This is no time for apathy

Most African Americans, males in particular, can share with me the tradition of the neighborhood barbershop, past and present (not much has changed). Besides serving as a bastion of male bonding—not to mention its contribution to masculine grooming-it serves as the crossroads to various points-of-view about sports, women, pop culture, social issues and religion.

Judging by the posturing and pontificating, the philosophizing and analogizing, the analyzing and apologizing by the participants in these "barbershoptown meetings," you would assume an equal amount of knowledge and opinion to spring forth on the subject of politics, certainly a subject that has great consequence for all of us.

However, ask your typical group of Saturday morning professors "Who do you think will win the senatorial race in our area?" and see what kind of response you get. Asking about Einstein's Theory of Relativity would elicit a better one. Eventually, you may get a lame answer like, "What difference does it make? Things won't get any better for black folks no matter whose elected."

Is this a worthy excuse for not voting, for not participating in the political process that for so long we were legally lock out of? Let's think about this. While it may appear that voting will not change anything, not voting will ensure it. Maybe greater participation in the 1980 election would have prevented Ronald Reagan from become President-for two terms. And in so doing, African Americans' left themselves open to eight years of a conservative political backlash from which we are still suffering.

Throw in the gradual gain of power in Congress by the Republican Party and the following issues are exposed to the republican agenda: affirmative action, welfare, scholarships for the underprivileged, tax reform, job training programs and, well, you get my drift.

How these issues are addressed by our government is critical to the African American community. Only through the ballot box can we affect how government policy is shaped. Informed, intelligent voting can make a difference—if enough of us do it.

What are your thoughts?

Let Your Voice Be Heard!

The ballot box is your opportunity to make a difference in government

The Democratic Party primary elections are approaching and voters will once again be called on to decide who are the party's best choices to run against the Republican Party candidates in the Fall elec-

For many, this can be a very daunting and confusing time, almost intimidating. There are so many offices, candidates and issues to keep track of.

Primaries are especially difficult because the candidates all belong to the same party, which should mean they have essentially the same philosopy about governing. Voting responsibly challenges citizens to educate themselves about each candidate. Taking the time and making the effort to do so is something many voters (and potential voters) are not often willing to do.

Here lies the power of the more convenient to vote for the same person—again and again. We can always rationalize that "it doesn't make any difference anyway, none of them really do anything, right?

Wrong! Accountability is the number one incentive for any person voted into public office. Particularly in the case of legislators, voters can demand accountability on three fronts: availability to constituents, voting record on legislation and effectiveness in protecting and promoting the welfare of the people they represent. Be in consistent violation in any of these areas and guess what? See ya!

House District 100 has the opportunity to change its representation in this primary election. Rep. Sam Hudson, III has had a lock on this district for over 20 years, and gives credence to the premise that of these candidates—what we are "continued incumbency leads to incumbent candidate. It's easier, increasing complacency." Mr. Hudson has shown disdain and insensitivity to the voters who have continually reelected him. To say that he has taken them for granted is a gross understatement. During his tenure as a legislator, Mr. Hudson has demonstrated questionable integrity regarding personal finances and use of public funds, a penchant for authoring and submitting numerous and petty legislation and gained a reputation as an absentee representa-

This primary election will hopefully see the citizens of District 100 shake the shackles of apathy and cynicism and exercise their option of voting for one of the alternative candidates, Ken Green or Terri Hodge.

We are not endorsing either one endorsing is change.

===View Point≡

Freedom of speech is definitely in effect at About "Waiting to Exhale" ter RAG MON. I read Thomas Muhammad's [column] and immediately knew why this paper was free. I would not buy it if it was a penny with nickel candy. Thomas Muhammad is so quick to quote EL-HAJJ MAILK EL-SHABAZZ (MALCOLM X), the pre-1964 black muslim, out of context.

The Malcolm [of] 1964 embraced ISLAM and did not see men as colors but as men of deeds and actions. What we see today is opposite of what ISLAM taught Malcom to see and it is reflected by Thomas. It seems Mr. Muhammad is living in yester-year and does not realize the gains of the community as a whole. Attacking the "white jew" is not going to stop the black on black crime in our communities, the envy, the jealousy, the hate that is prevalent in our communities, the storm of violence that we [perpetrate] on each other daily. It is no longer the European man we fear-it is our own black brothers and sisters.

Let us talk about the Jewish involvement in the slave trade, and while we do that let us address the involvement of the Portuguese, Dutch, French, British, Arabs, and, oh yeah! The AFRICAN (our ancestors). Name calling and [non] intelligence prove that you have a very limited vocabulary and a very small mind as well as vision. But, of course, you are no Malcolm. Let me add that you can change AFRICAN AMERICAN HISTORY MONTH anytime; is it [that] much difference in 2 or 3 more days? Because, as you so well put it, we are too busy having miller time, party time, sports times and, might I add, NO TIME.

It also seems that you want to burn down the barn for a few mice. Instead of looking so much at numbers, you should be looking for ways to make [the whole] DISD into a TAG; that way there is no worry of what percentage is what color.

Lastly, you are no Malcolm or Martin, so go and reevaluate your wrong position that you get from the NEW NOI (fake muslims). Like making Townview a Jewish thing (how many of those kids are Jews). It seems they are all [just] teens trying to learn and prosper.

I leave you with a new and bet-

definition RACISM: POWER PLUS PREJUDICE

HATRED FOR ANOTHER PERSON JUST BECAUSE OF SKIN COLOR (courtesy of an intelligent man). How else could you define HITLER or FARRAKHAN. Stop letting the past be longer than the future (courtesy of a world respected Imam).

Please make sure that Mr. Muhammad gets this, [even] if it is not printed (I have doubt that it will be). No need for him to respond because I will not be reading MON anymore. I did read the (Community) Pulse but that constitutes blanket journalism. I also make a request that you publish an article on true ISLAM so that intelligent readers can know the difference. So get Minister Jeffrey Wayne Jackson (Muhammad) of the NEW NOI and get Imam Yahya Abdullah (a true AFRICAN AMERICAN MUSLIM) to clear this up. By the way, MUHAMMAD means praiseworthy, so lose the name that our HOLY PROPHET wore so well. As Salaam Alaikum.

LETTERS...

Moments to Ponder

Yesterday at the Dallas City Hall, I made a brief statement to the city council. I was in attendance for over two hours. During the time I was particularly impressed with what was said by Black members of the council. They had given study and consideration to what was said.

"February Moments to Ponder" would appear to be done well. Those individuals listed were of national or international reputation. May I suggest that noted Black Texans also be included. Though I do not know his birthday, I think the late William McDonald of Ft. Worth—founder of the Fraternal Bank & Trust Co., founder of the Negro Masonic Lodge, co-chairman of the Republican Party of Texas—would be nice to be included. One who knew of him is the Rev. O.S. Spears.

Where is Al Lipscomb?

Where is Al Lipscomb on the Townview issue? Remember when he came down to DISD to ask for Board President Sandy Kress' resignation? We have not heard a peep from him since.

Could it be that shortly after that meeting Al Lipscomb received a $237,000 contract for janitorial supplies at the aborted school board meeting in January when DISD had previously rejected his substandard products. We don't have problems with black businessmen making money. Just don't lead, or should I say mislead, the community to think you are fighting our causes and leave us out there when the so-called leader sells out.

Thank God for leaders like Lee Alcorn and Thomas Muhammad, who are still ever vigilant and cannot be bought.

Soronity elects new president

Iota Phi Lambda Sorority, Inc. Psi Chapter Dallas announces the election of its new President for 1995-96 Charlotte D. Berry. Mrs. Berry has been a member of the sorority for 10 years and has served as 1st vice president and chair of membership and chaired many of its fundraising activities over the years.

The organization is a sixty year old National Business and Professional Sorority. The local chapter is celebrating its sixtieth anniversary this year. The organization promotes education of youth through scholarships, supporting entrepreneurship. mentoring/tutoring programs, The North Texas Food Bank, Terrell State Hospital, Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation, The American Red Cross, The African American Museum, and The United Negro Fund to name a few of the programs and projects the group is currently involved with.

Mrs. Berry was honored with a president's reception recently with greetings from sorors; Juanda Wallace immediate past chapter president, and Dwala Brown, Southwest Region Director; Mr. Thurman Jones, publisher of MON who presented her with a "cover page" momento from the December issue. Also on hand to toast the event was Mr. Clif Miller, community volunteer and current General chairperson of the UNCF campaign.

The event was hosted by the 1996 pledge group of: Jennifer Adams, Angela Carter, Nona Fisher, Portia Green, and JoAnn Goudeau under the leadership of membership chair, Soror Vahnita Loud. There were some 80 guests on hand for the sparkling and surprised fill reception on behalf of Mrs. Berry's coming in to presidency of Psi chapter's 50 local members

All sisters in the struggle to keep our children's dreams alive. For centuries, strong African-American women like these have endured untold hardships — even risked their lives — in their quest for justice.

They did not plead — they insisted.

They did not simply talk — they acted.

Their determination fired our imaginations with the knowledge that we have the power to fill the future with economic opportunity for ourselves and our community.

Their steps were just the first in an eloquent march... a march that, if it is to continue, must take place in today's technological arena, where the ability to navigate the Information Superhighway promises enormous benefits for the generations to come.

Today offers new opportunities to lead.

And with the tools of advanced technology at hand, the march ahead can shake the very foundations of the world, making the dream a reality.

Thomas Muhammad

I mean it this time. From this day forward, I intend to be very positive and upbeat when speaking about America. My birth place, my home, the wonderful, beautiful, great and proud; the magnificent, good, forever-moving-upward nation. That also includes Dallas, my birth home. Home of a FIVE-TIME SUPER BOWL CHAMPIONS football team, with a "there's no place like home" kinda groove and a "that's my kinda place" feeling all rolled up into one great "can do spirit."

ditor's Note: The opinions expressed by Mr. Muhammad's commentary are not necessarily those of the Minority Opportunity News.)

Yes folks, I'm serious. And to prove my point just keep reading. We'll start off with a list of some very positive developments that recently happened in our great city, and the nation (a place that's probably second only to the great land of 'OZ," where the Wizard resides).

Here are some wonderful events that happened: In Dallas, school board president Sandy Kress announced he will not seek re-election in May '96, a great break for everyone in DISD. Dallas city councilwoman Charlotte Mayes (who was caught saying that she was willing to sell her council seat to a white man) was booed by Martin Luther King parade participants during the King celebrations.

On the national front, O.J. Simpson was finally given an opportunity to tell television viewers how racist the Goldman and Brown families, NOW (National Organization of Women) and the white media have been towards him since his murder acquittal. He was also given an opportunity to market his newly made video "O.J. Tells" to raise money that will help pay off some of the huge legal fees that he has incurred. A number of people have tried to paint O.J. as an opportunist, accusing him of using his former wife's murder to make money.

