult Higher Education for Columbia College, will confer the degrees. Dale Coe Simons '65, past president of the Columbia College Alumni Association, will provide the alumni charge.

"Our graduates have succeeded in balancing their numerous responsibilities with their career goals," said Cunningham. "We are proud to honor their accomplishments."

Columbia College-Forth Worth was originally founded at Naval Air Station Dallas in 1975. The campus began holding classes at NAS Fort Worth in 1992 when the government began closing NAS Dallas and officially relocated to NAS Fort Worth in March 1997.

Today, Columbia College-Forth Worth continues to serve civilian and military adult learners in the area and is part of the college's extended network of more than 30 Nationwide Campuses across the country.

Columbia College, a private, nonprofit institution, was founded in Missouri in 1851 as Christian Female College, the first women's college west of the Mississippi River to be chartered by a state legislature. The college changed its name to Columbia College in 1970 when it became coeducational.

Columbia College in Columbia, Mo., educates more than 29,000 students each year and has more than 67,000 alumni worldwide. For more information, visit www.ccis.edu.

Rep. Yvonne Davis

State Representative Yvonne Davis (D-Dallas) announced that over

$500,000 in scholarships are available for high school graduates from Dallas and 18 other urban areas throughout Texas. Administrated by the Texas Association of Developing Colleges, the Urban Scholarship Program was created during the 74th Legislative session as part of House Bill 2128 with the cooperation of the three largest local telephone companies in the state of Texas. This year's Scholarship Fund contributors are AT&T and Verizon Wireless.

"This fund was created to provide access to higher education opportunities for Texas who, without this assistance, might not be able to strive for a college education," said Rep. Davis. "Basically, all the problems facing our communities, including economic parity, high crime, building cohesive families and other quality of life issues are related to the lack of education. By providing increased avenues of educational opportunity, we multiply our chances of improving the conditions of our state. The goal of this fund is to boost chances of reaching this target."

Applicants in any accredited public or private non-profit college, university or technical college in the following cities may apply: Abilene, Amarillo, Arlington, Austin, Beaumont, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth, Garland, Houston, Irving, Laredo, Mesquite, Pasadena, Plano, San Antonio and Waco. The Urban Scholarship fund was created in 1995 when Davis attached an amendment to the omnibus telecom bill creating a pool of funds derived from unclaimed telephone service deposits. Students from noon-metropolitan areas may be covered by the Rural Scholarship fund.

"We ask our students to study hard, make the grade and prepare themselves for the next level necessary to reach their goal. However, the continued rising cost of a college education presents an obstacle to some students. The Urban Scholarship Fund provides these students additional funding to help pay for their college education and ultimately realizing their goal," stated Rep. Davis.

Students may call the Texas Association of Developing Colleges at (214) 630-2511 or apply online at www.txadc.org. The deadline is Tuesday, July 6.

History Hostages

By Julianne Malveaux
NNPA Columnist

History belongs to she who holds the pen. When the lion is writing, he ate. When the prey is writing (but she didn't survive) she was eaten but also offered a valiant fight. We celebrate our holidays and milestones through the lens of those who won the war, not through the lens of those who mattered, who fought, whose footprint on history is only neglected because we didn't hold the pen.

So last week we celebrated Memorial Day, a day when we lift up our nation's veterans. Our veterans are men and women who fought for the right to fight, but few want to tell that story. Mary Frances Berry and John Blassingame inspired a collection of essays that I edited on "The Paradox of Loyalty", which speaks to the ways that a country that turns its back on Black folk also expects us to be spot on in defense and defending. The Paradox of Loyalty provided us with pain around September 11, 2001, when too many were challenged to patriot up, to fly the flag of a country that had disrespected us, to mouth platitudes of loyalty even while being arrested for being too Black, too present in the wrong place at the wrong time. We were called to be loyal, but loyal to what? To a nightmare, dream, or something in between.

Now, we have learned that our loyalty knows no bounds. African Americans were the first Americans to celebrate Memorial Day, according to Yale University professor David Blight, in an interview he gave to Black Voices at AOL. Bight says that African Americans celebrated Union soldiers improperly buried in a field that was once a racetrack. On May 1, 1865, African Americans, many recently emancipated people, righted the wrong by putting up a fence around the area and claiming those who fought for Black freedom.

Few record Memorial Day as something that started with Black folk. Kudos to Dr. Blight for sharing his knowledge. Shame on the rest of us for attempting to embrace a holiday that is not a holiday for forgetting the courage, dignity, and integrity of some unnamed Black folks who lifted up fallen soldiers. We hold history hostage when we forget that a recounting of the past is always biased, that history belongs to she who holds the pen.

Why she? Because those who wrote our nation's history are mostly white, mostly male, mostly connected to power. Because the stories they tell are self-serving stories of heroism and exemplary service. Because these folks are not the folks who plowed and planted and nursed and uplifted. Because the stories of our history are stories that replicate themselves and have no room for connection.

What would happen if women wrote the stories of our history? Would we learn more about the many ways that invisible women, like Abigail Adams, had something to say about the voice of women and people of African descent, even as President John Adams made poor, but considered, choices. He wrote that in avoiding the matter of slavery, our nation's founders line resume on the popular social networking site LinkedIn.com, she is currently the President of BCI Marketing. Sounds impressive, the only problem is according to documents from the Texas Secretary of State, BCI was slapped with a Texas Forfeiture on July 1, 2005. Her resume indicates she has served as the company's president since February 2002, which is interesting given the fact the State of Texas shows the Articles of Organization were not filed until July, 2003.

Van Dwyne demands the voters hold Gears responsible for the leadership of the City of Irving. That is fair, but shouldn't the voters consider her leadership which resulted in the forfeiture of the company to the State of Texas?

However, we understand things happen, sometimes not in your control even as the leader of an organization. But perhaps voters should also consider the fact that she is listed as President of Monumentals, Inc. which started in June 2003. Yet by January 7, 2005 it was also seized by the State of Texas for Tax Forfeiture.

Is this the kind of leadership worthy of the City of Irving? Is it the type of leadership the City of Irving can afford?

She criticizes Gears for abusing his power and broken faith with the voters. What about the State of Texas taxpayers who had faith that under Van Dwyne's leadership two – not one – companies would pay their fair share of the taxes owed.

On the website for her campaign Van Dwyne prominently promises to, "Restore accountability and fiscal responsibility to the city budget." How can voters have confidence in her ability to deliver on this promise when her track record as a business leader is a picture of failure?

Even now there remain questions regarding the companies Van Dwyne claims she has an interest in: BCI Marketing Group, LLC and Coolest Energy Solutions, LLC. On her Personal Financial State Disclosure Report filed April, 2011 she listed these two companies, yet when a search for information regarding Business Personal Property Taxes paid to Dallas County (searchable online) it indicates no such companies in their database.

So Van Dwyne promises to manage the monies collected by the City of Irving, despite the fact she does not feel obliged to make sure that companies she leads pay their fair share of taxes? That's leadership voters can believe in?

Mayor Herbert Gears has successfully led the City of Irving during his two terms. Not only are violet crimes down a reported 40 percent, substandard housing demolished, and a fair illegal immigrant program implemented but the City of Irving has addressed the healthcare needs of the uninsured. Through a partnership with public and private healthcare providers the Community-Oriented Primarily Care Clinic was opened, serving the city's uninsured citizens. In fact during his tenure the city has received $30 million in Community Development Block Grants to help with better housing for seniors and dental care for children, along with supporting numerous nonprofits in the city.

Under the leadership of Mayor Gears, Irving has balanced its budget for six years, continued to attract Fortune 500 companies to move their headquarters to Irving. In fact at time where most city governments are rocked by the economic crisis Irving has received awards for financial transparency practices and received an AAA rating by financial rating agencies.

Voters should not believe the hype, and empty promises of Van Dwyne, they sound appealing to anyone wanting accountability for the government. Yet why should we have confidence she can deliver when her track record as a private business leader demonstrates nothing but repeated failure, and someone who has no respect for obeying the tax laws of the community.

The North Dallas Gazette continues to endorse Gears because his leadership is not theoretical, but demonstrated. In these challenging times the city of Irving cannot afford to hand over the reins of city to a candidate that has demonstrated only financial failure of each organization she has led.

McKinney announces new Fire Chief

Daniel Kistner, former Chief in Lufkin, chosen to lead Fire Department

McKinney City Manager Jason Gray has announced the hiring of Daniel Kistner to the McKinney Fire Chief position leading the Fire Department. He will start July 5.

Prior to his appointment as the Fire Chief in McKinney, Kistner served as the Fire Chief in Lufkin, Texas, for nearly two years and served the City of Garland in a variety of roles for 26 years, including as the Assistant Fire Chief. He has a Master's degree in Fire and Emergency Management Administration from Oklahoma State University and is working on a PhD in Fire Service Administration.

Kistner is a graduate of the Texas Fire Chief's Academy and a Chief Fire Officer designee.

"Our entire city management team is excited to welcome Chief Kistner to the McKinney team," said Deputy City Manager Rick Chaffin. "He has shown incredible passion and experience for the position, and we are confident he will lead the department to new heights as it serves our growing community."

Kistner was also one of six national candidates selected to receive fellowships to attend Harvard University's Senior Executives in State and Local Government Program this summer at the John F. Kennedy School of Government. The 19-day program, which includes State and local government leaders from across the U.S. and other countries, focuses on exploring the interrelationships between citizens and government, analyzing policy options, and examining the ethical and professional responsibilities of leadership.

Kistner takes over the post from McKinney Fire Chief Mark Wallace, who announced his retirement effective June 1. Wallace has been McKinney's Fire Chief for the last 10 years of his 41-year career.

Picnic by the Pond returns for another fun season

Friday evening music series present varied entertainment lineup

For the first three Friday evenings in June, the Picnic by the Pond music series will entertain visitors with three very different genres of music and entertainment. The one constant, however, is the heaping helping of foot-stomping fun that participants are sure to have, according to Recreation Coordinator Keri Kirkwood.

"The picnics are all free and open to the public, with parking available at the Municipal Complex. Families are most cordially invited since the entertainment is oriented toward the widest audience imaginable," she said.

The series is held in the pond area in front of the "never in my life portrayed myself as a perfect man. But I am not the man that's being portrayed on the television. That's not me."

"I've been accused. I am under attack," he said. "This thing, I'm gonna fight. ... I feel like David against Goliath. But I've got five rocks and I haven't thrown one yet."

The settlement, which was reached after several months of mediation, doesn't look like the fight Long promised. It leaves all the questions from the lawsuits unanswered, including the basic question of his guilt or innocence, and generated new ones, including the monetary terms of the settlement, and whether Long or the church is paying the tab.

"After a series of discussions, all parties involved have decided to resolve the civil cases out of court. The decision was made to bring closure to this matter and to allow us to move forward with the plans God has for this ministry," Art Franklin, spokesman for Long and New Birth Missionary Baptist Church, said in a statement. "As is usually the case when civil lawsuits resolve out of court, we cannot discuss any details regarding the resolution or the resolution process, as they are confidential. This resolution is the most reasonable road for everyone to travel."

B.J. Bernstein, the lawyer for plaintiffs Maurice Robinson, Anthony Flagg, Jamal Parris, and Spencer LeGrande, released a brief statement, saying only that "The matter has been resolved" and adding that neither she or her clients would make any further statements or give interviews now or in the future about the case.

"To me it looks like a cover up," the Rev. Dr. Barbara Reynolds, a religious and political commentator, said. "It looks like he did what the Catholic Church has been doing for decades. I thought that [Long's initial statements] meant he would go to court and fight in court."

Reynolds added that there is no way to be sure if

Long was guilty or innocent. "If that's his addiction, more people will be violated ... But, who will know for sure now, because it's been covered up."

The New Birth congregation rallied around Long, supporting his call to fight and continue to move forward. And he assured them that he would remain their pastor, saying, "I've been called to be your shepherd and as long as you receive me as your shepherd, I'll be your shepherd."

But without a clear resolution of Long's guilt or innocence, or the cost of the settlements to the church, many are wondering what impact this will have on Long's ability to be effective as a leader.

"I think they'll go right on with him," Reynolds said. "People have a special relationship with their preacher and they are going to believe Eddie Long and things will go on as usual."

Sonata Competition. He has also been named a Gold Medalist in the International Piano Recording Competition. He has performed as soloist with several orchestras, including the Dallas Civic Symphony Orchestra, the Milledgeville Chamber Orchestra, the Arkansas Chamber Orchestra, and the South Dakota Symphony Orchestra. Andrews began his college training as a student of Pierrette Mouldous at Eastfield College of the Dallas County Community College District. Currently, Andrews is Director of

Digital forensics Regional labs help solve local crimes

RCFL examiners—all certified by the FBI—specialize in locating encrypted, deleted, or damaged file information that could be used as evidence in an investigation.

In 2008, Illinois police received disturbing information about a Chicago woman who had taken a 3-year-old to a “sex party” in Indiana where the child and an 11-year-old girl were abused by three adults. However, by the time the tip was received, the crime had already occurred, and there seemed to be no evidence to support criminal charges.

But there was evidence, buried deep within the woman’s computer, and examiners from our Regional Computer Forensics Laboratory (RCFL) in Chicago found it—a deleted e-mail titled “map to the party” that contained directions to an Indiana hotel. The evidence led to charges against all three adults, who were later convicted of aggravated sexual abuse and are currently in prison serving life sentences.

“That’s just one example of what we do every day,” said John Dziedzic, a Cook County Sheriff’s Office forensic examiner who is the director of the Chicago RCFL. “Evidence we produce here—and testify to in court—is crucial in a variety of major investigations.”

The FBI established the first RCFL in San Diego in 2000, and today there 16 Bureau-sponsored labs located around the country, staffed by agents and other federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies (see sidebar).