I say, why not! Hell! Nicole's sister, former D.A.'s Marsha Clark and Chris Darden, and the Brown and Goldman families all are making a bundle on the case. Why shouldn't O.J.? And then there are those who question why O.J. has come back to the same African Americans that he spent most of his career trying to get

"No Kidding! This is a Nice Column

Americans (for the most part) taken him back? Some say the answer lies in the old biblical quote "let he without sin cast the first stone!" Or, to cut to the chase, African Americans might be saying what they said during the Million Man March and that is "white folks, this is family business and you can't tell grown folks who to give their support to!"

Which brings us to this bull of white folks questioning "if blacks can fairly interview blacks?" As was clearly shown during the BET (Black Entertainment Television) exclusive interview with O.J. Simpson and African American journalist Ed Gordon, we are more than qualified! But more importantly, why is it that white folks never question whether white folks can objectively interview white folks? Yea, I know the answer and it's called exhibiting a RACIST BEHAVIOR.

...white folks, this is family business and you can't tell grown folks who to give their support to!"

And for the record, it's this writer's opinion that O.J. is innocent. Here's two obvious reasons why that should make you think: 1) Why did the D.A.'s office close the investigation and halt the search for other suspects after O.J.'s arrest? 2) Anytime a whooolllle bunch of white folks are after one black man, I'm suspicious, aren't you?

Even on an international level, one story brought home to us again how racism is real when your color is black. Did you see the story on the Ethiopian Jews? (These Jews were airlifted from Ethiopia to the illegal state of Israel in 1984-85 and 1991.) It is said that they are the true Jews, because they have been practicing the religion of Judaism since the time of Christ.

Ethiopia is also home of the first and oldest original Christian church, known as the Coptic church, and it was the place where Prophet Muhammad, the prophet of Islam, first sent his earlier followers when they were being persecuted in Mecca for their belief. At that time Ethiopia was know as Abyssinia. King Negus, the African Christian king of Abyssinia, gladly took the Muslims under his protection, proclaiming that there was a thin line between Christianity and Islam. (In fact, one of the Muslims in the group converted to Christianity.)

During the month of January, it was away from? And why have African reported that Ethiopian Jews who donated blood in Israel found out their blood was being dumped in garbage cans because of their skin color. The donated blood was marked: Do not use, came from Ethiopian [Jews]. In fact, the Israeli government classifies them as black lews, not Ethiopian Jews, so therefore they can not be considered "real" Jews. By the way, do you know of any "white" Jews?

The Ethiopians didn't take too kindly to the racist (that's what they called them, not me) Israeli Health Department trashing their blood, so about 15 to 20,000 thousand of them took to the streets in

At last report there were 41 Israeli police and 21 others injured during the demonstration. I don't think we've heard the last of this one. I've been telling people for years that "white Jews were racist; now do you believe me? One American newspaper reported that "Many Ethiopian Jews, frustrated by their slow integration into Israeli society and inspired by the civil-rights campaigns of American blacks, have come to view their plight as a result of their skin color."

And while we're on the subject, is actress Whoopi Goldberg a white or black Jew? See, I told you I could do a positive story.

Until then, the struggle continues.....

The Israeli health authorities have maintained that they dumped the blood due to the greater occurrence of HIV in Africa.-Ed.

Ed Gordon is All Right With Me!!!

In January, when the reports first surfaced of Ed Gordon's impending interview with O.J. Simpson, I cheered and waited in anticipation.

I wasn't waiting to hear what Mr. Simpson had to say but, more importantly, to watch Ed in action for what would probably be one of the most significant interviews of his career.

Significant, not because of the level of importance of the interviewee, but because of the hype surrounding Mr. Simpson, and also his refusal to grant others an interview since the so-called trial of the century.

This was indeed a coup for Black Entertainment Television (BET). Thousands of journalists around the country, and around the world, were vying for the opportunity to interview O.J. Simpson. But Ed Gordon scored the victory.

I was proud of Ed for landing the interview. After all, he has worked for years in the trenches and he helped to legitimize Black Entertainment Television's news department. He worked hard to get the interview, and that shows the true marks of a good journalist.

Was I still proud of him after the interview? Of course!

What I was not proud of, however, was the criticism from other "journalists" who felt that either Ed was "too soft" or not the "right" person for the job.

Many of the critics were jealous because they were not in Ed's place. Then too, some of the critics only have one thing to account for their claims to fame: their white skin! So naturally they took pleasure in criticizing one of their own.

Too often, the Black journalist is held to a standard that remains non-existent for the Anglo journalist. It is not uncommon for Black journalists' integrity to be questioned, especially when the subject is even remotely related to Black people.

The questions are asinine and insulting, particularly when you consider that the thought never crosses an editor's mind regarding whether or not an Anglo reporter can cover Anglo issues without incorporating their biases into the story.

Still, in my short 15 years as a journalist, I've never seen other journalists speak out so negatively about one of their own, especially when the brother didn't do a darned thing wrong.

Oh, the plight of the African American journalist, trying to make it in a system that is just beginning to open its doors wide enough for more than one Black person to get through at a time.

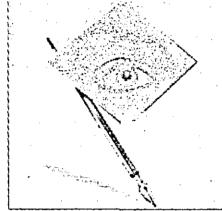

And so, Ed was held to a higher scrutiny than ever before, ever in his life-time. And he rose to the occasion and emerged victorious, once again.

After all, isn't this the same brother who interviewed Presidents Clinton and Bush. Oprah Winfrey and Janet Johnson? Isn't this the same brother who has moderated numerous televised panels, before live audiences, with the likes of Minister Louis Farrakhan, Rev. Jesse Jackson, Congresswoman Maxine Waters, and Malik Yorba?

Isn't this the same brother who is family oriented, community-minded and grounded in the knowledge of who he is and what he is?

Yes, Ed Gordon has credentials. He is respected for his works and he has proven time and time again that he is a professional, able to hold his own among the "big boys." So, why the criticism?

What I was not proud of, however, was the criticism from other "journalists" who felt that either Ed was "too soft" or not the "right" person for the job.

I believe Ed realizes the attacks are not personal. He realizes what really exists in the wonderful world of journalism and he knows that it's just the nature of the beast.

Now, how can those of sound mind and noble spirit respond to the onslaught against Brother Gordon? Well, the best way you can acknowledge a person's contribution is by letting that person know how you feel. Tell the critics what you think about their behavior and let Ed know as well. Write to Ed Gordon at One BET Plaza, Washington, DC 20019.

While many may feel it's too late and not worth the effort, that assessment couldn't be further from the truth. As long as you're alive, it's not too late to let somebody, anybody, everybody, know how you feel!

Well, KTVT is finally getting the message. It seems management is now hiring more African Americans. Among the new hires is former KKDA and KRLDer Gyna Bivens, who recently left KDFW-FOX 4 Texas. But we can't exhale yet because they have a long way to go on-air and off... I know FOX is reeting from the loss of Gyna because that was a big blow. KTVI has started a noon newscast. Still no African American anchors. But thank God for Brenda Teele!!! DFW/ABC will be organizing the Town Hall meeting for the National Council of Negro Women's Black Family Reunion Celebration, June 14-16, at Fair Park. The event is co-sponsored by Bank One, Texas...There's been talk for quite some time about meeting with the powers that be at the Fort Worth Star Telegram regarding the recruitment, hiring, promotion and retention of African Americans. The Star Telegram just doesn't have a clue what to do. And just when the move was about to be made over to Fort Worth, the Dollas Morning News loses it, A memo is released and out of 11 people promoted, not one is African American, Are the African Americans at the Marning News upset? YES. But guess what? Others of good conscience and sense are also upset because the message was quite blatant. Congratulations to Gilbert Bailon, who is now the Deputy Managing Editor of the paper. The current president of the National Association of Hispanic Journalists, Gilbert is deserving of the promotion. Not only are his credentials impeccable, he is a source of inspiration to so many young people, and that's important because there are those journalists who, once they get theirs, don't care about anyone else!!! Well after that initial memo regarding promotions, someone realized something was wrong and more information was released with the name of African American Neil Foote added to the list. # AIDS virus is claiming increasing number of African American women

By Dorothy Gentry - Contributing Writer

As the saying goes, "When white America gets a cold, black America gets the flu."

And so it is with HIV/AIDS - a disease that has killed thousands and is spreading at an alarming rate through the black community.

AIDS and the Black Community

African Americans make up 12 percent of the total population in the United States, but represent as high at 30 percent of all AIDS cases.

"That shows a disproportionate rate of progression," says Dr. Pam Blackwell, a Dallas licensed professional counselor who has counseled HIV/AIDS patients for more than four years.

"The speed at which the disease is growing is a lot faster, not just in the black community, but among black women in particular. It is serious."

Serious may be too light a word.

One in 32 black men, age 27 to 39, are infected with HIV, and blacks now constitute more than half of all AIDS cases among women and children.

There are many reasons why HIV and AIDS is growing among the African American community in general and black women in particular, Dr. Blackwell says.

In the white community, 85 percent of AIDS cases were gay white men, a population easy to identify and contain, she says.

But in the African American community, 44 percent of AIDS cases are gay black men, 38 percent are IV drug users and another 6 percent are heterosexual.

"The black gay community is so fearful of rejection and won't speak out, so we don't know who they are," she says. "The drug users are so stoned on drugs, they don't care. And many black women don't want to believe that their man could be sleeping with other black men.

"The problem is we need to get all of these different communities within the black community identified. It is harder to target those populations if you can't reach them.

"So the disease spreads and continues to manifest itself."

The issue of homophobia is also contributing to the spread of the disease in the black community.

"The white gay community is a lot more open; the black gay community is not. We have many black men who are either not willing to admit they are gay or bisexual, or are unwilling to live a gay lifestyle."

One out of every 4 black men is gay or bisexual, Dr. Blackwell says.

"Bisexuality is alive and well in the African American community - don't think it's not," she says. "We have to remember, our men are confused about their sexuality - that is the reality.

"So be careful. This is nothing to play with."

Denial

To understand why denial about the HIV virus and AIDS is so prevalent in the black community, one has to understand the past, Dr. Blackwell says.

Historically, 10 to 15 years ago when the white, gay community was hit by AIDS, they too were in denial and did not want to believe it was real.

"But they began to after many white men begin to die," she says. "A few years later, our black, gay men went into denial. Unfortunately, when they too started dying, that community began to believe it.

"It doesn't surprise me at all that African American women today are in denial because it hasn't impacted enough of them to where they are dying."

If we, as a community, don't talk about AIDS openly and honestly," says Rae Lewis Thornton, a black woman in Chicago who has been diagnosed with full-blown AIDS, "its going to be genocide in our community and I really don't think we can save lives with half truths and misinformation.