Each facility is a full-service forensics laboratory and training center devoted to examining digital evidence in support of investigations—everything from child pornography and terrorism to violent crime and economic espionage cases.

Using sophisticated tools and technology, RCFLs analyze evidence from all kinds of electronic devices, including computers, cell phones, video game consoles, and even reel-to-reel tapes.

“Anything that can store data electronically can be analyzed,” said Special Agent Justin Poirier, deputy director of the Chicago RCFL.

RCFL examiners—all certified by the FBI—specialize in locating encrypted, deleted, or damaged file information that could be used as evidence in an investigation.

“Digital evidence has become part of just about every type of investigation,” Poirier said, “because today everybody uses computers and portable electronics such as cell phones.”

The benefit of having a regional forensic facility, he added, is that the FBI can bring its expertise and training directly to where it is needed.

“The idea is to create regional resources,” Poirier explained. “We train the state and local examiners, who make a three-year commitment to the RCFL. When they return to their agencies, they have expertise and access they didn’t have before. And in the process, we build lasting relationships with our regional partners.”

Dziedzic added, “Instead of sending evidence to the FBI Laboratory in Quantico, we can analyze it much faster here in our own backyard.”

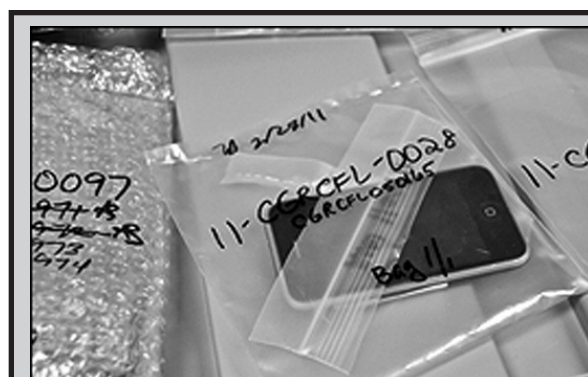

Chicago’s RCFL was established in 2003 and consists of five FBI employees and 13 examiners from agencies including the Chicago Police Department, Cook County Sheriff’s Office, and U.S. Customs and Border Protection. It is the only digital forensics lab in Illinois to be accredited by the American Society of Crime Laboratory Directors/Laboratory Accreditation Board.

“Accreditation is the gold standard when it comes to prosecuting cases and testifying in court,” Dziedzic said. “It means that we operate at the highest professional standards.”

“Criminals are using more sophisticated electronic methods to commit crimes,” Poirier said. “This regional approach to digital forensics—pairing the Bureau with local law enforcement to collaborate on cases—is the future for law enforcement. It really works.”

RCFL By the Numbers

The Regional Computer Forensics Laboratory program, a national initiative funded and administered by the FBI, recently released its annual report for fiscal year 2010. Below are a few of the program’s accomplishments.

- Number of RCFLs nationwide: 16
- Participating agencies: 130, from 17 states
- Examinations conducted: 6,564
- Examiner court testimony: 80
- Computer hard drives processed: 57,067
- Agencies making requests: 722
- Training conducted: 7,403 law enforcement personnel.

Plano settles Medicare/Medicaid reimbursement dispute

Along with many other cities, Plano contracted with Southwest General Services of Dallas (SWGS), a professional services billing company, to perform all aspects of Plano's ambulance billing services. SWGS represented to Plano it had substantial experience and expertise in Medicare/Medicaid billing compliance with state and federal law, and those representations and obligations were included in Plano's contract for services.

SWGS was responsible for properly coding and collecting Plano's ambulance fees in compliance with the law. Unfortunately, in 2006, SWGS failed to incorporate changes in its billing methodology to comply with the new federal rules regarding the standards for ambulance transport charges for Medicare/Medicaid reimbursement. Plano was not made aware of SWGS's failure until late last year. The Department of Justice believes Plano is responsible for the actions of SWGS and therefore is subject to penalty, and Plano expressly denies such liability.

In the interim, Plano has cooperated with the Department of Justice and has agreed to a settlement in exchange for a complete release for any claims arising from the failure by SWGS to properly bill for services under Plano's account. Although Plano disputes responsibility for any penalties, a settlement of this matter will avoid further defense expenses and exposure to higher damages and penalties. Plano has also initiated action against SWGS to recover the damages it incurred through this settlement.

Maternal mortality rates are increasing for African-American women

By Marjorie Valbrun (America's Wire) High rates of obesity, high blood pressure and inadequate prenatal care cause death from childbirth more often for African-Americans in the United States than for whites and other ethnic groups. Worsening this trend are the increasing numbers of cesarean sections nationally. These procedures can result in deadly complications for women dangerously overweight or suffering from hypertension or other ailments.

Nationally, blacks have a four-times greater risk of pregnancy-related death than whites - a rate of 36.1

per 100,000 live births compared with 9.6 for whites and 8.5 for Hispanics, according to a 2008 report by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Maternal mortality rates have been rising in the United States since the mid-1990s. In 1997, the black maternal mortality rate was 21.5 per 100,000 live births compared with 8.0 for Hispanics and 5.2 for whites, according to the CDC. The rate for other races was 8.8.

By 2007, the black maternal mortality rate had jumped to 28.4, roughly three times the rates among whites and Hispanics at 10.5 and 8.9 respectively. Statistics were not broken out for Asians/Pacific Islanders and Native Americans.

Trends show that black maternal mortality rates are increasing in some parts of the country, and two recent studies highlighting the problem have renewed calls for increased focus on reducing the deaths.

According to the new reports, the pregnancy-related mortality rate in some states rivals that in some developing nations. The problem is particularly acute in New York City, where come, and health. For the first time in its 86-year history, United Way opened its grants process, giving all non-profits the opportunity to apply for funding. The new list of grant recipients includes 19 non-profits receiving United Way funds for the first time, including the Methodist Health System Foundation.

"We are honored to receive this landmark grant from United Way, especially in a highly competitive pool of so many worthy programs and projects," says April Box Chamberlain, president and CEO of the Methodist Health System Foundation. "We appreciate that selection for grant funding reflects recognition of an effective project on behalf of better community health and a trust in us for tracking results and continuing to ensure that such programs as Life Shines Bright serve the community well."

More than 160 applicants submitted a total of 350 grant proposals and United Way volunteers awarded impact grants to 78 non-profit organizations across North Texas - all with proven program track records, evidenced by outstanding outcomes. Health care applicants were selected in part due to support strategies that included increasing access to primary health care. The Life Shines Bright Pregnancy program includes prenatal health care for low income populations. Participants in the project have a dramatically lower premature birth rate.

The Life Shines Bright Pregnancy program offered through the Methodist Dallas Medical Center Golden Cross Academic Clinic, is an innovative preterm birth prevention program featuring a new model for prenatal care and group education for at-risk pregnant women and their families with a goal of significantly reducing premature births. The group prenatal classes offer young mothers opportunities for education, support, and networking with other moms-to-be. As a result of the program, preterm birth rates for participants in the program have dropped to 5.6 percent compared to as high as 23 percent in the Dallas area.

"Methodist Dallas has one of the best neonatal intensive care units (NICU) in the country, but our goal is to reduce preterm births and the need for so many infants to begin life in a NICU," says Dr. Stephen L. Mansfield, president and CEO of Methodist Health System. "This program targets reducing preterm birth rates in some Dallas community areas that are among the highest in the state and serves as a model for communities across Texas and the nation."

left a legacy that others would have to deal with. His Massachusetts roots have borne strange fruit, even as race matters remain unresolved despite the election of an African American president.

What would happen if Black folk wrote the stories of our history? Would we learn about the challenges that allowed some to lay stone on the ground to build our nation's capital? Would we learn, from their own mouths, about those who served our plethora of flawed presidents, who managed their foibles? If Black folk wrote our nation's history, would we finally capture the South Carolina burial ground that was the first recorded Memorial Day, according to Yale University history professor David Blight.

What would happen if Native Americans wrote the story, wrote about the land that was taken by greedy white people whose expansion plans collided with other people's existence. Would we learn about the men and women who grabbed belongings in the dark and fled someplace? Would we learn about the reservations that were established, a fraction of the space that one once lived in? Would young people, sitting down to read history, learn about the pain that our imperialism cost?

History belongs to she who holds the pen, and history holds us hostage to interpretation. So write, sister, write, the story of Memorial Day, of the Black folks who went to give dignity and honor to those who lost their lives. Write, sister, write, about the foundation of our nation's capital. Write it, write it, write it, boldly and bodaciously because the story will not be told unless we claim the pen as our own.

Chairman Elizabeth Ames Jones begins process for first state rule to disclose frac fluid components in drilling

Rulemaking to build upon sound foundation of earlier voluntary national disclosure process created with Railroad Commission input Elizabeth Ames Jones, Chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission (RRC), the energy regulatory body for the U.S.'s largest oil and natural gas producing state, will begin the process to craft rules to mandate disclosure of certain chemicals in the solutions used in the hydraulic fracturing process commonly used in drilling natural gas and oil wells.

Chairman Jones said, "A common sense frac fluid disclosure policy will balance the Railroad Commission's dual mission to prevent the waste of Texas's energy resources, and to protect the environment and the public's health and safety. The policy will be built on the sound foundation that the Railroad Commission has already laid through our staff's active leadership in the crafting of Frac Focus, a disclosure website.

"I expect any rule to formalize best practices while protecting proprietary information. As more foreign companies are investing in businesses that drill here in Texas, and more wells are produced using hydraulic fracturing, it is important that our public disclosure rule does not undermine a frac company's intellectual property and trade secrets," said Jones.

"I appreciate the legislature's recent passage of HB 3328, and our rulemaking will instill confidence and allay concerns regarding the safety of hydraulic fracturing for handlers above ground. Hydraulic fracturing has been going on for over 60 years. Our actions should not be misconstrued to upend my earlier statements that it is geologically impossible for fracturing fluid or natural gas or oil to migrate upward through thousands of feet of rock, sometimes miles, to adversely affect ground water. In fact, I am committed to encouraging the development and use of technologies, across the board, like multi-stage hydraulic fracturing, that will allow for an ever shrinking drilling footprint and enhanced recovery of energy. That is simply good for Texas and good for America," added Jones.

On Thursday, June 2, 2011, Jones will advise the Secretary of Energy, Steven Chu, and the Secretary of Energy Advisory Board's Natural Gas Subcommittee at the U.S. Department of Energy Headquarters on the state's successful oversight role of hydraulic fracturing. The Subcommittee is comprised of 7 members: John Deutch (chair), Susan Tierney, Daniel Yergin, Stephen Holditch, Ph.D, Fred Krupp, Kathleen McGinty, and Mark Zoback.

Jones recently testified with other experts and the Environmental Protection Agency before the U.S. House Committee on Science, Space and Technology's hearing regarding hydraulic fracturing. The archived hearing, including Jones' testimony, is available on the Committee website.

NTTA toll rates scheduled to increase effective July 1

Updated rates follow biennial schedule announced in 2009

The North Texas Tollway Authority wants to remind drivers that a regularly scheduled toll rate increase takes effect July 1.

To deliver regional transportation projects to relieve congestion, preserve a strong and financially viable system and maintain quality, safe and reliable roadways, the NTTA will implement a regularly scheduled toll rate increase of .8 cents (less than a cent per mile). The toll rate policy provides for a 50 percent price difference between TollTag and ZipCash rates.

"The Board understands this rate increases comes during a challenging economic time," said NTTA Chairman Victor Vandergriff. "However, raising rates is a planned and necessary step the NTTA needs to take in order to maintain a viable financial system and to deliver the many mobility projects that bring growth to the North Texas region."

The action increases rates from 14.5 cents per mile to 15.3 cents per mile. NTTA rates are compatible with the toll rate structure recommended by the Regional Transportation Council.

This increase follows a schedule that requires toll rates be increased every other July at a compounded annual rate of 2.75 percent. This incremental change is required to meet the financial needs of the NTTA while ensuring drivers see only small increases to tolls.

"ZipCash customers, who pay 50 percent more than TollTag customers, are encouraged to get a TollTag. It will save them money, and they won't have to worry about paying invoices," said NTTA Executive Director Allen Clemson.

NTTA Chief Financial

Officer Janice Davis said the rate increase will help protect NTTA's credit rating, ultimately ensuring NTTA's access to low cost borrowing. "The rating agencies want to see proof that NTTA's Board is committed to the maintenance of the Authority's financial strength and integrity," Davis said.

Mayor Herbert Gears: Working together. Forward together.

Six years ago, life in Irving wasn't what it should be.

Crime kept people locked behind closed doors. Slumlords and their blighted properties defined residential life.

Then Herbert Gears became our mayor. The community came together and with his leadership, Irving is a much better place than it was before Mayor Gears took office.

Crime is down. Taxes are low. More services for critical needs like health care are available.

It is critical that we continue to keep moving forward as a community with a leader like Mayor Herbert Gears!

- ★ Helped create thousands of new jobs while keeping Irving's property taxes one of the lowest in North Texas.
- ★ Reduced crime rates to record lows for six consecutive years.
- ★ Led the way to create the first Community-Oriented Primary Care Clinic, providing medical care for Irving residents without health insurance.
- ★ Secured more than $30 million in Community Development Block Grant funds, to improve housing for seniors, better dental care for children, and additional funding for dozens of community organizations.
- ★ Created a state-of-the-art Irving Animal Care Campus and No-Kill Shelter.
- ★ Created a zero-tolerance policy for absentee landlords and demolished over 1000 sub-standard apartments to create better housing opportunities.

Preventing Bullying and Cyber Bullying

By Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott

Bullying was once considered an unfortunate – but relatively harmless – schoolyard malady. Today, however, parents, educators and law enforcement officials are increasingly recognizing that bullying is anything but harmless.