"We really have to wake up as it relates to AIDS. It is amazing to me that there are any new cases," she says. "Everyone knows how you become infected but the problem is no one sees themselves at risk and when you don't see yourself at risk, you don't change your behavior."

Unfortunately, black women contribute to their high risk numbers in many ways.

One way is expressed through their fear of asking a man to use a condom.

"Many women feel uncomfortable asking a man to wear a condom, but you have to protect yourself. Do what is best for you. Assume the worst and get tested - often - just to be sure.

"I tell black women, 'When you are out having a good time and you decide to have sex, ask yourself if the discomfort of asking him to wear a condom is worth [your] life.' If so, you are putting your life in danger."

Rae Lewis Thornton, Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Tommy Morrison are three people whose names and lives have been in the spotlight recently for the same reason; they are all HIV-infected people attempting to get on with their lives. But what makes them so different is that two are professional athletes and one is a magna cum laude college graduate.

None thought it would ever happen to them. Here are their stories.

Magic, Tommy and Rae

Magic retired from the Los Angeles Lakers on Nov. 7, 1991 after announcing that he had the HIV virus. Two years ago, Johnson made a comeback, but was forced back into retirement when players around the NBA grumbled about the possibility of being infected by him.

He would try once again to return to the sport that made him a household name - and this time he would succeed. In late January 1996, Magic made his return to the NBA with the Lakers - at the age of 36 and four and a half years after his retirement.

Magic loved the game so much that gave up his partial ownership of the Lakers in order to play in the league.

Johnson's comeback has been heralded as an inspiration to those infected with HIV who are trying to live a normal life.

When he first announced he was HIV positive, Johnson also talked extensively about his promiscuity as an NBA player on the road in his book, My Life.

In the prologue to the book, Magic, who was in Dallas last month to play the Dallas Mavericks, talks about finding out he had HIV and how it has changed his life.

"For as long as I can remember, my life has been about basketball. About being part of a team. About winning, and about championships. About never being satisfied with my play. About working constantly to make myself better. As soon as I realized that I had the God-given talent to play this game, I was determined to take it as far as I could.

And I did. Until late on a Friday afternoon in the fall of 1991 when I found myself sitting across the desk from the team doctor in Los Angeles. Wham! When he told me the news. I knew that everything I had accomplished in my life was nothing compared to the battle I was about to begin.

"From the moment of that announcement, I was no longer Magic Johnson, basketball star. Suddenly, I had a new identity. Now I was Earvin Magic Johnson, a living symbol of AIDS - a disease that can strike anybody unlucky enough to get in its way.

"Almost overnight I had to start dealing with things that had never been an issue for me before - at least not in public. Like promiscuous sex. Or how I felt about gays. Or the rumors that I was either gay or bisexual. And my relationships with women and how that part of my life fit into basketball and being a celebrity.

Now I had an important message to deliver. That anyone can get HIV. That our government must pay far more attention to it. That we need to allocate more money for research and education if we are going to avoid an epidemic like you wouldn't believe."

After 41/2 years, Magic has not been diagnosed with full-blown AIDS—yet.

Tommy Morrison, the 27-year-old former heavyweight boxer, was so shocked to learn he was HIV positive that he had to have two tests taken. They were both positive.

Morrison, who stands 6'2" and weighs 225 pounds, held a news conference on Feb. 15 and told the world for the second time in 5 days that he had tested positive for the virus that causes AIDS.

He first learned the news on Feb. 10 in a Las Vegas hotel room - only hours before he was to step into the boxing ring for his 50th professional fight. He was told he had tested positive as part of the routine pre-flight medical tests given by the Nevada Athletic Commission.

According to reports, Morrison entered into denial. He insisted to anyone who would listen that a mistake had to be made. He would take a new test, one that would prove the first test wrong.

He was tested again and this time reality set in.

During a news conference last month, Morrison discussed his life before and after HIV.

"There was a certain point of time in my life that I lived a very permissive, fast and reckless lifestyle. I though the HIV virus was something that anyone could get. But I also believed that the chances were very, very, slim. I thought that the real danger of contracting it rested in the arms of those who subjected themselves to a certain type of lifestyle - addicts who share needles, people who practice a homosexual lifestyle.

"I honestly believed I had a better chance of winning the lottery than contracting this disease. I have never been so wrong in my life."

When Morrison was asked how he contracted the virus, he said he was unsure. "I've had thousands of sparring partners, 49 fights, a promiscuous lifestyle. Go fish."

After learning of his HIV status, Morrison spent an hour on the phone with Magic.

Morrison said he and Johnson discussed "what we can do as a team and what we can do as individuals and truly promote awareness to every single person out there, particularly those of my generation."

Morrison ended his news conference, held in his hometown of Tulsa, Okla., by asking his fans to "see me as an individuals who had an opportunity to be a role model and blew it. Blew it with irresponsible, irrational and immature decisions. Decisions that one day can cost me my life. Think about that."

Morrison is engaged to be married later this year. He never thought it would happen to him.

Neither did Rae Lewis Thornton, a successful woman living in Chicago. She was a college graduate, smart, attractive and she dated successful men. But still, she caught the virus and now is suffering from full-blown AIDS.

Rae, 33, was diagnosed with HIV 10 years ago when she was 23. She found out only when she went to donate blood and was rejected.

During a recent appearance on KKDA's Cheryl Smith's radio show, Rae discussed her situation and the seriousness of the disease that has cut her beautiful life tragically short.

"The statistics are showing that women are constantly rising up the ladder in terms of HIV infection. I am clearly an infected woman and I meet infected women every day. All day.

"Part of the problem is that there are no

Magic Johnson's wife, Cookie, was fortunate – she did not contract HIV from him.

HIV symptoms so you can be infected 8, 10, 12 years and not know it if you have never had an AIDS test. Unfortunately, most people are diagnosed with AIDS only 2 months before they die.

"There are probably quite a few sisters out there who are infected who do not know they are infected, don't see themselves as at risk and probably won't find out until they end up with shortness of breath, difficulty breathing and then they will be diagnosed with AIDS and die from it.

"We have to begin to address and look at this issue and we have to do it now."

Rae, best known as the cover model for the December 1994 issue of Essence, says people approach her "all day long in disbelief and say, you don't look like it.

"Well, I say I never look like it but my T-cell count is 60, I have 21 day menstrual cycles, 14-day yeast infections. I have taken up to 14 pills a day and I know what it's like to not be hungry, loose your appetite. I used to wear a size 12, now I wear a size 4.

"People don't see it but it is there and it is very, very real. It's a very sad thing that we are stuck in the mud like we are. We are not going to believe it until women are being rushed to the hospital and dying at massive rates like white and black gay men did and do."

She has been married over a year to a man who knew of her situation, but chose to love and marry her just the same. They will probably never have children.

Protecting Yourself

There are many ways to protect yourself from HIV and AIDS. They range from abstinence and celibacy, to limiting your sex partners and always using a latex condom.

All have their advantages and disadvantages, but the key is to choose one.

"Abstinence is ideal, but not practical," Dr. Blackwell says. "Most people are not willing to do that. The only other thing is condom protection and, if your are an IV drug user, getting off of drugs."

Condoms are not 100 percent, Dr. Blackwell stresses, "but they are all we have."

The main key to protecting yourself is to get tested, Dr. Blackwell says. "Then you will know what you are up against. If a person tests positive, then that early diagnosis can help them do what they need to do to live a long and productive life.

"But not wanting to know is not helping anyone. It is better to know and seek early medical help than not know and die quickly."

People can get tested at any Parkland Hospital Community-Oriented Primary Care centers, Dallas County Health Department, or through their private physicians.

If you do test positive, Dr. Blackwell also suggests seeking psychological help as well as medical help as a way of working through the stress, fears and concerns about having the disease.

"Just because you have HIV or AIDS, it is not the end of the world," Dr. Blackwell says. "It's a disease, that all. The stigma is because it started with gay men.

"We (African Americans) are survivors. We will figure out a way to deal with this. When I am working with my clients, I teach them living with HIV. I help them to be their best."

The Black Cowboy

Part 2: Buffalo Soldier Russell D. Shockley, B.S.Ed.

"I have always found the colored race represented in the army, obedient, intelligent, easily disciplined and most efficient in the care of their horses, arms and equipment."—General Merritt, U.S. Army, 1866.

During the American Civil War nearly 200,000 black soldiers wore the blue uniform of the Union Armies. In 161 regiments (141 Infantry, 7 Cavalry, 12 Heavy Artillery, 1 Light Artillery), black soldiers took part in some 449 engagements, with more than 38,000 listed as killed, wounded, or missing in action. With such an outstanding record, black soldiers proved their effectiveness as soldiers and the federal government was more than eager to utilize them during the western campaign.

The Congressional Act of July 28, 1866 (later modified by supplementary legislation in 1868), established two black infantry regiments, the 24th and 25th, along with two black cavalry regiments, the 9th and 10th. All four saw continuous service in the West during the three decades following the Civil War. Black infantry served in both the Texas and Dakota Territories and black cavalry fought in almost every part of the West, from Mexico to Montana. The stories of any of these four regiments would make for some fascinating reading.

Their general physical fitness was better, and their desertion and courtmartial records occurrences were oftentimes lower than their white counterparts.

Carefully selected and held to very high standards of physical fitness and mental alertness, they were commanded by some the Army's better white officers. The men (black soldiers) took quickly to the routine of both fort and camp life and maintained excellent morale. Their general physical fitness was better, and their desertion and court-martial records occurrences were oftentimes lower than their white counterparts.

Black troops of the 9th Cavalry served in Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma, Utah, and Montana. The 10th Cavalry served in Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Arizona. Black troops fought against Commanches, Apaches, and the Sioux. They fought against Crazy Horse and his warriors and they captured the great Geronimo.

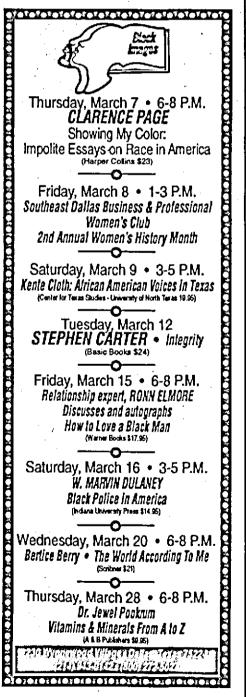

When Billy, The Kid was trapped in a burning building in Lincoln, New Mexico, black troops surrounded him. When Sooners attempted to enter into lands belonging to the Native-American nations in Oklahoma (before they were opened to settlers), black soldiers stopped them.

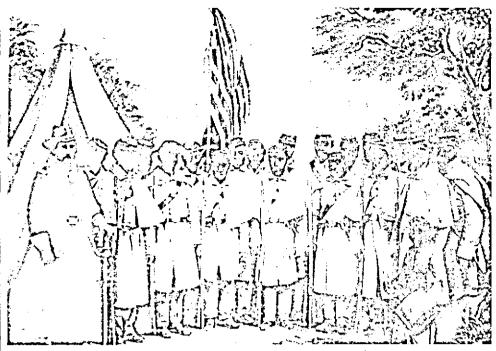

When Wyoming cattlemen started the Johnson County War, only to find themselves outnumbered by angry settlers, black cavalry rescued them.

Black soldiers helped to make the expansion of the cattle empire possible by rendering the needed assistance to cattlemen as they drove through Kansas, Nebraska, and Dakota Territories and through New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, and Montana.

Buffalo Soldiers Honored

On July 25, 1992, at Fort Levenworth, Kansas, the long-awaited tribute to the soldiers of the all-black 9th and 10th Cavalry (formed in 1866), The National Buffalo Soldiers Monument, was dedicated.

Present among the more than 20,000 people attending was then U.S. Army General and Chairman of the Joints Chiefs of Staff Colin Powell, who officially dedicated the monument.

Four more infantry units (the 38th, 39th, 40th and 41st) were added but were short-lived and later combined with the 24th and 25th Infantry Units.

Looking for just the right fashions at just the right price for your little one? Kiddie Duds has it all. A family business, Kiddie Duds specializes in fashions that accent the trendy yeas of children, newborn to pre-teen ages.

"We like to consider this as a specialty shop," said owner Michael Jones. And a specialty shop it is.

One of the specialty items that Kiddie Duds offers is school uniforms in a variety of fabrics, styles and colors. Located in Oak Cliff (near Red Bird Mall), Jones said having the store in this area makes it more convenient for children to get their uniforms.

"Parents were accustomed to going across town and paying a lot," he said. "We carry more uniforms and have a bigger variety. Parents are really pleased about it so we feel we are an asset to the community."

Prior to the Oak Cliff location, Kiddie Duds was operating in the Community Mart, but Jones wanted the store to become more marketable.

We wanted to be able to get a variety of clients from all walks of life...to be in a location where we could reach the suburbs and still be centrally located," said Jones, who started the business three and a -half years ago after being a victim of corporate downsizing.

Kiddie Duds formerly had another location at Westcliff Mall where they sold only school uniforms. After nearly one year at the mall and another year at Community Mart, Jones determined it made better business sense to offer daily fashions and uniforms under one roof.

"We strive [for] service at our store. This is the community's store. We are here for them," said the Dallas native.

Spring time means SOKO time

By Veronica W. Morgan

As Spring approaches, vendors and members of St. Luke "Community" United Methodist Church will once again take to the great outdoors. But not for the traditional Easter Egg Hunt.

Vendors preparing for the 5th Annual SOKO Festival, scheduled to take place on Saturday, March 23, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at St. Luke.

SOKO, a Kiswahili term meaning "Marketplace," is the brainchild of Rev. Zan Holmes, Jr., who started the outside event-previously held inside the church-in 1992.

His purpose was to have the people dress in African attire for Easter, says Edlen Cowley, chairman of the church's Economic Development Committee. But over the years, the event has taken on a more "Black Expo-ish" flavor, where new and existing vendors can showcase their wares to hundreds of consumers, primarily African Americans.

Participants in this year's festival will display an assortment of products: Art objects, specially designed t-shirts and caps, jewelry, clothes and much more. Fun-loving consumers, perhaps desiring to add a little spice to their life, can even sign up for scuba lessons. There will be something for everyone, with lots of wonderful food available for purchase at several booth locations.

A variety of live entertainment will be featured: D.J. Lynn Frank, Dr. Clarence Glover, African drumming, performances by the Sacred Dance Choirs of St. Luke, and the A. Maceo Smith and Lincoln High School performers. And the Hispanic dancers are expected to make another appearance at this year's

An African Libation ceremony to honor African ancestors will kick off the family-oriented event.

"Our goal is to provide the opportunity for 50 to 75 vendors to sell their items and make their services known throughout the community," Sharon DeBerry

Deberry, chair of the African American Heritage Ministry at St. Luke, says she expects a large turnout of people to come and enjoy the outdoor festival.

"There's no admission charge and plenty of entertainment throughout the day," she said.

Since its inception SOKO has grown tremendously in its appeal.

Consumers and vendors of the same ethnicity share their ideas, their products and their serrespectfully trade among themselves.

Interested vendors are welcome to purchase a 10 X 10 ft. booth, which includes an eight foot table and two chairs, at the low price of $80. Mail check money orders no later than March 14, to: St. Luke "Community" United Methodist Church; P.O. 150425; Box Dallas, TX 75315-0425; Attn: SOKO

MON's Guide to the 1996 Elections

Super Tuesday

On Tuesday, March 12 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., primary elections will be held for candidates from the Democratic and Republican parties. The winners of these primaries will compete in the November 1996 general election along with the candidates from other political parties which did not hold primary elections.

Early voting for the Texas primary began Wednesday, Feb. 21 and runs through March 8.

Along with the Democratic and Republican nominees for president, Texas voters also will be selecting candidates for several other offices, including the U.S. Senate, Congress, all 150 state House members and half the state Senate

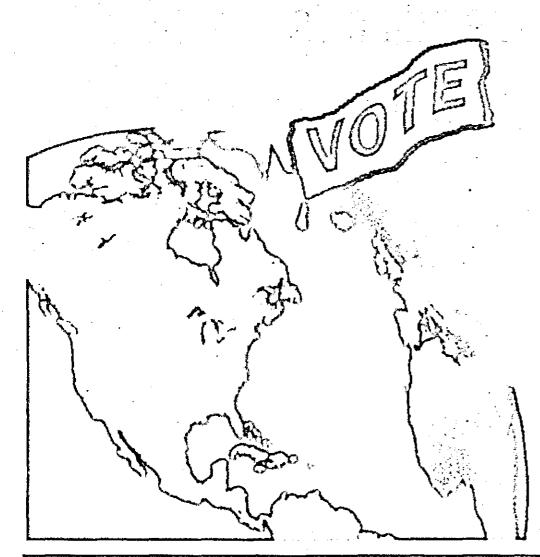

To vote in the election, register with the county in which you live 30 days prior to the election. A record 9.4 million Texas are currently registered voters. Voters can vote in only one party primary and voting certificates will be stamped with the name of the party.

The polls are open from 7:00 a.m. - 7:00 p.m. on Election Day

To vote on election day, you must vote in the polling place assigned to your precinct. You can find your precinct number on your Voter Registration Card.

It's too late to register to vote in this primary election, but in the spirit of the Million Man March and the voter registration/education drives sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), the National Council of Negro Women (NCNW) or your church, you can still register to become an active participant in the electoral process.

By registering now, you will be eligible to vote in the first election held 30 days following your registration date.

Vote in the March 12 Texas primary and the Nov. 5 general election. Your future depends on it.

Primary Election Day Tuesday March 12
Primary Runoff Tuesday, April 9
General Election Day Tuesday, November 12

Need more information, contact local election officials for the following Counties at:

Collin (214) 424-1460
Dallas (214) 653-7871
Denton (817) 565-8514
Ellis (214) 923-5070
Kaufman (214) 932-4331
Rockwall (214) 771-5141
Tarrant (817) 884-1115

The Minority Opportunity News encourages early voting. You can vote early through March 8. In order to participate in early voting by mail, you must obtain an application from your local Elections Department.

Redistricting decisions could be career-ending

By Dorothy Gentry

Another election year is here and, with it, a chance for African Americans to empower themselves and use the vote to make their future better, brighter and more prosperous.

But a significant decision on the issues of race and redistricting in Georgia last summer by the U.S. Supreme Court, and several similar pending cases in Texas, Louisiana and North Carolina may negatively affect Blacks politically in 1996 and on into the next century.

The court decision on the Georgia district has had a major effect on future election districts for Congress, as well as state and local governments. It has also caused many to predict that the decision to invalidate majority-minority districts could mean a return to an almost all-white Congress.

Because of the current debate over race and redistricting, several Blacks in Congress stand to lose their seats, including Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, and Cynthia McKinney, D-Georgia. The debate could also have adverse results for the Congressional Black Caucus.

It's 1996, 31 years after the Voting Rights Act, and the clock is slowly but surely being rolled back.

Redistricting, the Courts, and the Voting Rights Act

Are election districts drawn to benefit minorities in violation of the rights of other voters? What role, if any, can and should race play in drawing election districts? The courts have been grappling with these questions for years, but the answers have been slow in coming.

In June 1995 the court struck down, in a 5-4 decision, the district of Rep. McKinney, and later a Georgia redistricting plan, as racial gerrymandering but made no clear distinction as to whether all majority-minority districts in the nation are unconstitutional, including the one represented by Rep. Johnson.

After its June ruling, the court ordered McKinney's district re-drawn, saying that race could not be the predominant consideration in setting congressional boundaries. This ruling has called into question the fate of minority districts nationwide.

Similar congressional redistricting disputes in Texas (Dallas and Houston), North Carolina and Louisiana are pending before the court. In the Louisiana case, a dozen residents last year challenged the states' plan, saying that race was a major factor in the way districts were drawn, including the predominantly white 5th district represented by white congressman Jim McCrery and the majority Black district, represented by Cleo Fields.

Fields, whose district is 55 percent Black, was first elected to Congress in 1992. In 1995, he ran for governor of Louisiana, but lost in the runoff. But he did keep his seat in Congress while pursuing the governorship.

In a concurring opinion to the Georgia decision, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor hinted that the court would probably uphold majority-minority districts if it can be proven that other factors contributed to their design.

Congressional district constituents and their Black representatives are not the only ones hurt by this important political issue.

Much of the debate over redistricting last year by the high court has resulted in the court cutting back on the reach of the Voting Rights Act.

In a brief ruling last fall, the court said states with a large population of Blacks and Hispanics need not always create a "majority-minority" electoral district to satisfy the Law. Instead, they can set up several districts where minority voters make up at least 25 percent of the total and thereby can influence who gets elected.

The status of these "influence districts" (districts with large but non-majority Black populations) has taken over a hazy and unclear corner of the larger debate over redistricting and the requirements of the Voting Rights Act.

In addition, the Supreme Court has suggested that "influence districts" can be a redistricting option, but it has yet to rule directly on the question, prompting some to view it as a signal to lower courts to expand the use of "influence districts" as they approach redistricting cases.

Johnson, the first Black woman

"The rulings in the other states were based on the fact that the districts run miles around the state just to pick up Blacks. In Texas, the lines have always run around the state but more so for the purpose of eliminating Blacks," she says.

"They were drawn more for incumbent protection. If it were not for incumbent protection, they probably wouldn't have been drawn that way."

Johnson, the former head of the Texas Senate redistricting committee, says she believes race should play a role in drawing election districts. "It's the only way we will get representation.