Young victims of bullying can suffer long-term consequences that haunt them long into adulthood. For the perpetrators, bullying can cross the line and become a criminal violation with lifelong consequences. A recent study by Fight Crime: Invest in Kids showed that nearly 60 percent of boys who were classified as bullies in sixth to ninth grade faced criminal prosecution and conviction of at least one crime by the age of 24. Of that same population, 40 percent had three or more criminal convictions.

Bullies typically choose their victims based upon a particular vulnerability or a specific trait. Some simply choose victims randomly. For example, a bully may target a child because of the child's height or academic successes. To intimidate their victims, bullies rely upon a variety of harmful behaviors such as hitting, teasing, threatening, spreading rumors, damaging belongings and excluding others from social groups.

In an increasingly electronic world, cyber bullies rely on technology to torment others. Cyber bullying occurs when teenagers use the Internet, cell phones or other devices to send or post texts or images that are intended to hurt or embarrass their victims. Put differently, cyber bullies may attempt to destroy or smear a victim's reputation with emails, blogs, social media posts, text messages and other electronic media.

Bullying situations often involve seemingly powerful aggressors and victims who feel helpless. Sadly, some students who suffer bullying at school may believe that violence is the only way to defend themselves – but it is not. Texas law allows bullied students' parents to request that their children be transferred to another classroom or school. The law also requires that all schools display a student code of conduct that imposes disciplinary consequences for young bullies.

Parents and students alike should be aware that some instances of cyber bullying can cross the line and become criminal conduct. Texas law defines criminal harassment as "sending repeated electronic communications in a manner reasonably likely to harass, annoy, alarm, abuse, torment, embarrass, or offend another." Texas teenagers who suffer from cyber bullying or harassment should save all communications from a bully and report those threatening or hurtful messages to a parent, teacher, law enforcement officer or other trusted adult.

By working to prevent young Texans' bullying, harassment and intimidation, adults can help protect young people and make our communities safer. Parents and teachers are often best poised to build a child's self-confidence and teach the student how to peacefully resolve their problems. Parents and school personnel should always take bullying seriously so that children are not embarrassed or afraid to tell adults that they have been bullied.

blacks are nearly eight times more likely to die from pregnancy-related complications than whites, and in California where pregnant blacks are four times as likely to die from childbirth.

"The magnitude of this black-white gap in maternal mortality is the greatest among all health disparities . . . and that gap is growing. It's unacceptable," Michael Lu, an associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology and public health at UCLA and an expert in racial and socio-economic disparities in maternal and infant health, recently told PBS NewsHour.

The black-white gap also stubbornly persists for a variety of socio-economic reasons, including education and income levels, access to and quality of health care, and lifestyle and diet. Improved health care could reduce the maternal death rate by 40 percent to 50 percent, according to CDC estimates, but medical attention has been focused more often on reducing infant mortality during the past decades.

"When we look at some of the factors associated with maternal mortality, most of the underlying factors tend to be dominant in the African-American community, and it is manifested in the health disparities that affect our population," says Dr. Kerry M. Lewis, chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Howard University's College of Medicine and chief of the Division of Maternal-Fetal Medicine.

Lewis, who specializes in high-risk pregnancies, says the mortality rate reflects lack of access to specialized health care that integrates comprehensive skills and technology. Too often, he says, patients are treated by family practitioners, nurse midwives, general obstetricians and gynecologists instead of specialists trained in high-risk pregnancies and medical problems that can cause complications during birth.

Obesity and hypertension are the major contributors to the black maternal mortality rate, leading to death from strokes, renal failure and other complications associated with obesity, Lewis says.

"We have to look at the reality of where we practice," he says. "Obesity is much greater among African-Americans. I deal with a gamut of high-risk problems, but complications from obesity are an underlying problem in all of them."

"Even young patients when they come in for prenatal visits have very elevated rates of high blood pressure. It really starts with obesity, so when they become pregnant, it places them at a higher risk for infections and other complications." To a lesser extent,

Dr. Kerry M. Lewis, chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Howard University's College of Medicine and chief of the Division of Maternal-Fetal Medicine sickle-cell disease, a genetic disorder more common in people of color, also causes complications, he says. Lewis, who also chairs the District of Columbia section of the American Congress of Obstetrics and Gynecology, says the increase in C-sections has compounded the problem because they can lead to hemorrhage, infections and pulmonary embolisms, or blood clots in the lungs. One-third of births in the United States are now by C-section compared with 20 percent a decade ago.

"Women who have C-sections have higher rates of complications and maternal mortality than with vaginal deliveries," Lewis says.

The California study bears this out. Of the 386 women who died in the state during childbirth in 2002 and 2003, it found, 65 had undergone C-sections "and most were unplanned or emergency surgeries to try and save the life of the mother or the infant." Additionally, more than one-third of the deaths "were determined to have had a good to strong chance of being prevented and some causes of death appeared to be more preventable than others."

The study also found that:

- * Blacks in California had a four-times higher risk of maternal death and were more likely to have been overweight or obese and to have risk factors identified in the prenatal period.

- * High rates of obesity or excessive gestational weight gain were contributing factors in one of four deaths.

- * From 2006 to 2008, the black maternal mortality rate in the state was 46.1 deaths per 100,000 live births, compared with 12.8 for Hispanics, 12.4 for whites and 9.3 for Asians.

- * Although blacks account for only 6 percent of California births, they represented 22 percent of pregnancy-related deaths in 2002 and 2003. Hispanics had the largest number of pregnancy-related deaths, 44 percent, and account for 51 percent of births statewide.

- * Cardiomyopathy, or heart disease, was the leading cause of death for blacks with pregnancy-related deaths and accounted for 36 percent of the 22 deaths in that group and 62 percent of all deaths due to the disease.

- * Thirty-one percent of mothers who died had not completed high school.

Conrad Chao, department chair and program director of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of California, San Francisco, who worked on the report, has said that he was surprised by "the magnitude of the disparity" and that the quality of care given these women needs further exploration.

The CDC issued a report in 2001 calling for comprehensive, broad-based public health surveillance of pregnancy-related deaths to identify factors, from pre-pregnancy through six weeks after birth, that affect a woman's chance of survival and that place minority and older women at increased risk of death. The report said surveillance must include reviewing the causes of deaths, analyzing the findings and coordinating action among public health agencies.

"Too often, surveillance stops after identifying and counting deaths," the report states. "With the resources available today, we should be able to eliminate this gap in such an important health outcome."

North Collin County Habitat for Humanity partners with Meals on Wheels and Senior Services of Collin County

North Collin County Habitat for Humanity (NCCHF) has partnered with Meals on Wheels and Senior Services of Collin County (MOWCC) to kick-off a new community effort, A Brush with Kindness, to help senior homeowners revitalize the exterior of their homes. The first A Brush with Kindness revitalization project began Saturday 21 at 1209 Lindsey.