"It has been found that people do tend to vote along racial lines, but more so whites (voting mainly for other whites) than Blacks (voting for both)," she says.

When asked why the districts represented by Blacks and other minorities have been under so much scrutiny for more than a year, Johnson had only one word for it: "Racism - I don't know what else to call it."

McKinney, who was elected in 1992, represents the 11th congressional district of Georgia, which stretches for about 260 miles from Atlanta to Savannah.

The present congressional configuration in Georgia came into existence in (1992 after the 1990 census), which gave the state an additional seat. It was aided by a decision by then-President George Bush's Justice Department that the Voting Rights Act of 1965 required more. "safe" districts for Black candidates.

As a result, McKinney, as well as John Lewis and Sanford Bishop, all went to Capitol Hill in 1992. McKinney, then a state representative, drew 73 percent of the votes in her newly drawn district in which Blacks made up 65 percent of the population.

Since her district has been declared unconstitutional, McKinney has been on a mission to keep the seat she has worked for years to obtain.

"It's not me who is being hurt by this," McKinney said last year when the decision was first handed down. "It's the people in the 11th district."

Ms. McKinney said she represents the best interests of Black and white constituents in the district.

"The first thing I try to do is serve everybody. I try to retain those that I have and win over those I don't," says the daughter of longtime Georgia state senator Billie McKinney.

McKinney's District 11 currently includes affluent Black neighborhoods in southeastern Atlanta, then stretches out through largely rural counties on its way to part of Savannah's inner city. It also includes pockets of Augusta and comes close to Macon.

The Atlanta native is the first Black woman to represent Georgia in Congress and the only female in Georgia's delegation. She was also secretary to the freshman class of representatives in the 103rd Congress.

The Congressional Black Caucus must also be considered in the debate surrounding race and redistricting. Much of the caucus, half of the 39 House members, came to Washington with McKinney, Johnson and Fields.

The rulings, say many, could end the careers of half of the elected leaders by the year 2000.

"If we have decreasing numbers (of Black representation in Congress) then it will strongly affect the Caucus," says Johnson.

Rep. Donald Payne, D-N.J., and chairman of the CBC, blames the current state of Black politics and Black politicians on the Republican-controlled Congress.

"I think that everything the GOP has been doing has had an underlying racial overtone. I think that race was a big factor in many of their campaigns (during the last election)," says Payne.

Last fall the CBC Foundation met with leaders in Washington to discuss ways of counteracting the Republican agenda. The participants signed a pledge that calls for increased voter registration, public education and coalition building campaigns to prevent the return of Jim Crow. [MON]

Wacky Times? No. Just Another Election Year

By Roland S. Martin

When the Republicans seized control of both houses of Congress in November 1994, the prevailing opinion among political pundits was simple: Bill Clinton should begin packing his belongings and look for a new home in Arkansas.

But just almost a year-and-a-half later, it appears as if the Republican Party may be the ones on the outside looking in when it comes to making temporary living quarters out of 1200 Pennsylvania Avenue.

With Ross Perot hanging around the political periphery, Colin Powell willing to sit on his $6 million book signing bonus instead of kissing babies and raising funds and Republican voters not all too enthused with frontrunner Sen. Bob Dole, this election year is promising to be interesting.

Toss in the instability of the Whitewater affair and its effect on First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton and her husband, Bill, and no one seems for sure as to what the eventual outcome of the 1996 presidential election will be.

But lets size up the candidates:

Incumbent Bill Clinton. After a rocky first three years as Commander-in-Chief, it seems as if Clinton has finally decided to do what his advisors have been telling him since his inauguration—shut up and act like a president instead of a candidate.

Clinton no longer is the timid person who waffled when it came to making a decision and, even, when the decision was made, reversed course and compromised, much to the consternation of his advisors and the public.

His recent work in the budget battle is an example of how a person who wants to get re-elected should act. He stood his ground, took his cause to the American public and refused to sign a bill he felt wasn't best for the nation.

Subsequently, opinion polls tilted in his favor and his opponents, Sen. Bob Dole and Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, began to take the heat for the budget impasse.

But in order for Clinton to keep his public opinion numbers high and regain the White House, he must keep the pressure on his counterparts and articulate precisely what he envisions for the future. He also must avoid any embarrassing last-minute mistakes.

But before Clinton can place any pressure on his Republican rival, the eventual winner of the Republican primary must be in a condition to fight.

After losing the White House to the Democrats in 1992 election, Republicans have been seething at the opportunity to attack the Baby Boomer president.

Unfortunately, the willingness to be president is taking its toll on the candidates. Already, California Gov. Pete Wilson and Texas Sen. Phil Gramm have been the victims of a down-and-dirty campaign, and it's barely gotten started.

Kansas Sen. Bob Dole. After carrying the Republicans water for so many years and losing previous presidential elections, Dole has vowed "this is my year." He has served as a public servant for more than 40 years and believes he is prepared to assume the highest office in the land. But it is his age -72- that may prove to be his undoing. That, along with his reputation as a compromiser and an unwilling participant in tackling the issues of the social conservatives. If he doesn't move more to the right, he may lose out on the nomination.

Pat Buchanan. The political commentator and fervent Nixon and Reagan backer is the loose cannon for the Republican Party. His fiery rhetoric goes over well with social conservatives who want to see abortion outlawed, school prayer returned and the end of lifetime appointments to the federal judiciary. But many still remember the angry speech Buchanan gave at the 1992 Republican National Convention and are scared to death of him leading the GOP charge to the White House. Gramm has asked Republicans to circle the wagons around Dole to prevent Buchanan from leading their party. The perception of Buchanan as a racist wasn't helped when his national co-chairman, Larry Pratt, took a forced "leave of absence" because of his association with white supremacists. Buchanan's wins in Louisiana and strong second-place showing in Iowa may be bright spots for his campaign but his anti-black, antiimmigration, anti-women, anti-Semitic and anti-everything else rhetoric will eventually doom his fate.

Lamar Alexander. The former Tennessee governor is described by an active Republican friend of mine as the "stealth candidate." When all is said and done, it is likely Alexander will be standing at the finish line. He has maintained a low-key attitude while raising millions of dollars. If he can hold on until the March 12 primary, where he is expected to do well, he has a shot to upset Dole.

Steve Forces. For all the criticism given candidates for taking special interest money, this publishing heir is facing the heat for using his own money! Worth around $400 million, Forbes has garnered a lot of attention for his flat-tax proposal. But it has been the special interest money, Forbes has little chance of taking the nomination because of his silver spoon background.

The Also-rans. California Rep. Richard Dornan is so right wing he makes Pat Buchanan look like a card-carrying member of the American Civil Liberties Union. He has no chance. Indian Sen. Richard Lugar has an impressive record, but no charisma. He needs to check with Sen Phil Gramm to see how far that gets a candidate. And radio commentator Alan Keyes is the darling of social conservatives. But they won't vote for him. I applaud the African-American Republican for tossing his name into the hat, but the best thing he will do is raise his profile to get others to listen to his radio show.

The question that generally crops up is what does this election mean to African Americans. EVERYTHING!

Just because Jesse Jackson is not running and no candidate is talking about "black issues" does not mean Africans Americans should consider this nap time and let the other American voters decide the President of the United States.

Each candidate, whether Democrat or Republican, will have an opinion on taxes, welfare reform, teen pregnancy, immigration, housing, affirmative action, Social Security and the many other issues we encounter in our daily lives.

We, as a people, need to get beyond defining ourselves based upon a limited number of issues and realize many of the decisions made in Washington, Austin and at City Hall affect every facet of our lives. The March 12 primary is rapidly approaching and it's not too late to register. Get your voter registration card in as soon as possible.

Each person should take the time to study the candidates and make an informed decision and vote. And if you don't? Shut up and don't complain. You blew your chance to be a part of the solution. [MON]

African Americans noticeably absent from ballot

By Sula Felder

When the 103rd Congress convened four years ago, African Americans had captured a record 39 of the U.S. House of Representatives' 435 seats, exceeding, for the first time, the number of Blacks elected to Congress since the Civil War.

But now, as the March 12 primaries draw near, voters will have only a handful of African American candidates from which to choose. Of the nearly 200 candidates that have filed for key congressional and state races, only about a dozen are African American.

"I don't think the momentum has slowed with regard to African Americans wanting to run for office," said state Rep. Glenn Lewis. "It's just that most of us are aligned with the Democratic Party and frankly, democrats have been losing."

While Democrats haven't given up, Lewis said many are less willing to invest the money needed to run a credible campaign when the chances of winning are so slim.

Ron Walters, chairman of the political science department Howard University, agreed.

"African Americans are like everybody else," said Walters. "They calculate their chances of winning, and not many are willing to spend money and get beat."

But Walters conceded that a lack of African American candidates may have more to do with the fact that Blacks are still holding key seats and may not change until the first generation of politicians leave.

"People are not running for office but they are talking about voting in hopes of turning the Congress back over to the Democrats," said Walters.

"There is an unmistakable push to fire up the community, so there will be political participation. Candidates are what we lack."

Nationally, political observers said that the number of African Americans running for political office will mirror 1992, when voters, riding on an antiincumbent tide, elected a record number of minorities and women to the House.

For instance, Illinois residents elected Carol Moseley Braun as the first African American woman to be elected to the U.S. Senate; and Texas gained three seats from the redistricting changes - bringing the delegation to 30 - asa result of the 1990 census. The census, combined with the 1982 changes to the Voting Rights Act, gave minorities a new voice.

State Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson was handily elected in the predominantly Black Dallas district. Five Southern states sent their first Black representatives to Congress this century. Fifteen minority members were added to the current 25 Black and 10 Hispanic members of Congress.

Walters said that while the nearabsence of minorities on local and state ballots is disturbing, it's also understandable given the recent Supreme Court rulings on redistricting.

For instance, he says, the Georgia legislature has reduced to one its three Black districts and there will likely be a reduction in North Carolina, too. And this development may have struck fear in many who might have been considering running for some of those seats.

"It's created an air of instability,"

Glenn Lewis

said Walters. "Understandably, there probably aren't too many Blacks willing to run in these districts."

Still, David Bositis, senior political analyst for the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, said he would be surprised if this is not another record year for Blacks running for office.

"It's true, in terms of the court decision, that there are a lot of things still up in the air, but I'm not aware of and don't expect there to be any shortage of African American candidates this year."

For instance, he said, Republican Party has been recruiting African Americans all over the country to run in majority Black districts.

"It's still early in the process, so there's no way to tell how many will BALLOT continued on page 32

Democrats asked to switch

By Cheryl Smith

Larry Baraka and John Creuzot have several things in common. They are both African American men, both Republican and both are sitting judges in the Dallas County Criminal Courts. Attorney Carl Hays would like to join the duo in "holding all citizens accountable" and bringing swift but fair justice to those who "choose not to support their families and commit crimes.

Baraka and Creuzot both face opponents in what could be one of the most challenging races of their careers.

Baraka, considered to be one of the hardest-working jurists in Dallas County by some of his colleagues, has come under fire from critics.

Former District Judge Maryellen Hicks contends that the criticism of Baraka is unfounded. "He works harder in one day than many of the others do in a week, or a month," said Hicks, who is currently a visiting judge throughout of criticism. So, she uses her talk show, "Speak Out" on radio station KKDA, to share information about issues effecting the African American community and plaguing the judicial system.

She admits the road is hard for the African American jurist and she encourages support of those judges who are doing the "right thing."

"Judge Baraka is fair and knowledgeable and that's what you want in the courtroom," added Hicks.

And being fair and knowledgeable are two attributes that Hays touts in his campaign to add another African American to the bench.

Looming ahead is a hurdle that all three must jump. They all have opponents that the Black vote could help them beat.

However, the majority of African Americans vote Democratic, and whether or not Democrats should vote in their primary election (and not who they should vote for) has become the topic of discussion among some Republicans seeking office.

This is the first election for John Creuzot, of the Criminal District Court No.4, on the Republican ballot. While many Democrats bemoaned the loss of Creuzot, he was welcomed with open arms by Republicans, as evidenced in

Americans in contested races in Dallas County, Creuzot contends that the number of contested races are few, and the die-hard Democratic voter could be just the push needed to lead Baraka, Creuzot and Hays to victory.

Hays, who is seeking the judgeship in Criminal District Court Number 2, is urging registered Democrats to look at the ballot and forego voting Democratic.

"It's imperative that people understand the significance of this election," noted Hays. "Our criminal justice system is in desperate need of reform.

While the pitch is being made for Republican votes, Dallas County Elections Supervisor Toni Pippins-Poole would like to see an overall increase in voter participation.

widespread endorsements from highranking party members, including Texas Governor George Bush.

When voting in the Texas primaries, some voters are unaware that by voting in a political party's primary, you become a member of that party for the next two years. When you cast your vote, your voter registration card will bear the stamp of the party whose primary you voted in, thus making you a card-carrying member of that party.

According to Judge John Creuzot, African Americans should not cast their vote in the Democratic Primary.

"If you want a say-so in who the judges in Dallas County are, then you should vote in the Republican Primary," said Creuzot.

While there are other African

Deion Sanders' "Prime Time 21

By DeLeon McKee

Picture this, a high school stand out having the game of his life. The crowd chanting Deion, Deion, Deion. He goes deep for the pass, it's a sure break away, he leaps in the air and slams another one home. The crowd goes crazy. Deion dazzles the crowd in the only way he knows how-with style and flash.

He goes on to dunk several times that night, playing the game of his life and ironically getting crowned with the name that he wears like his derby, "PRIME TIME".

Deion heads over to the bench receiving high fives, hugs and dap from his teammates. The coach walks over to him and looks him in the eyes with the utmost concern, he say's "Deion, what's it going to be, football or basketball?" Deion, of course, said both, but later on in his life he threw in baseball. And a night club called PRIME TIME 21.

Deion Sanders has a way of taking everything he does to another level. Is Dallas ready for Prime Time? Well, judging from the reception Deion has gotten with his new hot spot, I think Dallas has embraced him with open arms.

PRIME TIME 21 is a lively and elegant club. The D.J. definitely knows what to do to keep the crowd rocking and on certain given nights you will definitely bump into a star or two. I personally ran into Emmit Smith, Larry Brown, Charles Haley, Jason Kidd, Jim Jackson ... and the list goes on forever.

Believe it or not, I even ran into coach Switzer at the club. Boy, white men can't jump. Or dance.

But enough about everyone else. Let's get back to Deion. He has staked his claim in Dallas and considering his lengthy contract, he really didn't have much to lose and everything to gain from doing so. Deion's club will be fun, not to mention the other things he has planed. (I would give you the scoop, but that would be too easy.)

Dallas/Ft. Worth, lets put our hands together and welcome the "Don King of football." Deion Sanders, unlike Don King, does maintain a decent hair cut. However, like Don King, he knows exactly what he is doing.

T.J.'s "Open Mike" Nite By DeLeon McKee

Do you think you have talent? Do you think you can sing a great song, tell a good joke or even play a sweet tune on your instrument of choice. Well Dallas, if you're looking for a place to showcase your talent, then look no further than the Soul Embassy Cafe every Wednesday night.

The Soul Embassy Cafe is one of the finest upscale African American-owned night spots in Dallas. You can order some of the most superb dishes from "Nouvelle Soul Cuisine" such as Shrimp and Snapper Creole, Barbecue Ribs, or the Embassy Steak with Sweet Potato's and Greens.

turned-restaurant-turned-talent night (depending on the time) is the most fun in Dallas on any night. T.J. is the man that creates the music delight on Wednesday night. T.J. has worked with Polygram (Records) Distribution for three years. (Currently he is the Black Artist Development rep.) T.J. can't sign you to a multi-million dollar deal; however, he can put you in the office of the man who can. His open mike night has all the future could-be and would-be talents out trying to get discovered, or make a come back.

The labels are in the house, talent scouts are in the house, but most importantly, the talent is in the house. The hot jazz group, Sweet Potato Pie, that sits in with most of the live talent compliments everyone. They are composed of Dallas' finest talent, like Eddie "McMarvelous" who's on the drums, Chris Johnson play-This restaurant-turned-jazz bar ing superbly on the keyboards and Rodney Bowens, a sensational saxophonist who's working on his second album.

T.J. has a great thing going on Wednesday nights with his open mike and is serious about discovering new talent. He feels that the Southwest region is underrepresented and he's doing something about it.

Now before you start your shower singing, hurry-up jam sessions and homeboy-quick record demo tape, understand that this is serious business. T.J. has access to A & M Records, Motown Records, Mercury Records, Perspective Records, Def Jam Records and many more. The road to success is paved with hard work and T.J. has tried to make it a little easier for new talent.

I personally invite you out for a night of new voices, even if you're not singing or playing. But if you are, my advice to you is plain and simple: bring the good china.

Pippins-Poole acknowledges that there have been numerous voter registration drives over the past year, but their success is still unknown.

"It's one thing to register people, it's another to get them out to vote," said Pippins-Poole. "The follow-up is necessary and voter education is important."

Regarding the push for Democrats to vote Republican, Pippins Poole said in the Primary Election, you have to vote one way or the other because there are separate ballots, while in the general elections, voters have an opportunity to vote either way.

'Ain't Misbehav

"It ain't to be missed!" That's how one critic describes America's favorite sister act, the Pointer Sisters. The internationally-known recording artists will star in a dazzling new production of the multi-award winning Broadway hit musical Ain't Misbehavin! The Fats Waller Broadway musical will appear March 12-17 at the Fair Park Music Hall.

The musical, certain to have the "joint jumpin," is packed with 30 of the most unforgettable songs made famous by the legendary Fats Waller.

Considered one of the most acclaimed musicals in Broadway history, Ain't Misbehavin' was first staged on Broadway in 1978 where it swept that year's Tony, New York Drama Critic's Circle and Drama Desk Awards for best

Ain't Misbehavin' brings to life the glamour, spirit and excitement of the swinging '30s in Harlem as well as the golden age of places like the Cotton Club and the Savoy Ballroom. It is also reminiscent of those familiar honky tonks, rent parties and stride piano players pounding out the newest beat.

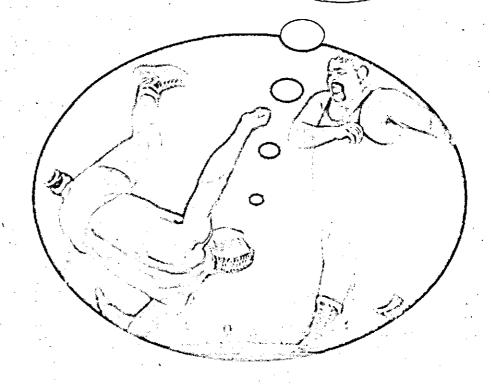

Some of the Fats Waller hits include "How Ya Baby," The Joint Jumpin," and Aint Nobody's Bizness If I Do."

The musical's headliners, the Pointer Sisters, have a that career span some 20 years and these daughters of a minister will entertain and delight you. Their music ranges from gospel, soul, country, and rock n' roll to rhythm and blues. Some memorable favorites are "Fire," "Slow Hand," and "Neutron Dance."

Tickets are available at all Ticket-Master outlets, Blockbuster Music stores, Fiesta, Foley's, Sears and Tom Thumb Stores. To charge by phone, call 373-8000. The American Express Broadway Contemporary performance is sponsored by Oasis 107.5, The Dallas Morning News, and WFAA-TV Spirit of Texas.

Girlfriend,

I am writing [in] regard [to] your response to "Blind Date" dated January, 1996.

First of all, there is nothing wrong with having to date anyone who is on medication to handle depression. Seeing that this is a new decade, you may want to up update yourself and readers on Mental Illnesses. And find out a more informative approach for you (your) readers.

Second, if you would take the time to look around you will find some of our less fortunate suffer from the same and could be better off if they took the modern day approach to their illness. Receiving counsel and treatment is the best thing that could ever happen to anyone who is suffering from "Depression". If left untreated (,) it could result in death, suicide or homicide.

Seeing that this, A Black newspaper trying to inform our black community. I for one would have that you would at least try to be more sensitive to your reader.

> Check Yourself Before You Wreck Yourself

P.S. I know you my (may) not print this ... by all means please take the time out to inform yourself if not your readers.

Dear Check:

First of all, let me apologize if I offended you or anyone else. Before I answer your letter let me also say that "GIRLFRIEND" is a column meant for entertainment purposes "only!!!". I certainly hope that any individual with serious problems will get serious help. To all our readers, "GIRLFRIEND"...I repeat..."GIRLFRIEND" is for entertainment not therapy.

Now, to answer your letter. Check, sweetheart, no one has to date anyone. We date because we want to. The question was, would "I" go on a blind date with anyone on medication. I said then, and I say now...No! There is something going around called "freedom of choice" and you do have a choice of who you date. I mean, you may not always get to date the person you want to date, but you certainly do not have to date anyone you don't want to date.

Also, suggestions as to what you would like to see in MON should be addressed to the publisher, not Girlfriend. I agree, our readers should be informed about mental illnesses. And I am sure if you write or call this publication and ask that such an article be included in future editions, your request will be granted

Again, I regret the fact that my answer to "Blind Date" caused problems for anyone. By all means, if you need counseling or medication get it; just don't ask me for a date.