A Brush with Kindness is aimed at providing painting, landscaping, yard cleanup, and minor repairs that create significant exterior improvements on owner-occupied homes.

The goal of this program is to serve low-income homeowners who struggle to maintain the exterior of their homes. The work is done by volunteers who use donated materials whenever possible.

MOWCC has taken on the role of "gatekeeper" for NCCHF. Through this new partnership, the staff of MOWCC looks for ways in which they are able to connect the homebound seniors to home repairs. "A Brush with Kindness program has the potential to help seniors improve their homes and neighborhoods. It exemplifies what can be done when the community pulls together," stated Juli Smith, Director of Senior Services.

Water-Wise Landscape Tour showcases beautiful yards that use little water

Water-wise landscaping focuses on the use of plants that are native to North Texas or adapted to our climate. These plants naturally thrive in our summer heat with little supplemental watering. 2011 marks the 17th year of the popular Water-Wise Landscape Tour which will feature 22 landscapes throughout the Dallas area on Saturday, June 4 from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

"During the summer, our residents frequently use more than 50 percent of the city's drinking water on lawns and landscaping. To help reduce outdoor use, Dallas Water Utilities (DWU) wants to show residents that beautiful landscaping and water conservation can go hand-in-hand," said Carole Davis, DWU conservation program manager. "The Water-Wise Landscape Tour demonstrates that residents can 'go green by saving blue,' and keep their yards looking great while saving water time, money and energy."

The annual Water-Wise Landscape Tour is a self-guided, free tour showcasing the best of the best North Texas Water-Wise landscapes. Guests can choose their own route and visit as many landscapes as they like. Tour maps can be downloaded at SaveDallasWater.com or picked up at one of the three tour headquarters:

- Central Headquarters: White Rock Pump Station, 2900 White Rock Road, Dallas, 75214

- North Headquarters: Les Lacs Linear Park, 3901 Beltway Drive, Addison, 75001

- South Headquarters: Lake Cliff Park, E. Colorado Blvd. & N. Zang Blvd., Dallas 75203

Each of the tour headquarters will serve as the site of "MicroTalks" where attendees can learn how to apply water-wise techniques to their own landscapes. The free 30-minute "MicroTalks" will be taught every hour on the hour by the Dallas County Master Gardeners.

The Water-Wise Landscape Tour is hosted by Dallas Water Utilities, City of Dallas Storm Water Management, City of Dallas Park and Recreation, Texas AgriLife Extension, the Dallas County Master Gardeners and the Town of Addison.

The first 100 visitors at each of the three headquarters will receive a free hose nozzle. Additional information, including a map of the tour locations can be found at SaveDallasWater.com or by calling the Water Conservation Hotline at (214) 670-3155.

To help children deal with bullies, parents should work to bolster children's self-assertiveness and self-esteem. They should also teach their children to solve problems without resorting to violence. Victims of bullying should be taught to immediately report the bully or cyber bully to an adult.

Parents should also teach children that if they witness bullying, there are positive steps to end a potentially dangerous situation and help the victim. Witnesses must not watch or encourage the bully, since bullies typically desire an audience. Instead, witnesses and bystanders should go to the victim's aid if it is safe to do so and report the incident to an adult. Parents who observe any bullying should take action to stop it right away – even if their own child is responsible for the bullying.

To ensure children and teenagers know how to safely resolve a bullying incident, parents and teachers should teach students to:

- Report to an adult any type of bullying – including theft, physical attacks, online harassment, abusive text messages, etc.

- Protect themselves and others. Young Texans should follow rules and stay out of trouble, avoid gangs, walk to school with friends, and be aware of their surroundings.

- Be cooperative and respectful. Conflict resolution exercises, parental involvement in school or summer activities, and spending time with family can help offer children opportunities to experience appropriate social interaction with their peers.

Together, parents, children, teachers and law enforcement authorities can help prevent bullying and cyber bullying, reduce crime and build a brighter future for all Texans.

Irving mayoral candidate Beth Van Duyne: A step forward or backwards for a city rich in diversity

By: Jackie Hardy, NDG
Contributing Writer

Irving voters will go to the polls on June 18 to decide who will be the City's next mayor. Incumbent Herbert Gears and former City Council Member Beth Van Duyne will face each other again in a run-off election. According to a WFAA Channel 8 report, the results from the Irving Mayoral election held on May 14 consist of the following voter percentage breakdown: Van Duyne (41 percent); Gears (38 percent); Joe Putnam (14 percent); and Tom Spink (7 percent).

Mayoral candidate Van Duyne received the highest amount of votes with a total of 4,373, but was unable to win the majority. Gears came in second with 3,984 votes trailing by only 389 votes. Gears and Van Duyne both have a loyal voter base. With the first election being a close one, this mayoral race will most likely go till the very end.

Who will truly win or lose in this election is the bigger question minority voters must consider. Irving is a community that is as diverse as its architectural beauty. Based on 2010 U.S. Census data, Irving has a population comprised of 30.8 percent White; 11.8 percent African American; 13.9 percent Asian; 0.4 percent Native American; 0.1 percent Pacific Islander and 41.1 percent Hispanic. Electing a mayor who understands the issues important to its diverse population is critical to the vitality and progression of the city.

Van Duyne touts her professional experience as a senior corporate officer and business owner with respect to her ability to lead and create job opportunities. There have been concerns over the validity of her company, BCI Marketing and Monumentals Inc. North Dallas Gazette has learned in a document submitted by the Texas Comptroller of Public Accountants that both companies held by Van Duyne are not in "good standing as it has not satisfied all the franchise tax requirements.,,

Transparency is one of the platforms Van Duyne continues to preach on, but has not practiced what she has preached with respect. She has not provided transparency as it relates to the complete nature of the financial status of her businesses. Irving faces tough economic challenges and in this strained economic climate it is paramount that the next mayor has the business savvy and knowledge to manage, as well as oversee budgets while creating job growth for all residents in both the northern and southern sectors of the City.

Like the City of Dallas, the economic culture of those residents who live in the north vastly contrast to those residents living in the southern sectors of the Irving. Under the current mayoral leadership, Irving is seeing economic development through their Capital Improvement Projects (CIP), but there is a true concern with some community and business leaders that the economic gap that was once ignored in previous local governments will resurface if Van Duyne is elected.

"I have serious concerns that Beth Van Duyne would not be sensitive to the needs of the minority community. When she was on the City Council she had numerous opportunities to show all of Irving the love and she did not seize that opportunity. The current mayor [Herbert Gears] may not be perfect; however, I do believe he tries to do what is best for all of Irving regardless of race or religious background.,," said Don Herring, Jr., owner of Don Herring Mitsubishi and Board Member of the Irving Hispanic Chamber of Commerce (IHCC).

Former Chair of IHCC, Rene' Castilla shares a different view with respect to how Van Duyne would serve the Minority and Women Business Enterprise community. Castilla believes she will be as sensitive to the issues the minority business communities face because she knows firsthand the challenges that come to both minority and women-owned businesses.

"I think as a woman and a business owner she will bring that sensitivity to the office not only because she is a woman, but because the office of the mayor requires it and I think she can do that as well as anybody. To me Beth has grown from the time she was on the City Council to the time she is now seeking the position of mayor and in that growth comes maturity and understanding that we live in a diverse community and she has had to listen and serve all points of that community and I think she will do that as Mayor.,," states Castilla.

North Dallas Gazette reached out to the Van Duyne campaign to allow them the opportunity to answer the questions about the forfeited existence status deemed by the Secretary of State on the two businesses led by candidate Van Duyne, as well as answer questions on specific ways her companies has created economic growth. Unfortunately, we have been unsuccessful in getting a response from her campaign and have been unsuccessful in finding a list of business clients she has served to provide our readers with a track record of Van Duyne's business accomplishments and experience.

Minority voters will also need to take a serious look at the direction they would like to see Irving take as they address Illegal Immigration issues. Candidate Van Duyne has publicly supported the controversial Section 287 (g) under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). To see Van Duyne's public comments on this topic, visit <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vOvNvf9m85g> or <http://despiertairving.blogspot.com>.

According to Wikipedia, Section 287 (g) is a Federal Act that authorizes the Federal Government to enter into agreements with state and local law enforcement agencies, permitting designated officers to perform immigration law enforcement functions, pursuant to a Memorandum of Agreement, provided that the local law enforcement officers receive appropriate training and function under the supervision of sworn U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) officers. Under 287(g), ICE provides state and local law enforcement with the training and subsequent authorization to identify, process, and when appropriate, detain immigration offenders they encounter during their regular, daily law-enforcement activity.

Manuel Benavidez, Irving Civil Rights Activist who received a favorable ruling in July 2009 from Judge Jorge Solis ordering Irving to change the at-large voting system election of City Council members to a single-member voting system for those districts with a large minority population to insure equal representation of government has concerns. He feels it will give local law enforcement the power to act as ICE agents and could be an open gate to the unfair treatment of Hispanic residents of Irving. Benavidez is concerned the 287 (g) would give local law enforcement full discretion and authority to enforce this federal law when in fact no crime has been committed.

"The police department is certainly not for that particular program and nationally 287 (g) is not producing what it thought it would produce; therefore I do not see it as something that will come before the Council or one of Van Duyne's major initiatives she would intend to do if elected as Mayor.,,"

"What is in place now, the Criminal Alien Deportation Program (implemented under Gears watch) is working and is providing the City the opportunity to address the criminal aliens without causing grief to the community at large," comments Castilla.

Historically the turn-out in local elections among minorities are low and it proved to be the case in the May elections. It is the hope of the various business and community leaders that minorities will get out and vote in June.

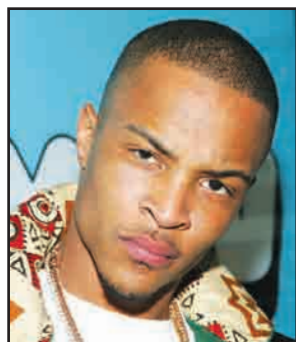

Community leaders are particularly hoping voters within the minority community will take a stand in this upcoming run-off election. This election is important because the issues that matter the most to the voters who make up the diverse population of Irving could have the power to see those issues move forward in the direction of progress.

"If minorities do not believe their vote will make a difference they will be ambivalent so it is important that they know their vote counts. In an at-large election like this, I hope they know that their vote can make a difference and that their vote could sway the entire election if there is a strong turn-out among minorities.,," added Herring.

Gazette Gossip: T.I. finds time to do something for others

By Tonya Whitaker
NDG Staff Writer

Most of y'all know that T.I. is serving time in prison for violating probation on his federal drug possession charges. But, being in the slammer did not stop him from spreading some Memorial Day cheer. According to MTV.com, the rapper sponsored a bus trip for the families of 14 of his fellow inmates. The trip, To See a Loved One, allowed the family to see their loved ones Sunday and Monday.

T.I.

The group boarded a chartered bus in Atlanta and Alabama on Saturday bound for the Forrest City Correctional Facility in Forrest

City, Ark. T.I. said of the trip, "There are a lot of dudes in here that haven't been able to see their loved ones in years. Their families can't afford the trip so I wanted to help out." As for T.I., he will have to wait at least four months to see his wife, Tiny. His release date, according to Straight from the A.com, is Sept. 29. I know I have been harsh on T.I. in previous columns, but I have to admit that his most recent move is worth praising.

Comparing apples and oranges?

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is an NBA legend, and he is not too pleased right now with former Bull Scottie "Jordan coattails rider" Pippen. He didn't take too kindly Pippen's Michael Jordan/LeBron James comparison. To add fuel to the fire, Pippen went on to say that James could be the greatest player of all time. I was OK with Pippen comparing James to Jordan. People are always comparing Jordan to someone. But, to say James could be the greatest player of all time is stretching the truth. Abdul-Jabbar did not go to Twitter to air his disdain like some athletes. He just wrote an open letter to the LA Times. The letter was classy and a nice way of telling Pippen he doesn't know what he is talking about. I admire Abdul-Jabbar's tact and respect for Pippen's opinion, though. Jabbar does kindly sign his letter to for those such as Pippen who want to forget the talents of past ballers: "Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, NBA's All-Time Leading Scorer." Also, Pippen, let's not forget that Kareem won six NBA titles with the Bucks and Lakers, and six MVP awards. You want to call James great? Let's wait and see.

music's inherent inclusiveness and interaction through repetitious lyrical content underpinned by driving beats and guitar licks is the cornerstone of the quartet gospel style. The rich history of spirituals used to relay messages of hope, inspiration and encouragement remain true today in both traditional and contemporary gospel music.

The Melvin Williams Group is one of 10 ensembles selected as US Music Ambassadors to represent The Rhythm Road: American Music Abroad. Since 2006, the program has sent more than 100 musicians on tours to 97 different countries, most of them outside the reach of American music.

Melvin Williams of Smithdale, Mississippi is one of Gospel music's most distinctive voices rooted in a raspy, soulful blend of spirituals, hymns, quartet, traditional and contemporary gospel music. Williams will play a series of gospel concerts and conduct workshops titled "The History of Gospel Music" during his tour of palaces, colleges, concert halls, and town squares. The Melvin Williams Group's high-level energy and emotion-filled performances is guaranteed to bring audiences to their feet.

Murphy Municipal Complex, 206 North Murphy Road, and the entertainment runs from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., although families and individuals should plan to arrive in time to get favorable seating. Lawn chairs, blankets and seating pads are encouraged. Picnic baskets may be brought, but glass containers are not allowed, and the public display of alcohol is discouraged.

"Parents should also keep tabs on their children since the pond is accessible to curious youngsters," said Kirkwood.

Opening the series on June 3 is "Radiant Fallout," a worship band from Wylie. According to their web site, the band members "believe that God has brought us together for the purpose of impacting the hearts of believers and sharing the Gospel to seekers through modern worship music."