Girlfriend,

I've got problems. I'm living with my boyfriend and he asked me to marry him. I said yes. We haven't set a date yet but I know we'll do it this year. Now my last lover wants back in my life. He says all the right things to me and I still have very strong feelings for him. Every time I get into a fight with my man, I think about my ex-lover. He was really passionate and I miss that. I've even thought of having an affair with him. His only problem was that he was unreliable. He seems to have changed. I don't know what to do. Lately, I've been thinking about how great the sex was with my ex.

Confused and Horny

Dear Confused:

An affair? Now come on girlfriend. That is never the answer. We all like passion, but you got to give it to get it. If old unreliable has changed, then that will be something new. I've got two cliches for you:

- #1 A leopard can not change his spots, and
- #2 More goes on in-between your ears than in-between your legs.

Translated, if Old Unreliable was unreliable before, he still is...and, teach [your present] man how to be passionate. If you love him and trust him, chances are you can teach him to do it right.

Now on the other hand, if the thought of marriage is what you are afraid of, then don't get married. While you're working on this, ask yourself, "what is the real deal?", and why does he want to come back? You didn't say whether or not you were happy with your boyfriend. Are you? Be cautious not to throw away a relationship that is working in hopes of rekindling something that wasn't working in the first place.

Oh yeah, I forgot to ask...why in the world are you horny if you're living with your man? Hmmm.

What positive things do you see in your neighborhood?

If you look around your neighborhood, you may find several negative things that you would like to change, or do away with altogether. In some neighborhoods there are drug dealers and liquor. Still others might have crime or gangs that plague their community. Everyday our newspapers and televisions have story after story about violence that has occurred in our neighborhood. Just when it seems that there is hardly anything good happening anywhere, I found a couple of kids that do have some positive things to say about their neighborhood.

MONTRAVIA: "....... There is a lot of positive things in our neighborhood. I go to our church and they have a lot of positive activities for kids. At our recreation center there are also a lot of things to do. I sign up for the arts and crafts, and sometimes I go on the trips that they have...They always have parties for kids: Easter Egg hunts, and other types of entertainment..... I am also in our community drill team. A lot of my friends are, and it brings us all together. In our neighborhood, there are no break-ins or robberies...... Since I have lived here for a long time, I know a lot of kids. Most of the people are good so I guess that makes our neighborhood a positive place to live."

Deon Jones, 10 yrs. old MST (Magnet School)

DEON: "I like the kids in our neighborhood. They are good to hang around because we only do positive things together. In our area we really need a recreation center....That would be another positive thing to have. It would really help kids because they could play basketball or some other sports instead of fighting or getting into trouble.....I have a library card and the library is a good positive place to go to learn."

FSM: There may always be negative things around your neighborhood to discourage you from doing positive things or to make you do things that kids should not do. But you should always remember that life can be as positive as you make it. Seek out the good things in your neighborhood. Try to turn negative results into positive outcomes. You could start a positive bike club, or drill team! Get other kids to help you start a dance or singing group. Regardless of the activity, Kids, make your neighborhood a place where you won't mind living even after you've become an adult yourself.

Sports Capsule

By Syd Sinclair

It's the climax of the baseball season when the champions from the National League and the American League face each other for the world championship of baseball... and do you know where Alex Ortiz is? He is sitting in front of his big screen television in all of his Atlanta Braves gear cheering his heroes. They have become immortalized and transformed into legends. from Ruth to Gehrig, Robinson and Aaron, to Ryan and Justice and many more of today's diamond superstars. A Florida-native, Alex Ortiz has been sharpening his skills for the last few months and preparing to tryout for the minor leagues while attending Dallas County Community College.

When asked what made him leave Florida, he breaks into a sheepish grin and says, "Nolan."

A Nolan Ryan fan, Alex says he came to Texas to visit family in Arlington and to attend the opening of the Ballpark at Arlington. He extended his stay and finally earned a position at the Ballpark, where he could see the players on a regular basis. After a little encouragement, he started to train, meanwhiel enrolling in community college.

"My friends laugh at me, but I just tell them I'm young and if it doesn't work out, I'll have an education to fall back on," says Ortiz. "But people need to remember, MC Hammer started out as a batboy for Oakland. It could happen."

MON believes in you Alex! Good luck!

DASA Honors Dallas Sports Heroes

By Neriah Green

The Dallas All Sports Association (DASA) awarded Dallas Cowboy running back Emmitt Smith with the 31st annual Field Scovell Award on Tuesday, February 20, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

Among the table of champions sat Cowboy head coach Barry Switzer, Mavericks guard Jason Kidd, U.S. Olympic track star Michael Johnson and Carter High School girls track team head coach Danny Stigers.

In receiving the award, Mr. Smith said, "This is one of the largest trophies I have ever received. I'm glad I have a new home to place this in. I encourage all of the students, who are present tonight, to take the challenge on and off the field."

Jason Kidd was the recipient of the Pro Athlete of the Year Award and Michael Johnson was given the Big D Award.

For Your Glory, Lord

1 Corinthians 10:31

While watching the movie The Distinguished Gentleman on video, I was struck by a statement made by the young lady that played the role of the female interest of Eddie Murphy's character. She was asked why she gave up her career as an attorney to become a lobbyist for this special interest group. Her response was, "My life has to mean something."

Each Sunday night Willis Johnson reminds us to live our lives so that it makes an impact. This should be the goal of every Christian. Our aim should not be to accumulate wealth for prestige, or make a living for selfish reasons. The goal of every Christians' life should be to do what brings glory and honor to God. That is the reason we are all put here. If we make that the goal, then most of the decisions we are faced with will be simple to make.

I was talking with a man who was faced with the dilemma of either selling his business (which would mean great financial gain to him personally) or keeping it. We talked about his reason for starting a business: to establish a business and work environment that would be a witness for the Lord. If he sold it to a large conglomerate, though he would personally gain, the possibility was there for all that he had worked for to be disassembled. In short, to accept the promotion or not, to buy the bigger car or not, to run for office or not, etc., must all be based on this one criteria. Which affords me the greatest opportunity to bring glory and honor to God.

Consider our text. The issue here is whether to eat or not to eat food that was supposedly defiled. The question of injuring another's conscience is raised. Paul settles the question with this simple truth. Your decision to eat or not to eat should not be based on the food or a man's conscience but rather how does it figure into my bringing glory to God. Jesus said the reason we, as Christians, must make our good obvious to the world is so that God will be honored. That's the key. Does your conversation honor Him. You say you are a Christian and wear His name but does your lifestyle honor Him. Does it cause others to honor Him. How about the clothes you wear? It's not a matter of what's stylish but are you really honoring God in your apparel?

In Galatians 5 we are told what character traits ought to be growing in us as Christians. Listed there are the fruits of the spirit. One of them is the way we handle people. Gentleness is a character trait that should be found in us. Jesus said that God is honored when we bear fruit (Jn. 15:8). Does the way you handle people honor Him? Do you honor Him in your decision making or is He the last to be consulted when a decision has to be made? Do you honor Him with your substance or is He last on your list of considerations? Are you honoring Him as a man, husband, father, employee, employer?

You can see how many of us need to be reminded that our goal in life as Christians is not to make a living or accumulate wealth or power or fame but to always do what honors and brings glory to God. Does your life inspire others to honor and glorify Him? Can the world really tell that you are a Christian by how you honor the Lord?

College Funding:

Parents Must Start to Save Before Children Start to Talk

By Kola Seriki

For the college freshman-to-be, the first trip to college can be the ultimate in freedom. But with the high cost of college today -and what it is expected to cost in the future - that car ride to the campus is anything but free for the parents.

Most parents plan to foot the bill for tuition, room and board for a four-year degree, but today far fewer are actually able to do it without taking on substantial debt or inconvenience: another mortgage on the house, working second jobs, or cosigning for loans.

The extra effort is often needed because college costs-tuition, room and board-have increased faster than the rate of inflation. A survey by The College Board shows that the average total cost of attending an institute of higher learning increased nearly 10% per year between 1980 and 1990. Inflation, meanwhile, has increased at an annual rate of approximately 5% in the same time period, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Bottom line, income is not keeping pace with increases in college cost.

The Costs

According to the College Board, today the average total cost for a fouryear degree is $60,000 at a private college or university-upwards of $80,000 at many big-name schools -- and $22,000 at a public university. For today's 18-yearolds who will enter college in 1996, four years at a private college will cost an estimated $80,000 and four years at a public college will cost $29,000. College for today's one-year-olds is projected to cost $180,000 at a private school and $65,000 at a public school.

Most families don't have the resources to pay annual college costs directly out of their income. But many of these same families cannot qualify for need-based financial aid because their income is too high - and because, more and more, financial aid comes in the form of a loan rather than a grant.

One answer to this dilemma is longterm college funding to accumulate the large sums of money needed for college ors, the problem of affordable housing, payments. "Start to save before they start for parents today. Starting early also is bigger solution, and voting alone is not month for a one-year-old but $1200 each month for a 15-year-old, assuming a 9% interest rate.

The Tools

College funding generally calls for setting aside funds on a regular basis and putting them into an investment and insurance package. Various tools have been used successfully for college education funding: mutual funds, life insurance, zero coupon bonds, unit investment trusts, and variable annuities. While these are some of the important considerations in college planning, each family must match its children's ambitions with a long-term solution. What college funding requires most is old-fashioned discipline: putting aside money every month.

run," he said. "Because in recent years there have been more, I expect more this year as well. So I wouldn't describe what's going on as a shortage of Black candidates.'

While many in the African American community believe a minority should be sought out, its just as important to use their vote to force white candidates to address issues of importance to the community.

The African American community is politically astute enough to know it's going to take more than electing a Black mayor, for instance, to solve crime and family issues," said the Rev. LeRoy Haynes, pastor of Carter Metropolitan Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

"In cities that have had Black maydrugs, gang violence and poverty still to learn" might be an appropriate slogan exists," he said. "Politics is one part of a much more manageable: about $100 each going to solve all our problems."[MON]

Lease Options vs. Real Estate Property Tax Foreclosures

Many of you have asked my opinion about lease option purchases. Well, today in this column, I shall render my viewed opinion. To begin with, a lease option purchase generally involves two legally binding instruments: lease agreement and future contract of sale. Let's say the owner or seller has agreed to a lease/option monthly payment of $600, of which $100 is to be credited each action with the following example of a property tax (lien) foreclosure. A property becomes two years delinquent in home property taxes and to pull the property out of tax foreclosure would cost $2,400 plus $550 accrued/judgment interest, penalties, attorney fees, and court costs for a total of $2,950. The winning bidder to the property would receive a Sheriff's Deed as Title to the property and is solely responsible for his own title search to see if the property can be acquired free and clear of any title defects. These properties can be previewed prior to the sale.

A book that I've just authored entitled "Distressed Real Estate's Secret Profits" includes a section on how to do your own title search. The book covers pre-foreclosures but not real estate tax lien foreclosures.

Real estate tax lien sales are held in front of the doors to the District Clerk's Office on the first Tuesday of each month at 2:00 p.m. on the first floor of the Dallas County Courthouse, George Allen Building, 600 Commerce Street in Dallas Texas.

month toward a future down payment (if the option is exercised by the buyer at the end of the option period). The owner requires the prospective buyer to place a $1,900 deposit upfront to execute the deal, and the future contract of sale would be $65,000 @ say, 8.25%, 30 yrs. fixed. We'll say also that the instrument created is a 2-year lease with option to purchase (2-year Lease/Option).

Now at the end of two years the buyers would have accumulated $2,400 to be applied toward the down payment to purchase that home; it would be as if the transaction had taken place today on a home that is selling for $65,000 with a $2,400 down payment and balance financed at 8.25% interest for 30 years. On the other hand, if the buyers decide not to exercise their option to purchase they would lose their credit of $2,400 and, no doubt, a portion of their $1,900 deposit.

Compare the above real estate trans-the highest bidder for cash on a "buyer beware" basis and subject to an original. owner's 2-year redemption period. The 2-year redemption allows the original owner(s) the right to redeem the property back within two years if they pay the purchaser the amount he/she paid at the foreclosure sale plus 25% (if the property is redeemed within the first year) or 50% (if the property is redeemed within the second year). So doing the first two years of the new purchasers ownership it would be wise not to do any major improvements to the property (as like a tenant on a lease).

Please see boxed information for my view of the so-called Lease/Option and the Real Estate Tax Lien Property Lease/Purchase.

Making Strides to Finish

By Veronica W. Morgan

Wendy Gonzalez has a courageous spirit. As the founder of the Helen Hardrick Christian School for girls, Mrs. Gonzalez says she is on a mission to help steer young girls to a pathway filled with right choices. And she hopes to equip them with the educational and biblical savvy to make it happen.

"This is what I am suppose to do," asserts Mrs. Gonzalez, president of Wendy Gonzalez Ministries, Inc. "I believe the Lord is calling me to do this. It's not easy, but when you believe in something and you're determined to make it happen, it will."

Mrs. Gonzalez and her husband Pablo, a registered pharmacist, moved to Dallas from Oklahoma with their then. 15-month-old daughter, Jennifer, some

By the time Jennifer turned three years old, the couple had decided to enroll her in a private Christian school. They hoped the environment would allow their daughter a chance to interact with other children and would serve to reinforce positive behavior. But things didn't work out that way.

"I was dissatisfied with the school,"

Mrs. Gonzalez said. "It wasn't what I expected, but I continued to send Jernifer three days a week, for four hours a day, so she could be with the children."

"...the older women are to instruct the younger ones... provide spiritual, academic, social and mental instruction for the students. Our goals are attainable if students understand that they are all sisters in Christ."

-Wendy Sonzalez, founder Helen Hardrick Christian School

On the days Jennifer was in school, Mrs. Gonzalez worked part-time at a local day care center She learned the ins and outs of the business and, during her spare time, devised a business plan to open a Christian nursery.

Mrs. Gonzalez resigned from the day care center and in 1990 opened the Regent Christian Academy. The coed nursery served children from infancy to preschool. More importantly, it afforded Gonzalez the opportunity to provide the type of instruction she desired for her daughter. But still she felt as though something was missing.

"We had discipline and order in the center but I wanted to be able to help the children focus and learn more," she said.

Mrs. Gonzalez began perusing educational material that could provide information and insight she incorporate into the center's program. She attended seminars and researched statistics on the most thriving programs in the country.

During her research, she became interested in the phenomenal success rate of single-sex schools. She contacted officials at the Hockaday school in North Dallas and the National Coalition for Girls association, and requested information.

Things were looking up. Then a major setback occurred in 1994. The academy, located on Pleasant Run in DeSoto, lost its financial backing and was forced to close its doors.

Determined not to be defeated, and armed with years of research material, a unique understanding of the educational field, and a propelling interest to provide her daughter with the best possible education, Mrs. Gonzalez decided to take the step of faith and follow her vision to open the first single-sex school located south of the Trinity.

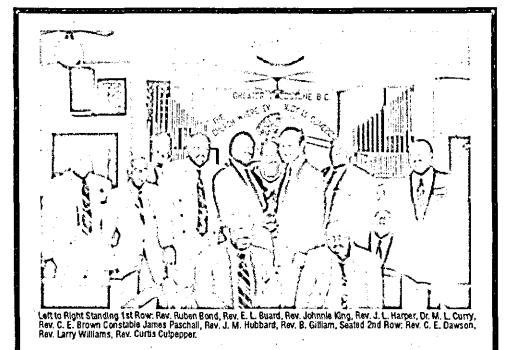

"People want

"People want quality education for their children," said Mrs. Gonzalez. "Why should they have to drive all the way across town to get it."

After two years of planning, Mrs. Gonzalez opened the Helen Hardrick Christian School for girls in Duncanville, later renamed the Jackson-Hardrick School. She is currently seeking nonprofit status for her corporation, and a shift in ownership will reflect in the school carrying the former name of Helen Hardrick Christian School.

The school uses the ABeka curriculum, which provides a biblically sound, nondenominational-type instruction. It also emphasizes the use of phonics for teaching students how to read. Degreed staff provides hands-on instruction in science, arithmetic, history and geography. Dance, drama and French classes are also taught. A gymnastics class is expected to be added in the Fall.

- TSTC graduates are successful. They have a potential of earning an average starting salary of $18,000 to $24,000 annually, which is higher than the average of four-year college graduates. Many graduates start in the upper $20s.
- For the third year TSTC in Waco ranked in the top 10 nationally for colleges producing the largest number of associate degrees in Engineering and Engineering-related technologies.
- TSTC ranked number six in graduating students in Computer and Information Sciences and 19th in Communications Technologies (U.S. Department of Education 1990-91 survey).
- TSTC's Automotive Technology is one of 16 top-rated Toyota schools nationwide, and one of only two in Texas. The automotive department has Automotive Service Excellence (ASE) certification in each of the eight service areas.
- TSTC is the only state-supported technical college system in Texas, with the Waco campus offering more than 40 technical programs, and a 30-year history with more than 26,000 graduates in industry.

On Wednesday mornings, the girls are taught safety tips and ways to avoid being deceived by strangers. Other life situations are discussed during the weekly sessions.

Says Gonzalez: "I believe that the older women are to instruct the younger ones and that's what we try to do here, provide spiritual, academic, social and mental instruction for the students. Our goals are attainable if students understand that they are all sisters in Christ."

Classes. held all year round, are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. After school enrichment classes and early morning drop-off hours are available for parents with conflicting schedules.

Classes are temporarily being held at the Safe Way Baptist Church in Duncanville. Sixteen students are on the roster for the 1995 - '96 school term and by Fall the numbers are expected to triple. Mrs. Gonzalez also plans to add a grade each year until all 12 levels are offered.

"When I have accomplished the goals here, I want to go back to Georgia and do the same thing. I want to open a school for boys," she said. "I have a future son-in-law out there and when I put her (Jennifer's) hand in his for marriage, I want to know that he will be a good provider."

Her future plans include opening a home for abused girls and to begin a trust fund to provide college scholarships for the graduates.

Prior to her interest in starting a girls' school, Mrs. Gonzalez spent 10 years in the Air force. She served as the only African American female on the educational staff at the Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

She has a bachelors degree in business and a masters degree in education. Her original desire was to be an attorney. And perhaps someday she will. As for now, she plans to follow her vision.

"I never thought I would be in education but the Lord had other plans," Mrs. Gonzalez said.

Why single-sex education?

- * Single sex schools contribute to the diversity that is a special feature of American Education.
- * Girls in single-sex schools outperformed girls in coeducational schools.
- * Girls from single sex schools had higher math and science achievement scores.
- Single sex schools are associated with higher self-esteem while students from coeducational schools had higher peer affiliation needs.
- Girls in single sex schools are more likely to study subjects traditionally more popular with the opposite sex.
- * Single sex schools have a higher level of student involvement affiliation, task orientation, and positive competition.
- * Girls' schools provide an important choice and model as we strive to educate our young people for future equality for women and men.
- * Girls' schools have higher levels of order and organization, as well as teacher control.
- * Girls' schools offer the opportunity for girls to be taught with curricular and strategies that work best for girls.
- Girls attending an all-girls' school are

- on equal footing.
- * Girls' schools provide a nurturing environment for girls.
- * Female role models, leadership opportunities, experience in competition, affirmation, and education are all benefits of an all-girls' school.
- * Single-sex schools for African Americans and Hispanics have made a difference in their lives because they emphasize self-determination, self-respect, and academic excellence in every class. Single sex schooling may be the solution to the question of how to teach racial harmony and tolerance in our multi-cultural society.
- Girl's school also seem to be smaller, which helps foster a communal environment.
- * No negative attitudinal results accrue to females attending single-sex schools.
- * Single sex schools attract an oversupply of applicants largely because these institutions have a reputation for academic excellence and their students have a reputation for outstanding accomplishments.-VWM

Plano Lincoln/Mercury: Committed to service

Plano Lincoln Mercury celebrated its fifth anniversary in 1995 by becoming the largest sales volume Lincoln Mercury dealership in the Metroplex. Owned and operated by Paul Kechler, the dealership has a reputation for product marketing, sales growth and customer service innovation.

As vice-chairman of the National Dealership Council, Kechler said his dealership is successful because he never loses focus on delivering customer value. He said: "The consumers expect more than the average buyer, so we have redefined customer value to meet their expectations of top quality, lowest prices, best selection, greatest conveniences and most outstanding service."

The dealership has 92,000 square feet of showroom space and more than 100 service bays on 11 acres of land on West Plano Parkway. The main showroom houses new Lincolns and Mercurys and the Villager minivan.

As the largest sales volume Lincoln Mercury dealership in the Metroplex, the dealership is gearing for 1996 with high expectations. In April they will begin selling the all new "Mountaineer" sports utility vehicle. Kechler said their goal is to dominate the marketplace with this new vehicle just as they have done with the Villager minivan. With already skyrocketing sales, Kechler said, "We will become the nation's sales leader for Lincoln Mercury in 1996.

Plano Lincoln Mercury offers more customer service benefits, an equally great selection of cars and more financing options at lower prices than their super-store competitors.

At this dealership, Kechler said today's smart shopper will find the best vehicle value for their money and their job is to, "make sure we always offer the vehicle selection and financing options necessary to meet their needs." The dealership offers a full range of vehicle purchase options including new cars, program cars, used cars & trucks, and special finance and note vehicles.

Plano Lincoln Mercury is located at 3333 West Plano Parkway and is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Their service hours are 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays and 8 a.m to 6 p.m. on Saturday. The express lube service is open Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call (214) 964-5000.