The members of Radiant Fallout represent three different churches where they are involved in the music and youth ministries. The band chose the name "Radiant Fallout" because they see themselves as "the fallout left to impact the world for Jesus Christ after his birth, death, and resurrection." Members include Matt Foster, Shane Salinas, Robert Watson, Lyle Samples and Daniel Weyandt.

On Friday, June 10, Murphy-based "Hard Country" will take the stage. Influenced by country music, rock and blues, the band's original music is rock-tinged country influenced by artists such as Merle Haggard, Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Cross Canadian Ragweed, Reckless Kelly, Jack Ingram, Randy Rogers Band, Charlie Robison, Pat Green, Cory Morrow, George Strait and Dwight Yoakum as well as various rock influences.

The members of Hard Country include Bryan Joyner, Greg Deans, Bo Hulsey and John Joyner.

Closing out the 2011 version of Picnic by the Pond is David Chicken, described as part superhero, part Elvis, and 100% fun for all ages. This singer-songwriter leads the audience through a high-energy, interactive performance filled with creative movement, motivational messages, and general hilarity based on his original music.

An Emmy award winner, David Chicken invites members of the audience on stage to sing, play musical instruments and become stars. David is joined on the stage by "Super Chachie" a superhero Chihuahua, who does amazing tricks. The show concludes with a group lesson on the new dance craze, the Scakle.

"There are no contingency plans for rain or inclement weather," concluded Kirkwood.

The series is presented by the Murphy Parks and Recreation Department. For more information, call 972-468-4000.

This is June 2011, students are graduating from high school, trade school, colleges and universities, and they must be wondering, "Where am I going from here?" Couples are planning weddings and families are having reunions. It is now time to, "Put Your Trust in God." God will deliver and keep you from all temptation and harm if you obey the teachings of Christ and set your mind to live right.

God gives instructions as to how we should live because He created us and He alone knows what it takes. The Word of God will loosen a tight mind. We should live right in order to have God's peace and comfort of mind. If you don't believe you can live holy in this life, you are an unbeliever. You reveal your love for God by your willingness to do something for Him.

Prayer is a mighty force and Christ is a panacea for every illness or sickness, in mind and body. What counts is not what God has done for us, but what He has done for us which we have not forgotten. A good follower makes a worthy leader. A good listener is an excellent learner. Your feet can remain on the ground as your mind is lifted upward.

Regardless of your intelligence, if you practice unrighteousness, you are going down in shame. Learn to deny yourself in order to please God. You can't shine for Jesus without being rubbed. Therefore, no matter what may be your problem, shine for Jesus by being rubbed.

The paradox of our time in history is that: We have taller buildings, but shorter tempers; wider freeways, but narrower viewpoints. We spend more, but have less; we buy more, but enjoy less. We have bigger houses, yet smaller families. We have more conveniences, but less time to enjoy the family that we have. We have more degrees but less common sense; more knowledge, but less judgment; more experts, but more problems; more medicine, but less wellness.

As a society, we drink and smoke too much, spend too recklessly, laugh too little, drive too fast, and get too angry too quickly. We stay up too late, then get up too tired; read too little, watch too much TV, and pray too seldom. We have multiplied our possessions, but greatly reduced our values. We talk too much, love too seldom, and we hate too often and for too long.

As my maternal grandmother, Maggie Smith Baker, said, "We've learned how to make a living, but not a life." With modern medicine we've added years to our life, but not life to our years. We can go around the world to meet people, but have trouble meeting a new neighbor. We have conquered outer space but not "our" inner space. We have done larger things, but not better things.

We are learning to clean up the air, but we are polluting our soul with the television, the Internet, pornography, vulgar language, etc. We've conquered the atom, but not our prejudice. We write more, but learn less. We plan more, but accomplish less. We've learned to rush, but not to wait; remember, patience is a virtue. We build faster computers; they hold more information, produce more copies, but we communicate, face-to-face, with each other less and less.

These are the times of fast foods and slow digestion; big men and small character; steep profits and shallow relationships. Days of two incomes but more divorces; fancier houses, but more broke homes. These are the days of quick trips, disposable diapers, throw-away morality, one night stands, overweight bodies, and pills that do everything from cheering you up, to calming you down, and even kill you. Now is the time to spend time with your loved ones because they are not going to be around forever.

and other mentors. And he said that unless the 433 sergeants—who make up the largest percentage of managers in the Dallas Police Department—implement the leadership principles they learned in the course, “we’re not going to be successful as a department.”

Speaking to Bill Caruth, who was in attendance, Brown said, “The city will be safer because of the Caruth Police Institute.”

Michael Heidingsfield, Director of Police for the University of Texas System Police, was the graduation ceremony’s featured speaker. He was responsible for revamping the police force for the nation of Iraq in 2004. Now he is responsible for the leadership and operation of the UT System Police and Police Academy. Heidingsfield previously was the senior assistant sergeant at arms for Police Operations and Homeland Security for the United States Senate.

“Management is an assignment that can be given to anyone,” Heidingsfield said. “Leadership is a burden because it carries with it the very high price of leading others, protecting others lives and managing the public safety. And people have to intuitively assess themselves deep inside and make sure they are up to that task.”

Heidingsfield challenged the officers to perform a gut check to see if they are ready to leaders, are you prepared to assume that role?”

If leadership is your destiny, “it is time for you to maximize your talents, broaden your vision and embrace the business of policing,” Heidingsfield said. “It is your burden to lead.”

Twenty-eight of the 29 Dallas Police Department sergeants who completed the Caruth Police Institute’s Sergeants Supervisory Series pose for a class photo at UNT Dallas May 27. Police Chief David Brown told the officers that he insisted that they become leaders.

do what Chief Brown expects.

“It is complicated; it is fraught with peril; it is overwhelmed with scrutiny; and it is a relatively thankless task. With all of that as the context of your generation emerging as police

This was only the second sergeants class the Caruth Institute has offered, and for the first time, graduates of its Lieutenants Leadership Series led the course. The intensive classes were designed to provide state-of-the-art leadership development in large-city policing and to prepare the next generation of DPD sergeants to supervise, mentor and manage effectively.

One of the graduates, Sgt. Melquiades Irizarry, said the class will make them better supervisors. The old way of policing was being reactive. They learned how to be proactive and take ownership of problems. The course should be available for all ranks throughout the police department, Irizarry said, so that everyone can be on the same page and move forward with the organization.

“We learned how to think out of the box and learned how the world is evolving. Our relationship with the community was reinforced. Now we have a better understanding of how to communicate with the citizens of Dallas.”

Sgt. Thomas Fry thanked the Caruth family, the police department and the Caruth Police Institute for providing the in-depth training and investing in his and the department’s future.

“I learned conflict resolution; I learned various leadership skills; I learned how to improve myself and the importance of education when dealing with citizens in stressful situations. I believe now I can be a better leader to my officers as well as the citizens of Dallas,” Fry said.

“I believe a better educated police department has definitely proven to be a benefit to the citizens of a community which we serve.”
